

3 1761 07867772 1

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2009 with funding from University of Toronto

T. MACCI PLAVTI

TRINVMVS

London: C. J. CLAY AND SONS,
CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE, AVE MARIA LANE.
Glasgow: 263, ARGYLE STREET.

Leipzig: F. A. BROCKHAUS.
New York: THE MACMILLAN COMPANY.
Bombay: E. SEYMOUR HALE.

T. MACCI PLAVTI
TRINVM MVSVS

WITH AN INTRODUCTION AND NOTES

BY

J. H. GRAY, M.A.

FELLOW AND CLASSICAL LECTURER OF QUEENS' COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

134888
—
23110114

Cambridge:
AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

1897

[All Rights reserved]

PA

6568

T₆

1897 cop. 2

Cambridge:

PRINTED BY J. AND C. F. CLAY, AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

CONTENTS.

	PAGES
PREFACE	vii, viii
INTRODUCTION	ix—xl
TEXT	1—55
NOTES	57—194
INDEX TO NOTES	195—200

PREFACE.

THE Syndics of the University Press asked me to undertake this edition of the Trinummus primarily no doubt because the play is required for a University Examination in 1898. This fact will explain the presence of the more elementary notes, which are most numerous on the earlier portions of the text. The requirements, however, of more advanced students have not been forgotten, and for their benefit references have been given to various standard works. The Text is based on the new Teubner text of Goetz and Schoell (Leipzig 1896), departures from which are more numerous than important. From Goetz and Schoell are also taken the convenient signs, [] to mark letters or words given by the MSS. but not wanted—it is right to say that superfluous letters have not always been retained where the correction seemed to be quite certain and the corruption uninstructional—() to enclose verses that appear to have been foisted into the text; < > to denote letters or words not given by the MSS. but required. Where the words or letters so supplied are purely conjectural they are printed in italics. The mark | calls attention to hiatus, remarkable but not necessarily inadmissible. The Notes are to a very large extent drawn from Brix, either Brix's own third edition (1879) or the fourth edition re-edited by Max Niemeyer (1888). I have found Ussing useful for both Text and Notes, W. Wagner's edition has occasionally proved helpful, the new text of F. Leo (Berlin, 1896) has been consulted throughout and adopted as the standard of reference ; the short notes embodied in his apparatus criticus are almost invariably convincing and luminous. To these books, and especially to Brix, I desire to acknowledge my obligations fully here, because in the Notes names have not been mentioned where the mention could be avoided. The references to standard works will shew sufficiently my obligations to them : I am specially indebted to Mr W. M. Lindsay's Latin Language (Oxford 1894), to which I have referred continually as it is an indispensable book which every classical student may be expected to possess, and to P. Langen's admirable Beiträge zur Kritik und Erklärung des Plautus (Leipzig 1880).

The work of preparing the edition has deepened my convictions on two points. First that, although so much good work has been done upon the play, it is by no means easy, that there are passages on which clearer light is still to seek, certainly that there are problems which I should be sorry to profess to solve. And secondly that the Trinummus is indeed an admirable play, free from all grossness and fit for anyone's perusal, artistic in its conception and careful in its execution. It seems to me very hazardous to place any even of the great plays of Plautus before it in point of interest or merit, and none I think better repays a careful reading.

But the greater the play, the more inadequate my edition is likely to be. I can only say that I shall be grateful to anyone who will help me to remove the errors of many kinds which I can hardly hope to have avoided.

J. H. GRAY.

INTRODUCTION.

- | | |
|-----------------------------------|--|
| 1. Early Roman Comedy. | 7. Metre. |
| 2. Plautus. | 8. The parts of a Roman Comedy, &c. |
| 3. His Works. | 9. Some points of contrast between Greek and Roman Comedy. |
| 4. MSS. of the Text. | 10. The Trinummus. |
| 5. Prosody : | 11. The Prologue. |
| (A) Shortening of Long Syllables. | 12. The Life depicted in the Play. |
| (B) Short Syllables lengthened. | |
| (C) Vowels added and Synizesis. | |
| 6. Hiatus. | |

1. Early Roman Comedy. Roman like Greek Comedy may be traced back to the Harvest, Vintage and other Festivals. 'The joy of harvest' found expression in alternate verses, singer answering singer, at first playful, but gradually becoming so personal and bitter as finally to call for the interference of the law. Hence sprang the uersus Fescennini which are said to derive their name from the South Etrurian town Fescennium. Their metre was the Saturnian, the one national Roman product in matters rhythmical, a mixture of the iambic and trochaic rhythm. The Italian habit of rivals improvising verses always has been, and still is, a favourite entertainment among Italian rustics.

A pestilence at Rome in the consulship of C. Sulpicius Paeticus and C. Licinius Stolo B.C. 364 led to the invitation of Etruscan players (ludiones), who introduced the mimic dance without words but with flute-accompaniment.

From the union of the Etruscan play with the uersus Fescennini arose a species of popular drama, the Satura, which drew its name from the lanx satura, a dish filled with mixed fruits, hence a kind of poetical potpourri, or tutti frutti, and which forms the stepping-stone from the inartistic dramatic forms to the regular drama of Liuius Andronicus. The Satura contained various dramatic representations without any unity of plan—pictures of customs, scenes of popular life &c. It is quite distinct from the burlesque popular comedy, fabulae Atellanae, an Oscan play (Iudicrum Oscum) originating in the Campanian town of Atella and thence transplanted to Rome. These Atellanae possessed a degree of regular plot and dramatic unity, accompanied by fixed invariable characters (Maccus, Pappus, Bucco, Dossennus). The metre in the Songs was Saturnian. In the Atellanae Roman citizens appeared as actores; the Satura was performed by professional players, histriones. At a later date Atellanae were put upon the stage as after-pieces to tragedies, and as such were termed exodia.

The Greek influence upon Roman Literature dates from the First Punic War. Liuius Andronicus (born at Tarentum not later than 284 B.C.—died at an advanced age not before 208 B.C.) was brought to Rome as a prisoner of war after the capture of Tarentum 272. He was first the slave, then the freedman of M. Liuius Salinator, and in 240 B.C., i.e. only 50 years after the death of Menander, when Rome was enjoying the peace that followed the First Punic War (Hor. Epist. II. i. 161), brought out the first play after a Greek original and thereby gave a further impetus to Roman Literature, which was already fast developing in this direction. His activity was devoted to Tragedy rather than Comedy, and his style as a semigraecus was so rough that Cicero's dictum (Cic. Brut. 71) is Liuianae fabulae non satis dignae quae iterum legantur.

He was followed by Cnaeus Naevius (born about 274, died 204) a Campanian who came at an early age to Rome. Naevius, who fought in the First Punic War, sung of it in Saturnian verse. Then, in 235 B.C. according to Gellius (xvii. 21. 44), he brought out plays at Rome—fabulas apud populum dedit. Like the poets of the Old Attic Comedy he made his plays the vehicle of his political feelings and attacked the leading men—the Metelli and Scipiones—with such repeated and violent invective that he was imprisoned and was in confinement when Plautus wrote the Miles gloriosus vv. 212 ff. (about 210 B.C.). He was freed by the tribuni plebis, but was banished and died at Utica 199 B.C. The well-known epitaph written by Naeuius for himself in Saturnians shews his Campana superbia. His Punic War is compared by Cicero (Brut. 75) to the work of the statuary Myron. His dramatic works, of which some fragments survive, were mainly comic—not tragic.

2. Plautus. His great successor Titus Maccius Plautus (T. Maccius, not M. Accius, was proved to be his name by Ritschl from the Ambrosian MS.) devoted his entire attention to Comedy. Of Plautus' life but little is known. He was born at Sarsina—now Sassina—a municipium in Umbria, and so like most great Roman writers, Cicero, Vergil, Horace, Livy, Tacitus, Catullus, Propertius, Terence, Pliny, Martial, &c., was a provincial by birth. He came to Rome as a boy, was known there as Plautus, a name according to Festus (p. 239 M.) derived from a peculiarity of the feet, as the Umbrians called a flat-footed man Plotus or Plautus. Thus Plautus is one of the many nick-names that became hereditary cognomina, as Scaeuola, Cursor, &c. He found employment as an assistant to the stage-carpenters and scene-painters¹ (artifices scenici), made some money, which he lost in foreign trade, returned poor to Rome and hired himself to a miller (pistor), and in this position wrote his first three pieces for the stage. If we allow time for these experiences we cannot make him less than 30 when he began to write. As further he was a contemporary, like Naeuius, of the two Scipios, and is regularly coupled with them and Naeuius, we must assume that he began to write a good many years before their death 212. We may then place the beginning of his literary activity about 224 and his birth not later than 254 B.C. This will agree with the data we get from Cicero, viz. that he had already written many pieces in 197 (Cic. Brut. 72), and that he wrote the Pseudolus and Truculentus as senex (Cic. Cato M. 50). The Pseudolus belongs apparently to 191 B.C., and Plautus to be called senex must then have been not less than 60 years of age. He died (Cic. Brut. 60) 184 B.C. Thus his literary activity includes the whole period of the Second Punic War and the time of Rome's triumph after it.

¹ This is the common view. But F. Leo (Plautinische Forschungen, p. 65) is probably right in arguing that Plautus was not a stage-assistant but an actor.

His life presents nothing but hard work, poverty, and misfortune—a curious contrast to Terence with the favour and support of the great. Popular as his pieces were in the author's lifetime he gained his full recognition only after death—especially from the death of Terence to nearly the end of the Republic—and his pieces still kept the stage after the establishment of the Empire.

3. His works. We know little of Plautus' outer life, as little of his inner life, of the training and equipment he had for his literary work, nothing of his relations to his contemporaries Naevius and Ennius, and to the art-world of his day. His attitude to his Greek originals we can determine. The Roman playwright who adapted for the Roman stage had two courses open to him. He might model his play to suit Roman life, altering the scene, the customs, the names, the dress and so forth, giving a Roman tone and colouring to the whole. Or he might with the Greek plot keep the Greek customs, places, life and characters portrayed by the Greek author. If he adopted the former course the play was known as fabula togata—from the toga, the Roman national dress, which would in that case be worn by the actors. If he chose the latter plan, his play was a fabula palliata, so called from the Greek dress (pallium = χλαμύς) which his actors wore. Plautus' plays were fabulae palliatae. (The writers of togatae were later, and generally represented Italian provincial life. The strict police supervision and prohibition of politics or personalities made palliatae easier to write and exhibit than togatae.) His originals were not the plays of the Old Attic Comedy (480—370 B.C.), political and personal, not the transitional Middle Comedy (370—320 B.C.), but the New Comedy of life and manners (320—250 B.C.). The Old Comedy was in truth an exceptional Attic product, which did not last long, and was incapable of reproduction save in a democracy like the Athenian. The New Comedy from its simplicity, its interest depending on character-sketching, exciting situations and developments, was specially suitable for transplantation from Athens to Rome. The brilliant period of the New Comedy at Athens was the half-century that followed the death of Alexander the Great, its great lights were Menander, Philemon, Diphilus. As we have seen, Liuius Andronicus introduced this Comedy at Rome first 240 B.C., was followed by Naeuius who like him wrote Tragedies also; then came Plautus, Caecilius, and Terentius who exclusively devoted themselves to comoedia palliata. In fruitfulness of production, independent use of his Greek originals, power of language, lively delineation of character, readiness and wit, Plautus stands first of all the Roman comedians¹.

Gellius (III. 3) states that 130 pieces passed under Plautus' name. Seruius says in the introduction to his Commentary on the Aeneid—'Plautus is said by some to have written 21 plays, by others 40, by others 100.' The large numbers in these estimates no doubt include some early plays by unknown authors under the name of Plautus. Varro, who first treated the subject in anything of a critical spirit, enumerates 21 plays as ascribed to Plautus in all the lists (indices), all of which we possess except the Vidularia, which was lost between the 6th and 11th centuries A.D. These are the Fabulae Varronianae. In a second class Varro places the plays which were set down to Plautus in most of the lists. This class probably included 19, which with the 21 undoubted comedies would give the 40 of Seruius' second estimate. Outside the 21 undisputed plays we know the titles only of 32. The extant plays are given in the ordinary MSS. in the following order: Amphitruo, Asinaria, Aulularia, Captiui, Curculio, Casina, Cistellaria, Epidicus, Bacchides, Mostellaria, Menaechmi, Miles Gloriosus, Mercator, Pseudolus, Poenulus, Persa, Rudens, Stichus, Trinummus, Truculentus. This order is alphabetical but takes account only of the initial letter in the titles; the one case where the initial letter is neglected

¹ See Warr's Teuffel, Vol. I., p. 141.

—the Bacchides—is to be explained by the fact that an allusion in the Bacchides shews it to be a later play than the Epidicus, hence it is placed after the Epidicus in the list. Needless to say these do not all possess the same merit, and are not to be ranked in the same class. Brix calls six (Aulularia, Captiui, Bacchides, Menaechmi, Pseudolus, Trinummus) first-rate—but there is much to be said against the exclusion of several others, e.g. Mostellaria and Miles, from the highest rank. The text of all has not reached us quite complete. There are gaps—greater or less—in Amphitruo, Cistellaria, Stichus—the beginning of the Bacchides and the end of the Aulularia are lost: the Casina and the Truculentus have suffered the worst corruptions; others, Epidicus, Mercator, Persa, Stichus, are supposed to shew signs of a double recension. The plays are not merely amusing; though Plautus is no moralist, the moral is combined with the comic element, and the Captiui and Trinummus for example handle fine psychological problems. What then must have been the influence of a great poet, who wrote perhaps 40 plays, and whose writing extended over some 40 years, upon the good humour and good sense of Rome? Great Roman authorities like Varro and Cicero have placed Plautus very high. Horace alone (A. P. 270, Epist. II. i. 170) expresses himself unfavourably about Plautini numeri and sales, and this unfavourable verdict is to a great extent to be explained by the wide difference between the Prosody and Metre of the two writers.

The originals of Plautus were the Attic writers of the New Comedy. The Trinummus was based upon the Θησαυρός of Philemon, the Mostellaria upon his Φάσμα. From the Ἔμπορος of Philemon came the Mercator, from his Κληρούμενοι the Casina. The Rudens is drawn from a play of Diphilus, the Asinaria from the Ὀναγός of Demophilus. From the great poet of the New Comedy, Menander, come the Bacchides (Δις ἐξαπατῶν), Poenulus (Καρχηδόνιος) and Cistellaria. It must not be supposed that in any case Plautus merely translated. The phrase 'Latine uertit Maccius' of the Prologues means 'gave the play its Latin dress'; the version was very free, the poet did not scruple to depart from his original, or to introduce many allusions to Roman customs, events, laws, places and men, which shew how little he was tied by the fact that he had an original before him. The Greek framework is largely filled with pictures taken from the Roman life around him. The modern parallel would be not the German translations of Shakspeare, but the Comedies constantly produced in England 'after the French,' where the difference between French and English taste on many points necessitates often a very wide departure from and extensive modification of the French playwright's work¹. The delicate handling of Terence represents much more closely the style of Menander.

4. Text. The text of Plautus depends on MSS. of three classes. In the first class stands a single MS. A, the famous Ambrosian Palimpsest—the oldest Latin MS. extant—now in the Ambrosian Library at Milan. It is dated as belonging to the 4th or 5th cent., but the codex was separated and written over by a monkish scribe in the 7th or 8th cent., and now there survives about a third part of the leaves with the original Plautine text under the Vulgate of the monk. Imperfect and difficult to decipher as even this remnant is, it is of supreme importance for the text of Plautus. Nothing is left of the Amphitruo, Asinaria, Aulularia, Curculio, little of the Captivi, Cistellaria, Vidularia; of the other plays altogether about half is extant, but in different proportions, so that of the Pseudolus and Stichus little is wanting; less than half is lost of Casina, Persa, Poenulus; about half of Epidicus and Trinummus; more than half of the Bacchides, Mostellaria, Menaechmi, Mercator, Miles Gloriosus, Rudens, Truculentus. The MS. was discovered by Cardinal Mai 1815—an Apograph has been published by W. Studemund.

In the second class fall four MSS. proceeding from one source: (1) Vetus Codex of Camerarius (Joachim Camerarius 1558) of the 11th cent., formerly in the Palatine Library at Heidelberg, since 1622 in the Vatican Library at Rome. It contains all 20 plays, and is referred to after Ritschl as B.

¹ See a somewhat different view in Warr's Teuffel, Vol. I., pp. 142-4. But F. Leo, Plautinische Forschungen pp. 85 and 91, agrees with the view given in the text.

(2) Codex alter of Camerarius, usually described as Decurtatus and marked C (11th cent.). It contains the last 12 plays, was at Heidelberg and Rome with B, but was taken to Paris 1797, and at the French Restoration to Heidelberg.

(3) Ursinianus or Vaticanus—11th or 12th cent.—contains like C, which it closely resembles, the last 12 plays with Amphitruo, Asinaria, Aulularia, and half the Captivi. This MS. was brought from Germany to Rome in the possession of Cardinal Orsini, 1429, and from it first the last 12 plays became known—the first 8 had been known and copied uninterruptedly. It is referred to as D.

(4) Codex J, in the British Museum, assigned by Ritschl to the 11th cent., containing the first eight plays. Its value is disputed. Goetz pronounces it to be important, though very carelessly written. With this may be classed E, a MS. of the 13th cent. belonging to Ritschl, containing like J only the first eight plays.

These MSS. proceed from one special recension of the text, and are known as the Palatine text.

MSS. of the third class resemble E and J in the first eight, D in the last 12 plays. They are late in date—15th cent.—and unimportant for the criticism of the text. F is used to represent Codex Lipsiensis—15th cent.—belonging to the University of Leipzig; V the 12th cent. Leyden MS.; Z the editio princeps by G. Merula, Venice 1472.

5. Prosody. Our notions on the scansion of Latin are derived from Horace, Vergil and Ovid. But their standard, framed upon Greek models, was impossible for a writer living at the time of Plautus. Plautus followed like all early scenic poets the custom of popular speech in the measuring and reckoning of syllables, and generally in questions of scansion and prosody. The new tendency commences—in Plautus' lifetime—with the introduction by Ennius of the Greek Hexameter. Hence there arose for the hexameter a system of rules and a degree of correctness which sharply separated syllables and assigned them their unvarying metrical length and value. But with the Iambic and the Trochee of dramatic poetry the case was different, not only with Plautus, but with Ennius himself, Terence, Accius and Pacuvius. Catullus and Horace first applied to the Iambic metre the Greek rule strictly observed in the Hexameter.

The Plautine measurement of syllables thus naturally corresponds to the looseness of popular usage. The sharp rules for lengthening by position and fixed length had not yet been introduced. But it is by no means always possible to explain in all cases the popular usage followed. Thus ferēntarius, sedēntarius are scanned with the second syllable short. Probably this is because the n was scarcely sounded, but it may have been that a syllable was slurred.

Cicero, Orat. 161, discusses the weak sound of final s, and quotes instances from Lucilius, &c., to shew how it was neglected. Only poetae novi found it a stumbling-block. He himself pronounced maximus maximu' in his youth. Thus in Plautus, even in the 6th foot of the Senarius, which is always a pure iambus, and at the close of an iambic Tetrameter acatalectic (=not a syllable short, i.e. with 8 feet), and trochaic Tetrameter catalectic (=a syllable short, i.e. with $7\frac{1}{2}$ feet), s is not counted. Hence such terminations as commonitūs sum, saluōs sis, estīs nunc, occidistīs me, &c.¹

Similarly a mute before a liquid does not affect the length of the syllable, so that agros, libros, duplex, &c. are not spondees but iambs.

We may note the following general principles of Plautine prosody.

A. Shortening of long syllables.

The most noteworthy cases are those in which words which we should naturally scan as iambs (~ -) become pyrrhic (~ ~). When the accent or emphasis of pronunciation falls upon the short first syllable, the second syllable instead of being long is reckoned as short, probably because in popular pronunciation the long unemphasised syllable was found heavy and inconvenient. Thus we get dómĭ, bónĭs, fórĭs,—a number of imperatives ténĕ, ábĭ, úfdĕ, &c. Such words Ennius brought back to their iambic scansion, and only left the short scansion in such cases as bene, male ; the variable scansion in such as mihi, tibi, sibi, ubi, uolo, &c. This shortening by which iambic words become pyrrhics is known as the Breues Breuiantes Law, see Lindsay, Latin Language, p. 210. The words most affected are those ending in a long vowel, which are in conversation closely joined with a following word, e.g. uolŏ-scire, abĭ-rus, domĭ-restat, &c.

¹ Lindsay, L. L., p. 108.

The regular rule in later Latin is that two consonants—except a mute before a liquid—render a preceding vowel long by position. Double letters in Plautus do not lengthen a vowel—especially ll. Ille, illic frequently have the first syllable short. This is specially frequent if a short monosyllable precedes (Müller, Prosod. p. 330, would confine the usage to these cases). But ll is neglected in cauĭllator, simĭllimae, satĕllites, puĕlla, &c. Ll in late Latin, as in modern Romance languages, had an obscure sound. Probably this was so in early Latin and ll was only really sounded in the Augustan age. The writing of double consonants was introduced by Ennius.

The same is found with the other liquids, ānnona, ĭnmortales, ĭrridiculo—before ss, dedĭsse, necĕsse, ĕsse.

Position is also neglected before double mutes. Ėcce is a common case. So words compounded with it, ĕccum, ĕccam. So also ĕcquis, quĕcquid, āccepisti, ŏccasio, ŏcculto, sagĭtta, ādde, rĕdde, &c.

m at the end of a word was more weakly sounded than at the beginning or in the middle of a word¹. It did not prevent hiatus or the blending of vowels on either side of it by synaloephe. Final m is frequently omitted in old inscriptions till 130 B.C. Even before consonants m does not lengthen its syllable, hence before a word beginning with a consonant, enĭm, quidēm, parūm. Similarly in the middle of a word, nēmpe, ōmnis.

¹ See Pronunciation of Latin in the Augustan Period (Camb. Phil. Soc.), p. 5 note, Lindsay, L. L., p. 61.

Final s was in much the same case. It was omitted in verbs before ne interrogative—rogaⁿ=roga^{sne}, iubeⁿ=iube^{sne}, uideⁿ=uide^{sne}, &c.¹

But magis, mage, potis, pote (like amaris, amare in the 2nd sing. pass.) are distinct forms. The longer forms magis and potis are often written when, before another consonant, position is neglected and the last syllable scanned short. So nimīs, satīs, minūs, priūs, manūs, erīs, before consonants.

Similarly s with mute consonants does not make position, sp, sc, st, quiēsce, harūspex, Diēspiter—ēst, adēst, potēst, ēstis—īste, īstic, īstuc, ōstēdo, uenūstāte—even with an r following, magīstrātus, minīstrāre, fēnēstra.

Greek words with ζ were written in the time of Plautus in Latin with s or ss. Hence tarpēsita (even if we write it with the MSS. tarpezita).

x was written for cs but position was neglected, ēx, ēxērcitus, senēx, ūxor.

ps does not necessarily lengthen a preceding vowel, īpse, ābs, ābscessi, ābstulisti, &c.

Like m, n followed by a consonant need not lengthen its syllable, tamēn, in compounded with verbs, &c., īncēdere, īngēnium, īndīligenter, īnprūdēns. So n is neglected in itān tandem, uidēn scelestus, &c.

Nor need a vowel followed by nt be long, whether in 3rd pl. in verbs, dēcēnt, stūdēnt, sólēnt, or elsewhere, īntus, īnterea, īuuēntus. So ānte once Capt. 243, īnde, ūnde frequently.

r final does not help to make a vowel long by position—nor always in the middle of a word, ērgo, ārgentum, hēcle, ōrnatus.

Hic in all its cases and forms that end in c can be short, at least when a short monosyllable precedes, quīs hāēc est, sed quid hūc, quid hūnc sollicitas.

d and t are neglected in ētsi, tamētsi, ut, at, ad, id, apud (indeed apud makes position only with monosyllabic personal pronouns as apúd me, apúd uos), in 3rd sing. of verbs before a consonant. Thus ualĕt pugilice. Hence átque.

¹ See Leo, Plautinische Forschungen, chap. 5.

Brix points out that this shortening process only takes place when the accent precedes the shortened syllable. Thus ténĕ, but cóntinĕ. And if there is a pause after such words, so that the last syllable must be more emphasised than it would otherwise be, the word usually has its proper length; uenī, iubē, pauē, &c.

He confines shortening generally to syllables that precede and follow that on which the accent falls.

In this Brix follows Corssen. Ussing denies that the accent has any such force in Plautus. He considers that a long syllable following a short is shortened by assimilation. Whatever the explanation, at least the fact remains (1) that the shortened syllable must stand after a short one and is always next—whether next before or next after—the accent, (2) that the shortening is most frequent in forms properly iambic, and in longer words and combinations of words that commence with an iambus. The combinations of words where this shortening takes place commence with a monosyllable, or a dissyllable with the second vowel elided, followed by a syllable properly long, e.g. quód ĩn manu, ábi ĩn malam rem, égo óbsonabo, &c.¹

This shortening process depends entirely upon popular pronunciation, which it reflects. It is not a poetic licence, not dependent upon the laws of metre.

The shortening of finals properly long must have been helped by the influence of the expiratory accent in Early Latin.

B. Lengthening of short syllables.

Plautus keeps long or makes long a number of terminations that became regularly short by the time of the Augustan poets.

Thus es (sum) is regularly long in Comedy.

So often the termination ōr in comparatives, as auctiōr, substantives, amōr, verbs, fateōr, particles, ecastōr.

He keeps long, where it suits him, conjugation-endings in s and t, as erīs, egēt, especially in the subjunctive, sīt, fuāt, uelīt, in the perf. uixīt, fuīt, and the exact-future adduxerīt.

¹ See also Iwan von Müller, Handbuch, Zweiter Band (2nd edit.), p. 823.

Third-declension ablatives are often long when written e, as well as when written i, e.g. retē, carnē, ordinē, militē.

Ego has ō often—mihī, tibī, sibī often, modō sometimes, immō always.

As might be expected there is some licence in dealing with Greek words. Acheruns is scanned with the first syllable long. Therapontigonus, Curc. 430, has the second syllable long. trapezita often has the first syllable long—perhaps we should in such cases with Ritschl write tarpessita.

Greek proper names with ll are sometimes shortened, as Cāllicles. Adjectives properly in aeus (= Greek -aios which is sometimes -aios) can be written eus and scanned ēus, and schema=σχῆμα is in Amph. 117 schēma.

C. Vowels added and Synizesis.

In the pronunciation of words Plautus and his contemporaries at times (a) add a vowel for ease of pronunciation—especially in new formations from the Greek, (b) subtract a syllable by synizesis.

a. (1) Thus u is added before l and m, i before n, when these liquids follow k, p, t, m. In some words this inserted vowel has held its place at later periods of the language, e.g. Aesculapius (Ἀσκληπίος), Hercules (Ἡρακλῆς). Others in Plautus are Alcumena, Tecumessa, drachuma, Procina, Cucinus (κύκνος), techina (τέχνη), gymnasium (γυμνάσιον), and mina which survived. This process is known as anaptyxis and the parasitic vowel as svarabhakti.

In true Latin words, as fautores for fautores, purigare for purgare, iurigare for iurgare, discipulina for disciplina, extempulo for extemplo, the vowels are not 'inserted' but original. See on this I. Müller, Hdb. ii². p. 277, Lindsay, L. L., p. 145 ff.

(2) But in neuter nouns, especially in -culum (-clum), before suffixes beginning with m and n, and adjectives ending in -us, the short (original) form is commoner than the long form in Plautus. Such are uinclum, periclum, saeclum, uehiclum; tegmen, lamna, domnus; caldus, soldus, ualde.

Less common instances of the original shorter form are postus (positus), poplus (populus), manuplares (manipulares).

Verbs which shew an omission of the root vowel are surgo, pergo (porgo) and surpio for surripio.

With adjectives ending in -er Plautus more usually writes the longer form—dextera is more usual than dextra. But he often has dextrouorsum, and apparently altra, altrum, for altera, alterum.

The short form is very common in 2nd per. sing. of so-called perf., and in so-called perf. inf., e.g. dixti, duxti, uinxti, pinxti, uexti, misti, scripsti, accepsti, dixe, duxe, uexe, spexe, traxe, intellexe, &c. Dixisti, duxisti, &c. are of later origin.

b. meus, tuŏs, suŏs (not tuus, suus), deus are scanned as monosyllables. So quoius, quoi, huius, huic, rei, dies, diu, fui, trium, duas, ais, ain, ait, eo, eam, eas, eat, eant, &c.

The trisyllabic forms of meus, tuŏs, suŏs, deus, &c. are dissyllabic. So duorum, duellum, fuisti, fuisse, puella, diebus, &c. Diutius and exeundum are trisyllabic.

The vowels are regularly run together in proin, proinde, dein, deinde, dehinc, deerrare, dehortari, deosculari, and deesse.

To the same principle we may assign a number of shortened case-forms, is for iis, isdem for iisdem, and verb-forms exit, redit (perf.), aibam, aibas, and so on.

6. Hiatus. The general attitude of Latin to hiatus is given by Cicero Orat. 150, 'Quod quidem Latina lingua sic observat, nemo ut tam rusticus sit, qui uocales nolit coniungere.' Greek allowed hiatus, but 'nobis, ne si cupiamus quidem, distrahere¹ uoces conceditur.' Then, after quoting examples of hiatus from Naeuius and Ennius, he concludes 'hoc idem nostri saepius non tulissent.' Quintilian also (IX. 4. 33) disapproves 'uocalium concursum, quod cum accidit, hiat et intersistit² et quasi laborat oratio.'

In Plautus, as his text has reached us, hiatus occurs between two words closely connected—a preposition and its noun, a pair of nouns, a noun and its verb, an adjective and its noun, &c., de ea, octo hominum, gratiam habeo, tuam amicam, eri imperia.

¹ distrahere = to leave an hiatus)(contrahere.

² intersistit = comes to a standstill.

But hiatus is practically confined to cases when there is a pause in metre or in sense which at least tones down the harshness. Thus there may be hiatus at the caesura. Most frequently where hiatus occurs there is a pause in both sense and metre, and, even where these double pauses coincide, in an overwhelming number of cases there is no hiatus, e.g. when one speaker leaves a line unfinished and another takes it up hiatus is rare.

Hiatus most frequently accompanies breaks in sense when they are considerable, especially if there is a change of speakers.

Most frequently hiatus is met with in the case of monosyllables with a long vowel (pro, de, &c.) or a short vowel if the word ends with m (nam, cum) in cases like quae ego, qui in, nam ego, ne ego, qui homo, di ament, cum Alcumena, quam ob rem, qui obuiam.

Cases of hiatus are pretty frequent before homo, in, nom. gen. dat. acc., flagitium hominis, quoi homini, esse hominem. Bergk and Corssen in these cases would write homōnis, homōni, homōnem.

There is a similar hiatus before habeo, gratiam habeo; hic, tu hunc, tu hoc, quoi haec, qua huc, and other words beginning with h.

As might be expected hiatus is allowed in interjections, especially after the monosyllables o, au, ah, eu, heu, em—and with vocatives.

Generally it may be laid down that hiatus is permitted (1) after monosyllables, (2) after dissyllables which scan as pyrrhics whether the last syllable is naturally short or shortened, (3) after words of more than two syllables 'perrarum esse hiatum nec sine excusatione ferendum' (Ussing, p. 224 q.v.).

It will be understood that the lines are quite distinct one from another, and that a vowel at the end of one verse followed by another at the beginning of the next does not make an hiatus.

7. Metre. For an account of the Plautine Metres see Ussing, pp. 174—192; with Christ, Metrik der Griechen und Römer; Klotz, Grundzüge altrömischer Metrik; Müller, Plautinische Prosodie; Spengel, Reformvorschläge, and other standard works.

Short notes on the chief metres only are here given.

The Iambic Senarius is the regular metre of dialogue, where there is no excitement, but calm straightforward narrative. Greek Iambics have accustomed us to the idea that the 2nd, 4th and 6th feet, which mark the metre, must be pure [~ -]. But the Latin poets admitted spondees [- -], and even anapaests [~ ~ -], not only in the 1st, 3rd and 5th, but also in the 2nd and 4th feet. The 6th foot only must necessarily be a pure iambus. The verse seldom ends with two iambs. Diomedes asserts that tragic poets always wrote a spondee in the 5th foot.

There is no objection to dactyls [- ~ ~] provided there are not too many, and a dactyl is seldom followed by an anapaest.

Most licence is allowed in the first foot, where a proceleusmatic [~ ~ ~ ~], a bacchic [- - ~], or a cretic [- ~ -] is sometimes found.

Penthemimeral is more common than hephthemimeral caesura. Hiatus is most common at the caesura.

The Trochaic Septenarius (tetrameter trochaicus catalecticus) was employed when the speech was important or excited, and is used by Plautus with great effect. There is a diaeresis after the 4th foot which should coincide with the end of a word. This is occasionally neglected. A tribrach [~ ~ ~] can be substituted for a trochee [- ~], except in the 7th foot where it is rare—a spondee can be used not only in 2nd, 4th and 6th (as in Greek), but in 1st, 3rd and 5th.

The Latin admitted a dactyl instead of a spondee, save in the 4th foot, where it is rare. A dactyl is most common in the first foot.

The Iambic Septenarius (tetrameter iambicus catalectic) is a favourite comic metre. The treatment is the same as that of the Senarius, except that, as there is a diaeresis after the 4th foot, that foot and the 7th ought to be pure. But tribrachs, spondees and dactyls are found in the 7th foot.

Octonarii, iambic and trochaic (i.e. tetrametri acatalectici), are used by Latin Comedians in highly excited scenes where great bustle and haste are intended to be expressed. This is an innovation, for Greek writers do not use these metres. The diaeresis after the 4th foot is more often neglected in octonarii than in septenarii. Trisyllabic feet are found in the 4th place, the 8th foot is pure.

When the excitement has passed the octonarii usually pass into another and quieter metre, generally trochaic septenarii.

A system of octonarii is terminated by a clausula (short verse) of kindred metre, i.e. an iambic system will finish with iambs, a trochaic with trochees.

Similar short lines are sometimes prefixed to systems.

Trochaic octonarii are seldom long-continued.

Anapaests (generally acatalectic) are used by Plautus with considerable licence. Thus a dactyl is followed by an anapaest, and a proceleusmatic substituted for an anapaest. The anapaestic metre was difficult to observe accurately in Latin.

Other metres are Cretic [---], Paeonic [---- or ----] (a cretic is often substituted for a paeonic—a choriambus [----] is admitted), Bacchiac, tetrameter and trimeter, and mixed metres in Cantica, for which see the authorities given above.

Terence may have a more artistic mastery than Plautus of the ordinary metre of the dialogue. He cannot approach him in facility of adapting and varying his metres, 'his numeri innumeri, to the animated moods and lively fancies of his characters' (Sellar).

8. The Parts of a Roman Comedy, &c. (a) The separate parts of a Roman comedy are Prologus, Diuerbium, and Canticum. The Prologue is defined by Aristotle (Poet. 12) to be all that precedes the entrance of the Chorus. In Roman Comedy a Prologue, where there was one, served two purposes: (1) it placed the audience in possession of the plot so far as was necessary, told them the provenance of the play and so forth, (2) it took the place to some extent of the παράβασις in the Old Greek Comedy, and gave the poet an opportunity of expressing his views to the audience and asking their favour. The Bacchides, Epidicus, Mostellaria, Persa, Stichus have no Prologue, and the Prologues now prefixed to Plautine plays

(e.g. Amphitruo, Casina, Menaechmi, Pseudolus) are post-Plautine. In any case the Prologue is no part of the play proper. It merely does what the modern programme or play-bill now serves to do. It was not spoken by one of the characters, but by an actor dressed for the purpose (ornatu prologi).

The constituent parts proper, then, of the play are the dialogue (diuerbium, or deuerbium as some write it) and the cantica. A canticum proper was a lyrical monologue (μονωδία) accompanied by the flute, and delivered with appropriate gesture. A change of metre represented a change of feeling. Hence the metres are very varied and the rhythms very lively. In a wider sense under the cantica are included the scenes written in trochaic Septenarii declaimed with musical accompaniment—what we should call recitative. All iambic scenes are included as diuerbia. They had no musical accompaniment, and include all the quiet parts of the play, the ordinary narrative and dialogue, as distinguished from the excited and high-wrought scenes.

This distinction is sometimes marked in MSS. by the letters C and DV¹, which indicate the musical and non-musical portions, as Canticum and Diuerbium.

The Tibicen served two purposes: (1) he filled up the short intervals during which the stage was vacant, (2) he furnished an accompaniment to all cantica, including both the cantica proper and the trochaic scenes.

(b) The Greek rule which required—with some exceptions—that there should not be more than three actors on the stage at once, or employed in a play, was not observed in Roman Comedy. Often five actors are necessary. In only two of the extant plays of Plautus, Cistellaria and Stichus, both of which are incomplete, would three actors be sufficient. The Captiui, Epidicus, Mercator, Pseudolus require at least four; ten of the plays demand at least five performers, the Poenulus and Rudens need six. Ritschl conjectures seven in the Trinummus. Nor did the Roman comedians guard against scenes in which more than three characters spoke. On this see F. Schmidt (Zahl der Schauspieler bei Plautus und Terentius).

¹ These marks given in the Palatine text are not older than the Arguments. DV for diuerbium is like P.F. = praefectus, d.d. = dedicare, q.d. = quondam, which are scarcely to be found in inscriptions before the 2nd century.

(c) The division of the play into Acts has been retained for convenience, not because it was the original arrangement. The law which prescribes that all plays should contain five Acts and no more was unknown to the Greeks. Aristotle (Poet. 12) gives as the constituent parts of a tragedy πρόλογος, ἐπεισόδιον, ἐξοδος, χορικόν. The number of ἐπεισόδια depends upon the number of στάσιμα by which they are divided, and differs in different plays. Thus, if we reckon πρόλογος and ἐξοδος as Acts, there will be five Acts in the Prometheus Vinctus, Septem c. Thebas, Agamemnon, Choephoroi, Eumenides; but four in Euripides' Supplikes, Heracleidae, Iphigeneia in Tauris, Rhesus; six in Sophocles' Ajax and Oedipus Tyrannus; seven in Sophocles' Antigone, and in Euripides' Medea and Hercules Furens.

The law is Alexandrine and is undoubtedly observed in post-Alexandrine writers. But the Roman comedians knew nothing of the division into Acts, nor of any fixed number of Acts, nor do their MSS. shew any trace of such a division. Horace (A. P. 189) first speaks directly of the regular five Acts, and critics, e.g. Donatus, frequently complain of the difficulty of dividing the existing plays into Acts.

On the other hand the division into scenes is regularly found in the MSS. of Plautus and Terence, and the names of the characters speaking in each are given as headings (tituli).

The intervals between the scenes were filled up by the orchestra, especially by a favourite tibicen, or by the choragus. There is no change of scenery in the Plautine plays, and save for these short pauses filled up by simple music the play goes right on from the lowering of the curtain at the commencement to the raising at the close.

9. Some Points of Contrast between Greek and Roman Comedy. The Old Attic Comedy was a passing phase and could never have been a permanent type. It was personal and political. Its end was political satire. Such comedy could exist only under democracy. It rose with the democracy and it fell with the democracy. Even while it flourished Crates wrote plays more analogous to the original (Sicilian) type. But the decay of the Old Comedy was no sudden thing. We may trace the process of disintegration in the later plays of Aristophanes himself. Thus in the Plutus, which, as it stands, is a play of the Middle Comedy, there is no Parabasis, and the Chorus is magni nominis umbra. When we hear further that it became very difficult to get people to undertake the large expenses the Chorus entailed, it is evident that its complete disappearance was only a question of time.

Hence in the New Comedy we expect to find neither (1) political satire, nor (2) a Chorus. The New Comedy is almost wholly social—it is the comedy of life and manners, in the sense in which we now understand the word. And these are the topics upon which Roman Comedy was based.

The Romans took over the Greek Theatre as a whole. But their stage, a mere temporary platform (pulpitum), was more limited in its resources. The scenery represented a fixed exterior—a street with houses at the back and a narrow lane (angiportum) between them. The frontage of the stage was great—some authorities say 180 feet. Hence the scenes (e.g. the opening of the Epidicus) where slaves hurry across the stage, for owing to its length the audience could keep them in sight for some time. The doors of the buildings at the back opened outwards on to the stage. A character coming out often talks with others inside. And, as the stage represents an exterior, no interior is shewn. All meetings and conversations must take place in the street. The Greek Orchestra has disappeared and the space thus made vacant is filled with the best seats.

The Chorus of the Old Greek Comedy has also disappeared, and thus the lyric element proper is lost. The Chorus was the bond of union in the ancient drama, the basis of its structure as an alternation of odes and episodes. But New Comedy and Roman Comedy consisted of a series of scenes, which rapidly succeeded one another. Any interval was filled up with simple music.

Yet the lyric element has not disappeared. For (a) The moral reflections concentrated in the Greek Choral Odes are now scattered throughout the play, or assigned to some characters of a moralising turn of mind. And these reflections are expressed in lyric metres. (b) Again the soliloquy assumes a prominent place. And to these two partial methods of replacing the Chorus we may add a third. (c) Its general function has been to some extent undertaken by the Prologue and the Epilogue.

There is another duty of the Greek Chorus which is performed by the Prologue, viz., that by which in the Parabasis the Chorus addressed the audience in the poet's name, e.g. the Prologue of the Captiui asserts the high moral tone of the play, much as does the Parabasis of the Clouds.

But, to go back to the lyric element, the Greek Chorus has left a permanent mark on Comedy in the variety of the metres employed. The metres of Plautus are not less numerous than those of Aristophanes. And they give variety, emphasis and clearness to the whole play. A change of feeling is accompanied by a change of metre. Lyrics in Roman Comedy are 'the medium for the exceptional': accelerated rhythm is used for any scene of emotion or excitement: the ordinary blank verse (iambi) for quiet scenes where the action is in a state of rest.

The Greek Comedy allowed incidental effects. Such are the scenes in the Birds and the Clouds, where a number of persons are brought in for a moment simply for the moment's laugh. The Frogs may be said to have an under-plot. At first we are interested mainly in Xanthias, but when the plot proper begins we hear no more of him. The Roman authors went further than this. They worked two plots together. And sometimes to get two plots they combined two Greek plays (contaminatio). The favourite characters to create this double interest are the parasite and the cunning slave. Indeed very few Roman comedies are content with a single plot. And the interest is heightened in various ways, by doubling the characters and contrasting them, by elevating subordinate into independent characters, by pourtraying the fortunes of the servants no less than those of their masters, and so forth. Thus we are coming to the Shaksperian conception of plot—‘the weaving of distinct stories into one common dramatic pattern.’ See on this Mr R. G. Moulton’s Ancient Classical Drama, on which the above notes are mainly based.

10. The Trinummus. (1) The Trinummus is based upon the Θησαυρός of Philemon (c. 330—262 B.C.), perhaps the greatest Athenian favourite among the poets of the New Attic Comedy.

Plautus is fond of Philemon as a model. The Mercator is drawn from Philemon’s Ἐμπορος, the Mostellaria from his Φάσμα, the Casina from his Κληρούμενοι.

But in this as in other plays it would be a great mistake to regard Plautus as a mere translator. The only fragment of the Θησαυρός cited by Athenaeus (IX. 385 e) οὐκ ἔστ’ ἀληθὲς παραλογίζεσθ’ οὐδ’ ἔχειν ὀψάρια χρηστά cannot be traced with any probability in the Trinummus.

The Latin name of the play is taken from the coins given to the Sharper (Sycophanta) for his services v. 843. The title does not throw any light upon the contents of the play or the nature of the story, but is borrowed from a chance incident that has little bearing upon the main facts. A similar case is the Rudens, where the play is named from the cable with which the trunk is dragged ashore. There the original was the Πήρα of Diphilus, and the natural name Vidularia was out of the question because already appropriated to another play of similar plot. It may be conjectured that the same thing has happened here, i.e. that the obvious name Thensaurus could not be used by Plautus because it had already been attached to another play.

The story briefly is this. An Athenian citizen Charmides resolves to go abroad and trade, to better his fortunes impaired by his son’s extravagance. He entrusts his property, his son Lesbonicus and his daughter, to the safe-keeping of his old friend Callicles. Lesbonicus is a profligate, he wastes the property and is finally obliged to sell even the house. In the house there is a hidden treasure (θησαυρός), the existence of which has been revealed only to Callicles. To save the treasure Callicles buys the house. This brings odium upon him. He is represented as abusing his friend's confidence and making profit out of his misfortunes. Accordingly a close friend, Megaronides, comes to remonstrate with Callicles on his conduct, but a statement of the facts soon satisfies him that Callicles deserves not blame but praise (Act I.).

At this point Lysiteles, the model son of the virtuous Philto, to help his friend and gratify his own love, induces his father to ask the hand of Lesbonicus' sister in marriage. They ask for her without a dowry, but to this the brother will not consent. He thinks that to marry his sister without a dowry would reflect on his own honour, and so offers the only estate he has left as her dowry. His slave Stasimus dissuades him from parting with his last possession and tries to deter Philto from taking the estate by a comic misrepresentation of its fatal character (Act II.). However, neither will the girl's guardian, Callicles, suffer her to marry without a portion. He has the hidden treasure from which a dowry can be provided, but, that he may not reveal the secret, he determines by the advice of Megaronides to dress up a sycophant, who is to say that he has brought home money from Charmides (Act III.).

At this juncture Charmides does return. He encounters the Sycophant, who has never seen him though he professes to come from him, fools him gloriously and sends him away. The meeting with the Sycophant makes Charmides very uneasy, and his apprehensions are further excited by Stasimus. But a narrative of the facts shews Charmides how faithful to his trust Callicles has been (Act IV.). He agrees to give his daughter's hand to Lysiteles, and Lesbonicus on promise of amendment is betrothed to Callicles' daughter (Act V.).

Thus they 'marry and live happily ever after.' That Lesbonicus is married as a punishment, that Lysiteles wishes to marry mainly to save his friend, that Lesbonicus' profligacy is condemned only because it is ruinous to the fortunes of the family, is at variance with modern thought, but agrees with Athenian comedy. The story is a well-drawn family history, excellently told and regularly developed, the characters are all typical and are sketched with care. The old men, Charmides, Callicles, Megaronides and Philto, are all distinct types, and their characters are consistent and form effective contrasts. The highly moral Lysiteles is an excellent foil to the spendthrift but good-hearted Lesbonicus. The comic element proper is supplied by the slave Stasimus and the Sycophant.

The play is disfigured by no grossness; it is a quiet play (lenis, stataria, as contrasted with motoria a lively bustling play, such as the Asinaria). It is a remarkable feature that the Trinummus, like the Captivi another moral play, has no female character among the dramatis personae.

If we analyse the play we find that Act I. contains the narrative of the facts as unfolded in the conversation between Callicles and Megaronides. Act II. introduces us to the family of Philto and the proposal of marriage. Act III. develops the complications that arise on the unwillingness of Lysiteles to impoverish his friend by accepting a dowry, and the reluctance of Lesbonicus to allow his sister, and of Callicles to allow his ward, to marry without a dowry. These complications are further complicated by the mission of the Sycophant. Act IV. relates the discomfiture of the Sycophant, but leaves Charmides till the end in uncertainty as to the true state of things. With the explanation of Callicles the unravelling of the difficulties begins. Act V. clears up the difficulties, and all ends happily. Thus vv. 23—601 contain the expositio, vv. 602—1092 the inuolutio (entanglement), vv. 1093—1189 the euolutio (disentanglement).

In the structure of the play it should be noted that there are two distinct interests: (1) the difficult position of Callicles, (2) the marriage negotiations, and that these two plots are worked together side by side and for the most part kept distinct by the different metres employed for each. The Callicles plot is worked in iambic metre, i.e. as we should say in blank verse; the marriage plot is worked in lyrics or accelerated rhythm. Thus

BLANK VERSE.

ACCELERATED RHYTHM.

I.

Callicles' character is cleared to his friend Megaronides

23—222.

II.

After some moralising by both father and son, Lysiteles opens the marriage proposal and Philto undertakes to make it.

223—391.

Soliloquy of Philto—when Lesbonicus with his slave comes up, proposal scene

392—601.

III.

News of the intended marriage—discussion of the dowry between the bridegroom and the bride's brother

602—728.

Callicles' position made still more difficult by the proposed marriage—plan of sending Sycophant devised 729—819.

IV.

Return of Charmides and the main complication, the conflict of Charmides with the Sycophant

820—997.

Soliloquy of Charmides—his doubts

998—1007.

Complication continued—the encounter with Stasimus

1008—1092.

Resolution of the difficulties—meeting of Charmides and Callicles 1093—1114.

V.

General explanations and preparations for the marriage

1115—end.

See Mr R. G. Moulton, The Ancient Classical Drama, p. 443.
As is generally the case in Plautus, but not in Terence, the play has a Latin title, while the names of the characters are all Greek.

The names appear to be taken without change from Philemon's play. They are ordinary Athenian names and are not to be pressed to make 'speaking names,' i.e. names which express the bearer's character, unless it be in the cases of the virtuous Lysiteles (λυσίτελεῖν) and the resolute Stasimus who will stick to his point.

The scene represents as usual the fronts of houses in the background with an open street in front. The houses are those of Callicles, which he has bought from Lesbonicus, and Megaronides. Between the houses is a space or lane (angi-portum), and in this space and in the street in front of the houses the action of the play takes place.

Right and left of the stage is an entrance. That on the right of the spectators leads to the Forum, that on the left to the Harbour. Thus persons coming from the city enter from the right, persons returning from foreign parts come in on the left.

Five actors would be required to fill the rôles of this play, viz. (1) Lesbonicus, (2) Lysiteles—one of these could undertake the part of the Sycophant, (3) Callicles and Philto, (4) Charmides and Megaronides, (5) Stasimus. The wigs worn by the actors shewed the kind of character they represented. Old men wore white wigs and used sticks, young men black wigs, slaves red wigs. Charmides is dressed as a traveller, the Sycophant disguised as a foreigner.

The play has deservedly been a favourite, and has often been imitated since the revival of letters. Thus it has been the model of the Italian 'La dote' of J. M. Cecchi, of the French 'Le trésor caché' of Destouches, and of the German 'Der Schatz' of Lessing.

There are separate editions of the Trinummus by G. Hermann, Leipzig 1800 and 1853, Geppert, Berlin 1844, Leipzig 1854, J. Brix, 3rd edit. Leipzig 1879, 4th edit. re-edited by Niemeyer 1888, W. Wagner, Cambridge 1872 and 1875, A. Spengel, Berlin 1875, Freeman and Sloman, Oxford 1883, E. Cocchia, Turin 1886.

(2) The date of the Trinummus.

The passages which throw light on the question of the date of the play are the following :

v. 990 uapulabis meo arbitrato et nouorum aedilium.

From 266—153 B.C. the new magistrates entered upon office on the 15th of March. The aediles are here spoken of as still 'new,' they have recently entered upon their duties, so we must look for a festival which comes not long after the Ides of March.

This shews that the play was produced at the ludi Megalenses or Megalensia which took place in April, for the ludi Romani were in Sept. and the ludi plebei in Nov.

The Megalensia became scenic in the year 194 B.C. Hence the play could not have been earlier than that year.

v. 542 tum autem Syrorum, genus quod patientissimumst hominum &c.

Syrian slaves may no doubt have been known in Rome before the war with Antiochus 191 B.C., but probably did not appear in any great numbers until the close of the war.

v. 545 the allusion to the supplicium of the Campanians, the mention of gold Philippics v. 152, the complaint of moral corruption, self-seeking and greed vv. 28 ff., 283 ff., 1028 ff. all point to 190 B.C. as the earliest year possible for the first production of the play.

Thus we infer that the Trinummus belongs to the last period of Plautus' activity, and is one of his latest plays.

It will be remembered that there was at this time no permanent theatre at Rome. Wooden theatres with rows of seats were built regularly each year after 145 B.C.; the first stone theatre was the Theatrum Magni completed by Pompey 54 B.C. In the time of Plautus and Terence scenic displays took place near the temple of the god in whose honour the festival was held. A temporary wooden stage was put up, and the audience stood unless they chose to have their own seats brought for them.

One play only was presented on each day. The performance commenced about noon, and ended in time for the spectators to return home for dinner.

(3) The Text of the Trinummus.

Part of the Trinummus is contained in the great Ambrosian Palimpsest A. The verses which it exhibits are 1—96, 173—569, 637—673, 738—774, 836—863, and 1045—1078, i.e. a little more than half the play.

On the whole the text of few plays is in a better condition.

It has been already pointed out that the MSS. BCD are closely connected. They all come from one original which was perhaps a minuscule MS. of the 9th cent., which in turn must have come from an archetype written in capitals, and presumably not later in date than the 5th cent. The text of this archetype is known as the 'Palatine' text, and BCD are referred to as the 'Palatine' MSS.

The discovery of the Ambrosian Palimpsest (A) gave a rival text, the 'Ambrosian' text as it is called. Had the whole of the plays been preserved in A there would have been doubt about the reading of very few lines. But unfortunately what we possess is a mere fragment, and the letters are often quite illegible.

Where the assistance of A is not available, the 'Palatine' text is the best. Of the MSS. BCD the best is B. C and D are copied from a single MS. and often reproduce its errors of omission, substitution and so on. B is a more faithful copy of the original and often serves to correct these errors. Where B disagrees with CD, we can generally assure ourselves that the reading of B was the reading of the common original, that the reading of CD is a corruption due to the writer of the MS. of which C and D are immediate copies. But where B agrees with CD, the reading must be the reading of their common original.

For further details see Mr W. M. Lindsay's article in the Classical Review, June 1897.

11. The Prologue. It may be convenient to say something, beyond what has been said p. xxv, about the Plautine Prologues here. The Prologue is defined by Aristotle (Poet. 12) as all that precedes the first Choral Ode. In the Old Comedy anything the author wished to say directly to the audience was said, not at the beginning but in the middle of the play, by the παράβασις. In Tragedy, Euripides is the great employer of the Prologue. His habit is severely criticised by Aristophanes in the Ranae v. 1200 ff. To Comedy the Prologue was more appropriate, and was common in the plays of the Middle and New Comedy. Following the practice of Menander and his contemporaries, Plautus when he wrote a Prologue usually assigned it to some one outside the regular dramatis personae. Thus in the Aulularia the verses are delivered by Lar Familiaris, in the Rudens by Arcturus, in the Trinummus by Luxuria. Terence used his Prologues for a polemical purpose, to gain the favour of the audience and defend himself from the attacks of a rival poet.

It is assumed that Prologues were at one time prefixed to all the Plautine plays. The Bacchides, Epidicus, Mostellaria, Persa, Stichus have none now. The Curculio has none but has a sort of παράβασις in the Third Act. Only two lines survive of the Prologue to the Pseudolus. In the Miles and Cistellaria the plot is explained in a scene of the First Act. But in the Amphitruo and Mercator the Prologue is delivered by one of the persons of the play. Yet the Prologues to the Amphitruo, Captivi and Poenulus contain references to improvements in the Theatre—seats &c.—which were not introduced until after the death of Plautus: that to the Casina declares itself post-Plautine. The Prologues to seven plays speak not of ‘poeta’ but Plautus or Maccius, and belong to the revival of Plautine study ‘in the first half of the 7th cent. A.U.C.’ Setting on one side the Prologues to the Aulularia, Rudens and Trinummus¹, we may lay it down that the extant Prologues are post-Plautine.

In any case the Prologue is no part of the play proper. It is not spoken by one of the characters but by an actor dressed for the purpose—ornatu prologi.

These Prologues merely do what the modern programme or play-bill serves to do. The constituent parts of the play proper are diuerbium and cantica, see p. xxv. All iambic-scenes are included as diuerbium ‘dialogue.’ They had no musical accompaniment. As cantica are included both lyrics proper and scenes declaimed with musical accompaniment.

On the question of the Prologues generally see Ritschl Parerga I. 180—238, Liebig de prol. Ter. et Plaut. 1859, Dziatzko de prol. Plaut. et Ter. 1864, Trautwein de prol. Plaut. indole atque natura 1890.

¹ Trautwein adds Cistellaria, Miles, Mercator; and Leo (Plautinische Forschungen, chap. iv.) goes further still. He includes as Plautine the Prologue of the Asinaria, which has, he says, ‘all marks of being genuine and original.’

12. The Life depicted in the Play. The social conditions implied by the piece, particularly so far as the slaves are concerned, contrast so strongly with what we know of the gravitas of Roman family life that some explanation is necessary. Cato the Elder best typifies the mode in which the private life of a respectable Roman citizen should be spent. 'His domestic discipline was strict. The servants were not allowed to leave the house without orders, or to talk of what occurred in the household to strangers. The more severe punishments were not inflicted capriciously, but sentence was pronounced and executed after a quasi-judicial procedure : the strictness with which offences were punished may be inferred from the fact, that one of his slaves who had concluded a purchase without orders from his master hanged himself on the matter coming to Cato's ears. For slight offences, such as mistakes committed in waiting at table, the consular was wont after dinner to administer to the culprit the proper number of lashes with a thong wielded by his own hand' (Mommsen, II. 405). Nothing could be more different from this strict régime than the conduct of the slaves in the Plautine plays, familiar and on an easy footing of intimacy with their masters.

We cannot too carefully bear in mind that the plays put upon the Roman comic stage were Greek in everything but their language. No doubt they are full of Roman touches. The tresviri and the aediles are grotesquely mixed with agoranomi and demarchi. The Athenian scenery does not prevent a sudden transportation for a few lines to the Capitol or the streets of Rome. But in all essentials the plays are Greek. It was inevitable that they should be so. In everything except politics Greek influence was felt. The very work of education at Rome was chiefly in the hands of slaves, freedmen, or foreigners, in other words chiefly in the hands of Greeks or half-Greeks. 'The Romans could no doubt learn to read and write Latin by means of the Twelve Tables ; but Latin culture presupposed a literature, and no such literature existed at Rome.' Besides this the Roman popular festivals were throughout under the influence of Greeks. There arose a demand for plays.

The impatience of the people would not give the native Italian dramatic elements time for development. 'The Romans desired a theatre but the pieces were wanting.' Literature came to Rome along with the sovereignty of the world.

Poenico bello secundo Musa pennato gradu Intulit se bellicosam Romuli in gentem feram.

Hence it came to pass that both education and literature took stand on Greek ground. The school and the stage were thoroughly anti-Roman. They were two of the strongest influences at work throughout the whole period in sapping Roman conservatism at the most brilliant era it ever had.

The Roman police-regulations undesignedly fostered this Hellenism. The Roman police allowed no politics on the stage. Comedy was allowed to bring forward no Roman on the pulpitum. Even when it was admitted as a national amusement it 'remained as it were relegated to foreign lands.'

This will explain why the plays of Plautus and his fellows are all palliatae. It is a remarkable illustration of this effect of police-regulations at Rome that almost contemporaneously a national comedy was introduced in the provincial towns. The earliest composer of togatae known to us is Titinius. His pieces also were based upon the New Attic Comedy: but with him it was imitation, not translation. The scene was laid in Italy: the actors appeared in the Italian dress (toga). The pieces really dealt with Italian life and habits. The life represented was usually that of southern Latian towns, Setia, Velitrae, Ferentinum, and the delineations were fresh and lively. The very titles of Titinius' plays illustrate the life of which he treated.

But at Rome the general Hellenic influence, the absence of a Latin literature, the demand for theatrical entertainment, and the stringency of the police restrictions, prevented the production of anything except palliatae, in which, as has been said, there was nothing really Latin save the language in which the play was dressed.

And so the conditions of life depicted were Hellenic, cosmopolitan, certainly not Roman. Before the time of the New Comedy Greek ideas about slavery had changed. Euripides may be taken as the mouthpiece of liberal Athens on the subject (see Ion 854, Hel. 728). 'The slave-world was utterly different; the Roman slave was a piece of household-furniture, the Attic slave was a servant. Where marriages of slaves occur or a master carries on a kindly conversation with his slave, the Roman translators ask their audience not to take offence at such things which are usual in Athens; and when at a later period comedies began to be written in Roman costume, the part of the crafty servant had to be rejected, because the Roman public did not tolerate slaves of this sort overlooking and controlling their masters' (Mommsen, II. 432).

There is no more striking proof that a foreign life is being presented in Roman Comedy than the fact that whenever it is necessary to refer to a Roman law, a Roman custom, a Roman poet, the Roman language, the thing is described in true Greek style as 'barbarian.'

This very representation of a life foreign to the audience imposed many restrictions on the adapter. He must perforce cut out all characters that would be incomprehensible to an ordinary Roman. He must trim the conversation, the dishes, the jokes down to the level of his hearers. These remarks may serve to explain at once why the treatment of the originals is so free and why the life described is so essentially un-Roman.

In one point of the treatment of slaves on the stage Mommsen sees the hand of the adapter who is adding something outside his original. 'In the endless abundance of cudgelling and in the lash ever suspended over the back of the slaves we recognise very clearly the household government inculcated by Cato, just as we recognise the Catonian opposition to women in the never-ending abuse of wives' (II. 435). The criticism is true, if understood of the extent to which these things are dwelt on—not of their presence in the plays together.

The whole of Mommsen's two chapters on 'Faith and Manners' and 'Literature and Art' (II. 394—479) deserve close attention from the student of Roman Comedy.

T. MACCI PLAVTI

TRINVMVS

GRAECA THENSAVRVS PHILEMONIS

PERSONAE.

LVXVRIA CUM INOPIA PROLOGVS

MEGARONIDES SENEX

CALLICLES SENEX

LYSITELES ADVLESCENS

PHILTO SENEX

LESBONICVS ADVLESCENS

STASIMVS SERVOS

CHARMIDES SENEX

SYCOPHANTA

ARGVMENTVM.

Thensaúrum abstrusum | ábiens peregre Chármides

Remque ómnem amico Cállicli mandát suo.

Istóc absente mále rem perdit fílius.

Nam et aédis uendit: hás mercatur Cállicles.

Virgo índotata sóror istius póscitur.

5

Minus quó cum inuidia eí det dotem Cállicles,

Mandát qui dicat aúrum ferre se á patre.

Vt uénit ad aedis, húnc deludit Chármides

Senéx, ut rediit: quóius nubunt líberi.

PROLOGVS

LVXVRIA INOPIA

LV. Sequere hác me, gnata, ut múnus fungarís tuom.

<IN.> Sequór: sed finem fóre quem dicam néscio.

<LV.> Adést: em illae sunt aédes: i intro núnciam.

[Exit Inopia.]

Nunc, néquis erret uóstrum, paucis ín uiam

Dedúcam, si quidem óperam dare promíttitis.

5

Nunc ígitur primum quae ego sim et quae illaéc siet,

Huc quae ábiit intro, dícam, si animum aduórtitis.

Primúm mihi Plautus nómen Luxuriae índidit:

Tum | hác mihi gnatam ésse uoluit Ínopiam.

Sed ea húc quid introíerit impulsú meó,

10

Accípite et date uociúas auris dum éloquor.

Aduléscens quidamst, quí in hisce habitat aédibus:

Is rém paternam me ádiutrice pérdidit.

Quoniam eí, qui me aleret, níl uideo esse rélicui,

Dedi eí meam gnatám, quicum aetatem éxigat.

15

Sed de árgumento ne éxspectetis fábulae:

Senés qui huc uenient, eí rem uobis áperient.

Huic Graéce nomen ést Thensauro fábulae:

Philémo scripsit: Plaútus uortit bárbare,

Nomén Trinummo fécit. nunc hoc uós rogat

20

Vt líceat possidére hanc nomen fábulam.

Tantúmst. ualete; adéste cum siléntio.

[Exit.]

ACTVS I.

MEGARONIDES

Senex

- 11 Amícum castigáre ob meritam nóxiam
 Inmoénest facinus, uérum in aetate útile
 Et cónducibile. nám ego amicum hodié meum 25
 Concástigabo pró commerita nóxia,
 5 Inuítus, ni id me inuítet ut faciám fides.
 Nam hic nímium morbus móres inuasít bonos;
 Ita plérique omnis iám sunt intermórtui.
 Sed dum ílli aegrotant, ínterim morés mali 30
 Quasi hérba inrigua súccreuere ubérrume:
 11 Eorúm licet iam métere messem máxumam,
 10 Neque quícquam hic nunc est ufle nisi morés mali.
 Nimióque hic pluris paúciorem grátiam
 Faciúnt pars hominum quam íd quod prosint plúribus. 35
 Ita uíncunt illud cónducibile grátiae,
 15 Quae in rébus multis ópstant odiosaéque sunt
 Remorámque faciunt reí priuatae et públicae.

CALLICLES MEGARONIDES

Senes II

- 12 CA. Larém corona nóstrum decorarí uolo:
 Vxór, uenerare ut nóbis haec habitátio 40 Bona faústa felix fórtunataque éuen[i]at—Teque út, quam primum póssim, uideam emórtuam.

5 <ME.> Hic illést, senecta aetáte qui factúst puer, Qui admísit in se cúlpan castigábilem.
 Adgrédíar hominem. CA. Quóia hic uox prope mé sonat?

<ME.> Tui béneuolentis, sí ita's ut ego té uolo: 46
 Sin áliter es, inimíci atque iratí tibi.

10 <CA.> O amíce, salue, | átque aequalis. út uales, Megarónides? ME. Et tu édepol salue, Cállicles.
 Valén? ualuistin? CA. Váleo, et ualui réctius. 50
 ME. Quid túa agit uxor? út ualet? CA. Plus quam égo uolo.

ME. Bene hérclest illam tibi ualere et úuere.

15 CA. Credo hércle te gaudére, siquid míhi malist.
 ME. Omnibus amicis, quód mihist, cupio ésse idem.
 CA. Eho tú, tua uxor quíd agit? ME. Immortális est:
 Viuít uicturaquést. CA. Bene hercle núntias, 56
 Deosque óro ut uitae tuae superstes súppetat.

20 <ME.> Dumquidem hércle tecum núpta sit, [ME.]
 sané uelim.

CA. Vin cómmutemus? túam ego ducam et tú meam?
 Faxo haúd tantillum déderis uerborúm mihi. 60

<ME.> Namque énim tu, credo, me ínprudentem obrépseris.

<CA.> Ne tu hércle faxo haud néscias quam rem égeris.

25 ME. Habeás ut nanctu's: nóta mala res óptumast.
 Nam ego núnc si ignotam cápiam, quid agam nésciam.

CA. †Edepol proinde ut bene úuitur, diu úuitur. 65

<ME.> Sed hoc ánimum aduerte atque aúfer ridiculária.
 Nam ego dédita opera huc ad te uenio. CA. Quíd uenis?

30 ME. Malís te ut uerbis múltis multum obiúrigem.

CA. Men? ME. Númquis est hic álius praeter me átque te?

CA. Nemóst. ME. Quid tu igitur rógitas, tene obiúrigem?

Nisi tú me mihimet cénses dicturúm male. 71

Nam si ín te aegrotant ártes antiquaé tuae, 72^a 35 [Sin ímmutare ús ingenium móribus] 72^b

(Aut sí demutant móres ingeniúm tuom Neque eós antiquos séruas, ast captás nouos,)

Omníbus amicis mórbum tu incutiés grauem, 75

Vt té uidere audíreque aegrotí sient.

40 CA. Qui in méntem uenit tibi istaec dicta dícere?

ME. Quia omnis bonos bonásque adcurare áddcet,

Suspicionem et culpam ut ab se ségrent.

<CA.> Non pótest utrumque fferi. ME. Quaproptér?

CA. Rogas? 80

Ne admíttam culpam, ego meó sum promus pectori:

45 Suspiciost in pectore alienó sita.

Nam núnc ego si te súrrupuisse súspicer

Iouí coronam dé capite ex Capitólio,

Qui in cólumine astat súmmo: si id non féceris 85

Atque íd tamen mihi lúbeat suspicárier,

50 Qui tu íd prohibere mé potes ne súspicer?

Sed istúc negoti cúpío scire quíd siet.

<ME.> Habén tu amicum aut fámiliarem quémpiam,

Quoi péctus sapiat? CA. Édepol haud dicám dolo. 90

Sunt quós scio esse amícos, sunt quos súspicor,

55 Sunt quórum ingenia atque ánimos <ne>queo nóscere,

[Ad amíci partem an ad inimici péruenant:]

Sed tú ex amicis cértis mihi's certíssumus.

Siquíd scis me fecísse inscite aut ínprobe, 95

Si id nónc me accusas, túte obiurgandú's. <ME.> Scio;

60 Et si ália huc causa ad te ádueni, aequom póstulas.

<CA.> Expécto siquid dícas. ME. Primumdum ómnium,

Male díctitatur tibi uolgo in sermónibus.

Turpílucricupidum té uocant ciués tui:

100

Tu<m> autém sunt alii quí te uolturiúm uocant:

- 65 Hostísne an ciuis cómedis, parui péndere.
 Haec quom aúdio in te díci, s excruciór miser.
 <CA.> Est átque non est mihi in manu, Megarónides :
 Quin dícant, non est : mérito ut ne dicánt, id est. 105 <ME.> Fuitne híc tibi amicus Chármides? <CA.> Est ét fuit.
- 70 Id ita ésse ut credas, rém tibi auctorém dabo.
 Nam póstquam híc eius rém confregit filius, Videtque ípse ad paupertátem prostra[c]tum ésse se
 Suámque filiam ésse adultam uírginem, 110
 Simul éius matrem suámque uxorem mórtuam :
- 75 Quoniam hínc iturust ípsu<s> in Seleúciam,
 Mihi cómmendauit uírginem gnatám suam
 Et rém suam omnem et illúm corruptum fílium.
 Haec, sí mi inimicus ésset, credo haud créderet. 115 <ME.> Quid tu? ádulescentem, quém esse corruptúm uides,
- 80 Qui tuaé mandatus ést fide et fidúciae,
 Quin eúm restituis? quín ad frugem cónrigis?
 Ei rei óperam dare te fúerat aliquanto aéquius, Siquí probiorem fácere posses, nón uti 120
 In eándem tute accéderes infámiam
- 85 Malúmque ut eius cúm tuo miscerés malo.
 <CA.> Quid féci? ME. Quod homo néquam. CA. Non istúc meumst.
 <ME.> Emístin de adulescénte has<ce>aedes—quíd taces?—
 Vbi núnc tute habitas? CA. Émi atque argentúm dedi, Minás quadraginta, ádulescenti ipsi ín manum. 126
- 90 <ME.> Dedistín argentum? CA. Fáctum, neque factí piget.
 <ME.> Edepól fide[i] adulescéntem mandatúm malae :
 Dedistíne hoc facto ei gládium, qui se occíderet?

Quid séc[ut]us est aut quid ínterest dare te ín manus 130
 Argéntum amanti homini ádulescenti, animi ímpoti,

95 Qui exaédificaret suam íncohatam ignáuiam?

<CA.> Non égo illi argentum rédderem? ME. Non rédderes,

Neque de illo quicquam néque emerēs neque uénderes,
 Nec quí deterior ésset faceres cópiam. 135

Incónciliastin eúm, qui mandatúst tibi,

100 Ille quí mandauit, eúm exturbasti ex aédibus?

Edepól mandatum púlcre et curatúm probe.

Crede huíc tutelam: suám melius rem gésserit.

<CA.> Subigís maledictis mé tuis, Megarónides, 140

Nouó modo adeo, ut quó<d> meae concréditumst

105 Tacitúrnitati clám, fide[i] et fidúciae,

Ne enúntiarem quóquam neu facerém palam,

Vt míhi necesse sít iam id tibi concrédere.

<ME.> Mihi quód credideris, súmes ubi posúueris. 145

<CA.> Circúmspicedum te, néquis adsit árbitr

110 Nobís, et quaeso idéntidem circúmspice.

<ME.> Auscúlto siquid dícas. CA. Si taceás, loquar.

Quoniam hínc est profectú<ru>s peregre Chármides,

Thensaúrum demonstráuit mihi in hisce aédibus, 150

Hic ín conclauí quódam—sed circúmspice—

115 <ME.> Nemóst. CA. nummorum Phílippeum ad tria mília.

Id sólus solum pér amicitiam et pér fidem

Flens me óbsecrauit suó ne gnato créderem

Neu quóquam, unde ad eum id pósset permanáscere. 155

Nunc si ílle huc saluos réuenit, reddam suóm sibi;

120 Siquíd eo fuerit, cérte illius fíliae

Quae míhi mandatast hábeo dotem | únde dem,

Vt eam ín se dignam cóndicionem cónlocem.

<ME.> Pro di ínmortales, uérbis paucis quám cito 160

Aliúm fecisti me: álius a<d>te uéneram.

125 Sed ut ócepesti, pérge porro próloqui.

<CA.> Quid tíbi ego dicam, qui illius sapiéntiam

Et meám fidelitátem et celata ómnia

Paene ille ignauos fúnditus pessúm dedit? 165

<ME.> Quidúm? CA. Quia, ruri dúm sum ego unos sék dies,

130 Me apsénte atque insciénte, inconsultú meo,

Aedís uenalis hásce inscribit lítteris.

<ME.> Adésuriuit [magis] ét inhiauit ácrius

Lupus: óbseruauit dúm dormitaré[n]t canes: 170

Gregem úniuorsum uóluit totum auórtere.

135 <CA.> Fecísset edepol, ni haéc praesensissét canes.

Sed núnc rogare egó uicissim té uolo:

Quid fúit officium meúm me facere? fác sciam:

Vtrum índicare me eí thensaurum aequóm fuit 175

Aduórsum quam eius me ópsecrauissét pater?

140 An ego álium dominum páterer fieri hisce aédibus?

Qui emísset, eius éssetne ea pecúnia?

Emi égomet potius aedis; argentúm dedi

Thensaúri causa, ut sáluom amico tráderem. 180

Neque ádeo hasce emi míhi nec usuraé meae:

145 Illí redemi rússum, a me argentúm dedi.

Haec súnť: si recte seú peruorse fácta sunt,

Ego mé fecisse cónfiteor, Megarónides.

Em méa malefacta |, ém meam auaritiám tibi. 185

Hascí<ne> propter res máledicas famás ferunt.

150 <ME.> Παῖσαι: uicisti cástigatorém tuom.

Occlústí linguam: níl est quod respóndeam.

<CA.> Nunc égo te quaeso ut me ópera et consilió iuues

Commúnicesque hanc mécum meam prouínciam. 190

<ME.> Pollíceor operam. CA. Ergo úbi eris paulo póst? ME. Domi:

155 Numquid uis? CA. Cures tuam fidem. ME. Fit sedulo.
Sed quid ais? CA. Quid uis? ME. Vbi nunc adulescens habet?

<CA.> Posticum hoc recepit, quom aedis uendidit.

<ME.> Istuc uolebam scire: i sane nunciam. 195

Sed quid ais, quid nunc uirgo? nempe apud test? CA. Itast, 160 Iuxtaque eam curo cum mea. ME. Recte facis.

<CA.> Numquid, prius quam abeo, me rogaturus? ME.

Vale. [Exit Callicles.]

Nil est profecto stultius neque stolidius

Neque mendaciloquius neque argutum magis 200

Neque confidentilocius neque peiorius

165 Quam urbani adsidui ciues quos scurras uocant.

Atque egomet me adeo cum illis una ibidem traho,

Qui illorum uerbis falsis acceptor fui,

Qui omnia se simulant scire neque quicquam sciunt. 205

Quod quisque in animo habet aut habiturus sciunt:

170 Sciunt tunc quod in aurem rex reginae dixerit:

Sciunt quod Iuno fabulatast cum Ioue:

Quae neque futura neque sunt, tamen illi sciunt.

Falsum an uero laudent, culpent quem uelint, 210

Non flocci faciunt, dum illud quod lubeat sciant.

175 Omnis mortalis hunc aiebant Calliclem

Indignum ciuitate [h]ac sese uiuere,

Bonis qui hunc adulescentem euortisset suis.

Ego de eorum uerbis famigeratorum insciens 215

Proslui amicum castigatum innoxium.

180 Quod si exquiratur usque ab stirpe auctoritas,

Vnde quidquid auditum dicant: nisi id appareat,

Famigeratori res sit cum damno et malo:

Hoc ita si fiat, publico fiat bono. 220

Pauci sint faxim qui sciant quod nesciunt,

185 Occlusioremque habeant stultiloquentiam. [Exit.]

ACTVS II.

LYSITELES

Adulescens

- 111 Multás res simítu in meó corde uórso,
 Multum ín cogitándo dolórem indipíscor.
 Egomét me coquo ét macero ét defetígo: 225
 Magíster mihi éxercitór animus núnc est.
- 5 Sed hóc non liquét neque satís cogitátumst,
 Vtrám potius hárum mihi ártem expetéssam,
 Vtram aétati agúndae arbitrér firmiórem:
 Amórin me<d>án rei opsequí potius pár sit. 230
 Vtra ín parte plús sit uolúptatis uítæ
- 10 Ad aétatem agúndam,
 De hac ré mihi satis haú liquet: nisi hóc sic faciam, opínor, Vt utrámque rem simul éxputem, iudéx sim reusque ad eám rem.
- Ita fáciam: ita placet. omníum primum 235
 Amóris artis éloquar, quem ad módum | expediant.
- 15 Numquam ámor quemquam nisi cúpidum hominem 237^a Postúlat se in plagas cóncere: 237^b Eós cupit, eos cónsectatur, súbdole [blanditur] ab re cónsulit:
- Blandiloquentulus, harpagó, mendax, 239^a Cuppés, auarus, élegans, despoliator, 239^b
- 20 Latebrícolarum hominum córruptor, †Blandus, inops, célatum indagátor.
 Nam quí amat quod amat quom éxtemplo 242^a

- Sauis sagittatus, pérculsust, 242^b
 Ílico rés foras lábitur, líquitur.
- 25 'Dá mihi hoc, méi meum, sí me amas, si aúdes'.
 Ibi ille cūcūlus: 'océlle mi, fiat: 245
 Ét istuc et si ámplius uís dari, dábitur'.
 Íbi illa pendentém ferit: iam ámplius órat:
 Nón satis id ést mali, ni ámplius étiam, 248, 249
- 30 Quód ecibit, quód comest, quód facit súmpti.
 Nóx datur: dúcitur fámilia tóta,
 Véstiplica, unctor, aúri custos, flábelliferae, sándaligerulae, Cántrices, cistéllatrices, núnctii, renúnctii, Raptóres panis ét peni.
- 35 Fit ípse, dum illis cómis est, 255^a Inóps amator. 255^b
 Haec égo quom cum animo meó reputo,
 Vbi quí eget, quam preti síť parui,
 Apagé te, amor, non places, níl te utor.
- 40 Quamquam íllud est dulce, esse ét bibere, Amór amara dát tamen 260^a †Satis quod aegre sit. 260^b
 Fugit fórum, fug<it>at suos cógnatos, Fugat ípsus se ab suo cóntutu,
- 45 Neque eúm sibi amicum uóľunt dici. 264^a Millé modis amor ignórandust, 264^b
 Procul †ábhibendust atque ábstandus:
 Nam qui ín amorem praecípitaui, 265^a Peiús perit qua[m]si saxó saliat. 265^b
- 50 Apagé te amor: tuas res tíbi habeto.
 Amor, mfi amicus ne fúas umquam:
 Sunt támen quos miseros máleque habeas,
 Quos tíbi obnoxios fecísti.
 Céřta res ést ad frugem ádplicare ánimum: 270
- 55 Quámquam ibi animó labos grándis capitur.

Bóni sibi haec éxpetunt, rém, fidem, honorem,
 Glóriam et grátiam: hóc probis pretiumst.
 Eo mñhi magis lubet cum próbis potius
 Quam cum ínprobis uiuere uánidicis.

275

PHILTO LYSITELES

Senex Adulescens

112 PH. Quo illíc homo foras se pénetravit [ex aedibus]?

LY. Pater,

Ádsum: imperíta quíduis:

Neque tíbi ero in mora neque látebrose 278^a

Me aps tuó conspectu occúltabo. 278^b

5 PH. Féceris pár tuis céteris fáctis, Patrem túom si [per]coles per píetatem. 280

Nólo ego cum ínprobis té uiris, gnáte mi,
 Neque ín uia neque ín foro, necúllum sermonem éxsequi.

Nóui ego hoc saéculum móribus quíbus sit:

10 Malús bonum malum ésse uolt, ut sít sui simíl<lumus>.

Turbánt, miscent morés mali, rapáx, auarus, ínuidus: 285

Sacrúm profanum, públicum priuátum habent, hiúlca gens.

Haec égo doleo, haec sunt quae me excruciant, 287^a

Haec diés noctis canto [tibi] út caueas. 287^b

15 Quod mánu non queunt tangére, tantum fas hábent quo manus apstíneant:

Cetéra 'rape, trahe, fuge, láte': lacrumas haec mñhi, quom uideo, elíciunt, 289, 290

Quia ego ád hoc genus hominum dúraui. quin prísus me ad pluris pénetravi? 290, 291

Nam hi móres maiorúm laudant, eosdém lutitant quos cónlaudent.

Hísce ego de ártibus grátiam fácio,

20 Ne[u] cólas neue inbuas íngenium.

Meó modo et móribus uíuito antíquis: 295

Quae egó tibi praecipio, éa facito.

Níl ego istós moror faéceos móres, [Turbídos], quibus bóni dedecorant sése.

25 Haec tibi si mea imperiá capesses, multá bona in pectore cónsident. 299, 300

LX. Sémper ego usque ad hánc aetatem ab íneunte adulescéntia

Tuís seruui séruitutem impériis, [et] praeceptís, pater.

Pro íngenio ego me líberum esse rátus sum, pro imperió tuo

Méum animum tibi séruitutem séruire aequom cénsui.

30 <PH.> Quí homo cum animo inde áb ineunte aetáte depugnát suo, 305

Vtrum itane esse máuelit ut eum ánimus aequom cénseat,

Án ita potius út parentis éum esse et cognatí uelint:

Si ánimus hominem pépulit, actumst, ánimó seruit, nón sibi:

Si ípse animum pepulít, dum uiuit, uíctor uictorúm cluet.

35 Tú si animum uicísti potius quam ánimus te, est quod gaúdeas. 310

Nímio satiust, út opust te ita ésse, quam ut animó lubet.

(Qui ánimus uincunt, quám quos animus, sémper probiorés cluent.)

LX. Ístaec ego mihi sémper habui aetáti integumentúm meae,

Né penetrarem me úsquam, ubi esset dámni conciliábulum,

40 Né noctu irem obámbulatum neú suom adimerem álteri, 315

Néu tibi aegritúdinem, pater, párerem, parsi sédulo:

Sárta tecta túa praecepta usque hábui mea modéstia.

<PH.> Quid exprobras bene quód fecisti? tibi fecisti, nón mihi:

Míhi quidem aetas áctast ferme, túa istuc refert máxume.

45 [PH.] Ís probust, quem paénitet quam próbus sit et frugí bonae: 320

Qui ípsus sibi satís placet, nec próbus est nec frugí bonae:
 Qui ípsus se contémnit, in eost índoles indústriae:
 Bénefacta benefáctis aliis pértegito, ne pérpluant.

LY. Ób eam rem haec, pater, aútumaui, quía res quaedamst quám uolo

50 Égo me aps te exoráre. PH. Quid id est? dáre iam ueniam géstio. 325

LY. Ádulescenti hinc género summo, amíco atque aequalí
 meo,

Mínus qui caute et cógitate suám rem tractauít, pater, Béne uolo ego illi fácere, si tu nón neuís. PH. Nempe dé tuo?

LY. Dé meo: nam quód tuomst meumst, ómne meumst autém tuom.

55 PH. Quíd is? egetne? LY. Egét. PH. Habuitne rem?

LY. Hábit. PH. Qui eam pérdidit? 330

Públicisne adfínis fuit an máritumis negótiis?

Mércaturan, án uenalis hábit, ubi rem pérdidit?

LY. Níl istorum. PH. Quíd igitur? LY. Per cómitatem edepól, pater:

Praétereá aliquantum ánimi causa in déliciis dispérdidit.

60 <PH.> Édepol hominem praémandatum férme fami-liáriter: 335

Quíquidem nusquam pér uirtutem rém confregit, átque eget.

Níl moror eum tíbi ésse amicum cum eíus modi uirtútibus.

<LY.> Quía sine omni máliasti, toleráre ei[us] egestatém uolo.

<PH.> Dé mendico mále meretur qui eí dat quod edit aút bibat:

65 Nam ét illud quod dat pérdit et illi pródit uitam ad
 míseriam. 340

Nón eo haec dico, quín quae tu uis égo uelim et faciám
 lubens:

Séd ego hoc uerbum quóm illi quoidam díco, praemonstró
tibi,

Út ita te aliorúm miserescat, né tis alios mísereat.

<LY.> Déserere illum et déíuuare in rébus aduorsís pudet.

70 <PH.> Pól pudere quám pigere praestat totidem lítteris.

<LY.> Édepol deum uirtúte, dicam, páter, et maiorum ét tua 346

Múlta bona bene páta habemus, béne si amico féceris,

Né pigeat fecísse: ut potius púdeat, si non féceris.

<PH.> Dé magnis diuítiis siquid démas, plus fit án minus?

75 <LY.> Mínus, pater: sed cúi inmuni scín quid cantarí solet? 350

‘Quód habes ne habeás, et illuc quod nón habes habeás, malum,

Quándoquidem nec tíbi bene esse póte pati neque álteri.’

<PH.> Scío equidem istuc íta solere fieri: uerum, gnáte mí,

Ís est inmuniis quói nil est qui múnus fungatúr suom.

80 <LY.> Deúm uirtute habémus et qui nósmet utamúr, pater, 355

Ét aliis qui cómitati símus beneuoléntibus.

<PH.> Nón edepol tibi pérnegare póssum quicquam quód uelis:

Quói[us] egestatém tolerare uís? loquere audactér patri.

<LY.> Lésbonico huic ádulescenti, Chármidi filio,

85 Qui íllic habitat. PH. Quín comedit quód fuit, quod nón fuit? 360

<LY.> Ne ópprobra, pater: múlta eueniunt hómimi quae uolt, quae neuolt.

<PH.> Méntire edepol, gnáte, atque id nunc fácis haud consuetúdine.

Nám sapiens quidém pol ipso fíngit fortunám sibi:

Eó non multa quae neuolt eueniunt, nisi fictór malust.

90 <LY.> Múlta illi opera opúst ficturae, quí se fíctorem probum 365

Vítae agundae esse éxpetit: sed hic ádmodum adulescéntulust.

<PH.> Nón aetate, uérum ingenio apíscitur sapiéntia.

(82) Sápienti aetas cóndimentum, †sápiens aetatí cibust.

(81) Ágedum eloquere, quíd dare illi núnc uis? LY. Nil quic-quám, pater:

95 Tú modo ne me próhibeas accípere, siquid dét mihi. 370

<PH.> Án eo egestatem e<í> tolerabis, siquid ab illo accéperis?

<LY.> Eó, pater. PH. Pol ego ístam uolo me rátionem edoceás. LY. Licet.

Scín tu illum quo géneré natus sít? PH. Scio, adprimé probo.

<LY.> Sórór illist adúlta uirgo grándis: eam cupió, pater,

100 Dúcere uxórém sine dote. PH. Síne dote uxórém?
LY. Ita; 375

Tuá re salua hoc pácto ab illo súmmam inibis grátiam.

Néque commodius úllo pacto ei póteris auxiliárier.

<PH.> Égone indotatám te uxorem ut pátiar? LY.
Patiundúmst, pater:

Ét eo pacto addíderis nostrae lépidam famam fámiliae.

105 <PH.> Múlta ego possum dócta dicta, [et] quámuis facundé, loqui: 380

Hístoriám ueterem átque antiquam haec méa senectus sústinet.

Vérum ego quando te ét amicitiam et grátiam in nostrám
domum

Vídeo adlicere, etsi áduorsatus tíbi fui, istac iúdico:

Tíbi permitto, pósce, duce. LY. Dí te seruassínt mihi:

110 Séd adde ad istam grátiam unum. PH. Quíd id est autem unum? LY. Éloquar: 385

Túte ad eum adeas, túte concilies, túte poscas. PH. Éccere.
 <LY.> Nímio citius tránsiges: firmum ómne erit quod tu égeris.

Gráuius tuom erit únum uerbum ad eám rem quam centúm mea.

<PH.> Écce autem in benígnitate [hoc] répperi negótium :
 115 Dábitur opera. LY. Lépidus uiuis. haéc sunt aedes, híc
 habet: 390

Lésbonicost nómen. age rem cúra: ego te opperiár domi.
 [Exit Lysiteles.]

PHILTO

Senex

113 Non óptuma haec sunt, néque ut ego aequom cénseo :
 Verúm meliora súnt quam quae detérruma.
 Sed hóc me únum consolátur atque animúm meum,
 Quia quí nil aliud, nísí quod sibi solí placet, 395
 5 Consúlit aduorsum fílium, nugás agit :
 Miser éx animo fit, fáctius niló facit.
 Suaé senectuti is ácriorem hiemém parat,
 Quom illam ínportunam témpestatem cónciet.
 Sed áperiuntur aédes quo ibam: cómmodum 400
 10 Ipse éxit Lesbonícus cum seruó foras.

LESBONICVS

STASIMVS

PHILTO

AdulescensServosSenex

114 LE. Minus quíndecim diés sunt, quom pro hisce aédibus Mínas quadraginta ácepisti a Cállicle :
 Estne hóc quod dico, Stásime? ST. Quom consídero, Memínisse uideor fieri. LE. Quid factúmst eo? 405

5 St. Coméssum, expotum, exú<nc>tum, elotum in bá-lineis:

Piscátor, pistor ápstulit, laní, coqui,
Holitóres, myropolae, aúcupes: confít cito:
Non hércle minus diuórse distrahitúr cito,
Quam sí tu obicias fórmicis papáuerem. 410

10 Le. Minus hércle in istis rébus sumptumst séx minis.
St. Quid, quód dedisti scórtis? Le. Ibidem uná traho.
St.† Quid, quód ego defrudaui? Le. Em, istaec ratio máxumast.

St. Non tíbi illud apparére, si sumás, potest,
Nisi tu ínmortale rére esse argentúm tibi. 415

15 Ph. Sero átque stulte, príus quod cautum opórtuit, Postquám comedit rém, post rationém putat.
Le. Nequáquam argenti rátio comparét tamen.
St. Ratió quidem hercle appáret: argentum οἷχαται.
Minás quadraginta ácepisti a Cállicle, 420

20 Et ille aedis mancipio áps te accepit? Le. Ádmodum.

Ph. Pol opíno[r] adfinis nóster aedis uéndidit;
Patér quom peregre uéniet, in portást locus,
Nisi fórte in uentrem fílio conrépserit.

St. Trapézitae millé drachumarum Olýmpico[m], 425

25 Quas dé ratione déhibuisti, rédditae.

Le. Nempe quas spopondi. St. Immó 'quas dependi' ínquito 427^a

[Qua spónsione prónuper tu exáctus es.] 427^b

Pro illo ádulescente, quém tu esse aibas díuitem.

<Le.> Factum. St. Vt quidem illud périerit. Le.

Factum íd quoquest:

30 Nam núnc eum uidi míserum et me eius míseritumst. 430

St. Miserét te aliorum, tuí nec miseret néc pudet.

Ph. Tempúst adeundi. Le. Éstne hic Philto qui áduenit?
Is hérclest ipsus. St. Édepol ne ego istúm uelim

Meum fieri seruom cūm suo pecūlio.

35 <PH.> Erum átque seruom plúrumum Philtó iubet 435
Saluére, Lesbonícum et Stasimum. LE. Dí duint

Tibi, Phílto, quaequomque óptes. quid agit fílius?

PH. Bene uólt tibi. LE. Edepol mútuom mecúm facit.

<ST.> Nequam íllud uerbumst 'béne uolt', nisi qui béne facit.

40 [ST.] Ego quóque uolo esse líber: nequiquám uolo. 440
Hic póstulet frugi ésse, nugas póstulet.

PH. Meus gnátus me ad te mísit, inter te átque nos Adfínitatem ut cónciliarem et grátiam.

Tuam uólt sororem dúcere uxorem: ét mihi

45 Senténtia eademst ét uolo. LE. Hau noscó tuom: 445
Bonís tuis rebus meás res inridés malas.

PH. Homo égo sum, homo tu's: íta me amabit Iúppiter, Neque té derisum aduénio neque dignúm puto.

Verum hóc quod dixi, méus me orauit fílius,

50 Vt tuám sororem póscerem uxorém sibi. 450

LE. Mearúm me rerum nóuisse aequomst órđinem.

Cum uóstra nostra nón est aequa fáctio:

Adfínitatem uóbis aliam quaérite.

ST. Satín tu's sanus méntis aut animí tui,

55 Qui cóndicionem hanc répudies? nam illúm tibi 455
Ferentárium esse amícum inuentum intéllego.

LE. Abi hinc dírecte. ST. Si hércle ire occipíam, uotes.

LE. Nisi quíd me aliud uis, Phílto, respondí tibi.

PH. Benígiorem, Lésbonice, té mihi,

60 Quam núnc experior ésse, confidó fore: 460

Nam et stúlte facere et stúlte fabulárier,

Vtrúmque, Lesboníce, in aetate haú bonumst.

ST. Verum hércle hic dicit. LE. Óculum ego ecfodiám
tibi,

Si uérbum addideris. ST. Hércle qui dicám tamen:

- 56 Nam sí sic non licébit, luscus díxero. 465
 <PH.> Ita tú nunc dicis, nón esse aequiperábiles Vostrás cum nostris fáctiones átque opes?
 LE. Dicó. PH. Quid nunc? si in aédem ad cenam uéneris Atque ibi opulentus tíbi par forte obuénerit, 70 Adpósita cena sít, popularem quám uocant, 470
 Si illí congestae sít epulae a cluéntibus:
 Siquíd tibi placeat quód illi congestúm siet,
 Edísne an incenátus cum opulento áccubes?
 LE. Edím, nisi si ille uótet. ST. At pol ego, etsí uotet, 75 Edim, átque ambabus mális expletís uorem, 475
 Et quód illi placeat praéripíam potíssimum:
 Neque illí concedam quícquam de uítá mea.
 Verécundari néminem apud mensám decet:
 Nam ibi dé diuinis átque humanis cérnitur.
 80 PH. Rem fábulare. ST. Nón tibi dicám dolo: 480
 Decédam ego illi dé uia, de sémita,
 De honóre populi: uérum quod ad uentrem áttinet,
 Non hércle hoc longe, nísi me pugnis úcerit.
 Cena hác annonast síne sacris heréditas.
 85 <PH.> Sempér tu hoc facito, Lésbonice, cógites, 485
 Id óptumum esse, túte uti sis óptumus:
 Si id néqueas, saltem ut óptumis sis próxumus.
 Nunc cóndicionem hanc, quam égo fero et quam aps té peto, Dare átque accipere, Lésbonice, té uolo.
 90 Dei díuites sunt, deós decent opuléntiae 490
 Et fáctiones: uérum nos homínculi,
 †Salíllum | animae quí quom extemplo emísimus,
 Aequó mendicus átque ille opulentíssumus
 Censétur censu ad Ácheruntem mórtuos.
 95 <ST.> Mirúm quin tu illo técum diuitiás feras: 495
 Vbi mórtuos sis, íta sis ut nomén cluet.
 <PH.> Nunc út scias hic fáctiones átque opes

Non ésse neque nos tuám neglegere grátiam :

Sine dóte posco tuám sororem fílio.

100 Quae rés bene uortat. hábeon pactam? quíd taces? 500

St. Pro di ínmortales, cóndicionem quoús modi.

PH. Quin fábulare ‘dí bene uorta<n>t: spóndeo’?

St. Eheú, ubi usus níl erat dicto, ‘spóndeo’

Dicébat: nunc hic, quom ópus est, non quit dícere.

105 LE. Quom adfínitate uóstra me arbitrámini 505

Dignum, hábeo uobis, Phílto, magnam grátiam.

Sed si haéc res grauiter cécidit stultitiá mea,

Phlto, ést ager sub úrbe hic nobis: eúm dabo

Dotém sorori: nam ís de diuítíis meis

110 Solús superfit praéter uitam rélicuos. 510

PH. Profécto dotem níl moror. LE. Certúmst dare.

St. Nostrámne, ere, uis nutrícem, quae nos éducat,

Abálienare a nóbis? caue sis féceris:

Quid edémus nosmet póstea? LE. Etiam tú taces?

115 Tibi egó rationem réddam? St. Plane périmus, 515

Nisi quíd ego conminíscor—Phlto, té uolo.

PH. Siquíd uis, Stasime. St. Huc cóncede aliquantúm.

PH. Licet.

<St.> Arcáno tibi ego hoc díco, ne ille ex té sciat

Neue álius quisquam. PH. Créde audacter quídlubet.

120 <St.> Per deós atque homines díco, ne tu illúnc agrum

Tuom síris umquam fferi neque gnatí tui: 521

Ei rei árgumenta dícam. PH. Audire edepól lubet.

St. Primum ómnium, olim térra quom proscínditur,

In quíncto quoque súlco moriuntúr boues.

125 PH. Apage. Ácheruntis óstium in «ostróst agro. 525

St. Tum uínum, prius quam cóctumst, pendet pútídum.

<Le.> Consuádet homini, crédo. etsi sceléstus est,

At míhi infidelis nóñ est. St. Audi cétera.

Postíd, frumenti quom álibi messis máxumast,

- 130 Tribus tántis illi mínus re[d]dit quam obséueris. 530
 PH. Em istíc oportet ópseri morés malos, Si in ópserendo póssint interfieri.
 <St.> Neque úmquam quisquamst, quóius ille agér fuit, Quin péssume ei res uórterit. quorúm fuit,
- 135 Alii éxulatum abiérunt, alii emórtui, 535
 Alií se suspendére. em nunc hic quóius est, Vt ad íncitas redáctust. PH. Apage a me ístum agrum.
 St. Magis 'ápage' dicas, si ómnia ex me audíueris.
 Nam fúluritae súnť alternae | árbores :
- 140 Sués moriuntur ángina | acérrume : 540
 Oués scabrae sunt, tám glabrae, em, quam haec ést manus, Tum autém Syrorum, génus quod patientíssimumst
 Hominúm, nemo exstat qui íbi sex menses uíxerit :
 Ita cúncťi solstitiáli morbo décidunt.
- 145 PH. Credo égo istuc, Stasime, ita ésse : sed Campáns 545 genus
 Multó Syrorum iam ántidit patiéntia.
 Sed istést ager profécto, ut te audiuí loqui,
 Malós in quem omnes públice mittí decet.
- 150 Sicút fortunatórum memorant ínsulas, 550
 Quo cúncťi, qui aetatem égerint casté suam, Conuéňiant : contra istóc detrudi máleficos
 Aequóm uidetur, quí quidem istius sít modi.
 St. Hospítiumst calamitátis : quid uerbís opust ?
- 155 Quamuís malam rem quaéras, illic réperias. 555
 PH. At tu hércle et illi et álibi. St. Caue sis díxeris Me tíbi dixisse hoc. PH. Díxisti arcanó satis. 556
 St. Quin hícquidem cupit illum áb se abalienárier, Siquém reperire póssit, quoi os súblinat.
- 160 PH. Meusquidem hércle numquam fiet. St. Si sapiés 560
 quidem—
 Lepide hércle de agro ego húnť senem detérrui :

Nam quí uiuamus níl est, si illum amiserit.

<PH.> Redeo ad te, Lesboníce. LE. Dic sodés mihi, Quid hic ést locutus técum? PH. Quid censés? homost:

165 Volt fíeri liber, uérum quod det nón habet.

LE. Et égo esse locuples, uérum nequiquám uolo. 565

St. Licitúmst, si uelles: núnc, quom nil est, nón licet.

LE. Quid técum, Stasime? St. De ístoc quod dixtí modo:
Si anté uoluisses, ésses: nunc seró cupis.

170 PH. De dóte mecum cónuenire níl potes<t>:

Quid tñbi lubet, tute ágito cum nató meo. 570

Nunc tuám sororem fílio poscó meo:

Quae rés bene uortat. quíd nunc? etiam cónsu<l>is?

LE. Quid istíc? quando ita uis, dí bene uortant: spóndeo.

175 <St.> Numquam édepol quoiquam<tam>éxpectatus fílius

Natús, quam illuc est 'spóndeo' natúm mihi. 575

Dí fórtunabunt uóstra consilia. PH. Íta uolo.

LE. Sed, Stásime, abi huc ad meám sororem ad Cálliclem:
Dic hóc negoti, quó modo actumst. St. Íbitur.

180 LE. Et grátulator meaé sorori. St. Scílicet.

PH. I hac, Lésbonice, mécum, ut coram núptiis 580
Dies cóstituatur: eádem haec confirmábimus.

[Exit Philto.

<LE.> [†Tu istuc cura quod iussi: ego iam hic ero.]

Dic Cállicli, me ut cónueniat. St. Quin tu í modo.

185 LE. De dóte ut uideat quíd<o>pus sit facto. St. Í modo.

<LE.> Nam cértumst sine dote ha<ú>d dare. St.
Quin tu í modo. 585

LE. Neque enim illi damno umquam ésse patiar—St. Ábi
modo.

<LE.> Meam néglegentiam. St. Í modo. LE. Neque enim—<St.> Í modo.

LE. Aequóm uidetur quín, quod peccarim,—St. Í modo.

¹⁹⁰ LE. Potíssimum mihi id ópsit. St. I modo. LE. Ó pater, Enúmquam aspiciam te?—St. Í modo, i modo, í modo.

[Exit Lesbonicus.

Tandem ímpetraui abíret. di, uostrám fidem, 591

Edepól re gesta péssume gestám probe,

Si quídem ager nobis sáluos est: etsi ádmodum

¹⁹⁵ In ámbiguost etiám nunc quid [d]ea ré fuat.

Sed [id] si álienatur, áctumst de colló meo: 595

Gestándust peregre clúpeus, galea, sárcina.

Effúgiet ex urbe, úbi erunt factae núptiae:

Ibít †istac aliquo in máxumam malám crucem,

²⁰⁰ Latrócinatum, aut ín Asiam aut in Cíliciam.

Ibo húc quo mihi imperátumst, etsi odi hanc domum, 600

Postquam éxturbauit híc nos nostris aédibus. [Exit.

ACTVS III.

CALLICLES

STASIMVS

Senex

Seruos

III 1 CA. Quó modo tu istuc, Stásime, dixti? ST. Nóstrum erilem fílium

Lésbonicum suám sororem déspondiss<e:>em, hóc modo.

CA. Quoí homini despóndit? ST. Lysitelí, Philtonis fílio, Síne dote. CA. Sine dóte ille illam in tántas diuitiás dabit? 605

5 Nón credibile dícis. ST. At tu édepol nullus crédas :
Si hóc non credis, égo credidero—CA. Quíd? ST. Me nilpéndere.

CA. Quám dudum istuc aút ubi actumst? ST. Ílico, hic ante óstium :

Tám modo, inquit Praénestinus. CA. Tánton in re pérđita
Quam ín re salua Lésbonicus fáctus est frugálior? 610

10 ST. Átque equidem ipsus últro uenit Phílto oratum fílio.

CA. Flágitium quidem hércle fiet, nísi dos dabitur uírgini.
Póstremo edepol égo istam rem ad me áttinere intéllego :
Íbo ad meum castígatorem atque áb eo consiliúm petam.

[Exit Callicles.

ST. Própemodum quid illíc festinet séntio et subolét mihi : 615

15 Vt agro euortat Lésbonicum, quándo euortit aédibus.

Ó ere Charmidé<s>, quom apsentí [te] hic túa res dis-trahitúr tibi,

Útinam te rediísse saluom uídeam, ut inimicós tuos
Úlciscar<e> et míhi, ut erga te fúí et sum, referas grátiam.

Nímium difficilést reperiri amícum ita ut nomén cluet, 620

20 Quóí tuam quom rém cre<di>deris, síne omni cura dórmias.

Séd generum nostrum íre ec<c>illum uídeo cum adfiní suo.

Néscioquid non sátis inter eos cónuenit: celerí gradu[s]

Eúnt uterque: illé reprehendit húnc priorem pállio:

Haúd ineusc<h>eme ástiterunt. húc aliquantum aps<c>éssero:

625

25 Ést lubido orátionem audíre duorum adfínium.

LYSITELES

LESBONICVS

STASIMVS

Adulcentes II

Seruos

III 2 LY. Sta ílico: noli áuorsari néque te occultassís mihi.

LE. Pótin ut me íre, quó[d] profectus súm, sinas? LY. Si in rém tuam,

Lésbonice, essé uideatur glóriæ aut famaé, sinam.

LE. Quód est facillumúm facis. LY. Quid id ést? LE.
Amico iniúriam. 630

5 LY. Néque meu<m>st neque fácere didici. <LE.> Indóctus quam docté facis.

Quíd faceres, siquís docuisset te út sic odio essés mihi?

[Qui] Béne quom simulas fácere mihi te, mále facis, male cónsulis.

LY. Égone? LE. Tune. LY. Quíd male facio? LE.
Quód ego nolo, id quóm facis.

LY. Tuaé rei bene cónsúlere cupio. LE. Tú [mihi] es melior quam egomét mihi? 635

10 Sát sapio, satis, ín rem quæ sint méam, ego conspició mihi.

LY. Án id est sapere, ut quí beneficium a béneulente répudies?

LE. Núllum beneficium ésse duco id, quód quoi facias nón placet.

[LY.] Scío ego et sentio ípse quid agam, néque mens offició migrat,

Néc tuis depéllar dictis quín rumori séruiam. 640

15 LY. Quid ais? nam retinéri nequeo quín dicam ea quae prómeres :

Ítan[e] tandem hanc maióres famam trádiderunt tíbi tui,
Út uirtute eorum ánteparta pér flagitium pérderes?

Átque honori pósterorum tuórum ut uindex fíeres,
Tíbi paterque auósque facilem fécit et planám uiam 645

20 Ád quaerundum honórem : tu fecísti ut difficílís foret, Cúlpa maxume ét desidia tuísque stultis móribus.

Praeóptauisti amórem tuom uti uírtuti praepóneres :

Núnc te hoc facto crédís posse optégere errata? aha, nón itast.

Cápe sis uirtutem ánimo et corde expélle desidiám tuo. 650

25 Ín foro operam amícis da, ne in lécto amicae, ut sólitus es.

Átque ego istum agrum tíbi relinqui ób eam rem enixe éxpeto,

Út tibi sit qui té corrigere póssis : ne omnino ínopiam
Cíues obiectáre possint tíbi, quos tu inimicós habes.

LE. Ómnia ego istaec quae tu dixti scío, uel exsignáuero, 655

30 Út rem patriam et glóriam maiórum foedarím meum.

Scíbam ut esse mé deceret, fácere non quibám miser :

Íta ui Veneris uíctus, otio áptus in fraudem íncidi :

Ét tibi nunc, proinde út merere, súmmas habeo grátias.

LY. Át operam péríre meam sic ét te haec [dicta] corde spérnere 660

35 Pérpeti nequeó : simul me píget parum pudére te.

Ét postremo, nísi mi auscultas átque hoc ut dicó facis,

Túte pone té latebis, fácale ne inueniát te honor :

În occulto iacébis, quom te máxume clarúm uoles.

Pérnoui equidem, Lésbonice, ingénium tuom ingenuom
admodum : 665

40 Scío te sponte nón tuapte errásse, sed amorém tibi
Péctus opsurásse : atque ipse amoris teneo omnis uias.
Ítast amor, ballísta ut iacitur : nil sic celerest néque uolat :
Átque is mores hóminum moros ét morosos éfficit.
Mínus placet, magis quód suadetur : quód dissuadetúr, placet. 670

45 Quom ínopiast, cupiás : quando eius cópiast, tum nón uelis.
(Ílle qui aspellit, ís compellit : ílle qui consuadét, uetat.)
Ísanum [et] malúmst [in] hospitio[m] deúorti ad Cupídinem.

Séd te moneo hoc étiam atque etiam, ut réputes quid facere éxpetas.

†Si ístuc conare, út facis indícium, tuom incendés genus :
50 Tum ígitur tibi aqu<ae>erít cupido, génus qui restinguás
tuom. 676

Átque si eris náctus, proinde ut córde amantes súnt cati, Né scintillam quídem relinques, génus qui congliscát tuom.
LE. Fácilest inuentú : datur ignis, tam[en]étsi ab inimicó petas.

Séd tu obiurgans me á peccatis rápi[di]s deteriozem ín uiam.
55 Meám [uis] sororem tibi dem suades síne dote. ha, non cónuenit 681

Mé, qui abusus súm tantam rem pátriam, porro ín dítiis Ésse agrumque habére, egere illam aútem, ut me merito óderit.

Númquam erit aliénis grauis, qui súis se concinnát leuem.
Sícut dixi, fáciám : nolo té iactari diútius. 685

60 <Lv.> Tánto meliust té sororis caúsa egestatem éxsequi, Átque eum agrum me habére quam te, túa qui toleres moénia ?

LE. Nóló ego mihi te tám prospicere, quí meam egestatém leues,

Séd ut inops infámis ne sim : né mihi hanc famam dífferant,

65 Mé germanam meám sororem in cóncubinátum tibi, 690
Sí sine dote <dém>, dedisse mágis quam in matrimónium.

Quís me inprobior pérhibeatur ésse? haec famigerátio

Té honestet, me cónlutulentet. sí sine dote dúxeris,

Tíbi sit emoluméntum honoris, míhi quod obiectént siet.

70 LY. Quid? te dictatórem censes fóre[s], si aps te agrum accéperim? 695

<LE.> Néque uolo neque póstulo neque cénseo : uerúm tamen

Ís est honos hominí pudico, méminisse officiúm suom.

<LY.> Scío equidem te animátus ut sis : uídeo, subolet, séntio.

Íd agis, ut, ubi adfínitatem intérr nos nostram adstrínxeris

75 Átque eum agrum dederís ne<c> quicquam hic tíbi sit qui uitám colas, 700

Éffugias ex úrbe inanis, prófug[ie]us patriam déseras,

Cógnatos, adfínitatem, amícos factis núptiis.

Méa opera hinc protérritum te meáque auaritia aútument :

Íd me commissúrum ut patiar fíeri, ne animum indúxeris.

80 <ST.> Nón enim possum quín exclamem : euge, eúge, Lysitelés, πάλιν. 705

Fácile palmam habés : hic uictus<t> : uícit tua comoédia.

Híc agit magis ex árgumento et uérsus meliorís facit.

Étiam ob stultitiám tuam te úris multa[a]bó mina.

LE. Quid tibi interpellátio aut in cónsilium huc accéssio?

85 ST. Eódem pacto, quo húc accessi, apscéssero. LE. I hac mecúm domum, 710

Lýsiteles : ibi de ístis rebus plúra fabulábimur.

LY. Níl ego in occulto ágere soleo. méus ut animust, éloquar :

Sí mihi tua sorór, ut ego aequom cénseo, ita nuptúm datur, Sine dote, neque tu hinc [h]abituru's, quód meum erit id erít tuom :

90 Sín aliter animátus es,—bene quód agas eueniát tibi, 715
Égo amicus numquám tibi ero alio pácto : si <c> sen-téntiast. [Exeunt Lesbonicus et Lysiteles.]

St. Ábiit [hercle] illequidem. écqúid audis, Lýsiteles?
ego té uolo.

Híc quoque hinc abiit. Stásime, restas sólus. quid ego núnc agam,

Nísi uti sarcinám constringam et clípeum ad dorsum accómmodem,

95 Fúlmentas iubeám suppingi sóccis? non sistí potest. 720
Vídeo caculam militarem mé futurum <h>aud lóngius.

Ít aliquem ad regem ín saginam [m]erus sése coniexit meus, Crédo ad summos béllatores ácrem—fugitorém fore, Ét capturum spólia ibi—illum quí [meo] ero aduorsus uénerit.

100 Égomet autem, quom[e] éxtemplo arcum [mihi] et pháretram et sagittas sumpsero, 725

Cássidem in capút,—dormibo plácide | in tabernáculo.

Ád forum ibo : núdius sextus quoí talentum mútuom

Dédi reposcam, ut hábeam, mecum quód feram, uiáticum.

[Exit Stasimus.]

MEGARONIDES

CALLICLES

Senes II

III 3 ME. Vt míhi rem narras, Cállices, nulló modo

Potest fieri prosus quín dos detur uírgini.

730

CA. Namque hércle honeste fieri ferme nón potest,

Vt eám perpetiar íre in matrimónium

5 Sine dóte, quom eius rém penes me habeám domi.

* * * * *

ME. * * * * *

Paráta dos domíst: nisi expectáre uis,

Vt eám sine dote fráter nuptum cónlocet: 735

10 Post ádeas tute Phíltonem et dotém dare

Te ei dícas, facere id eíus ob amicitíam patris.

Verum hóc ego uereor, ne ístaec pollicitátio

Te in crímen populo pónat atque infámiam.

Non témere dicant té benignum uírgini: 740

15 Datám tibi dotem, ei quám dares, eius á patre:

Ex eá largiri te ílli, neque ita, ut sít data,

Columém te sistere ílli, et detraxe aútument.

Nunc si ópperiri uís aduentum Chármidi,

Perlóngumst: huic ducéndi interea abscésserit 745

20 Lubído; atque ea condício huic uel primáriast.

CA. Nam hercle ómnia istaec uéniunt in mentém mihi.

Vide si hóc utibile mágis atque in rem députas,

Vt [ipsum] ádeam Lesbonícum, edoceam ut rés se habet.

Sed núnc ego adulescénti thensaurum índicem 750

25 Indómito, pleno amóris ac lascíuiæ?

[Ly.] Minumé, minume hercle uéro: nam certó scio,

Locúm quoque illum omnem, úbi situst, coméderit.

Quem fódere metuo, sónitum ne ille exaúdiat,

Neu rem ípsam indaget, dótem dare si díxerim. 755

30 ME. Quo pácto ergo igitur clám dos depromí potest?

CA. Dum occásio ei <rei> réperiat, ínterim

Ab amíco alicunde mútuom argentúm rogem.

ME. Potin ést ab amico alicúnde exorarí? CA. Potest.

<ME.> Gerraé: ne tu illud uérbum actutum inuéneris:

35 'Mihí quidem hercle nón est quod dem mútuom.' 761

CA. 'Malim hércle ut uerum dícas, quam ut des mútuom.'

ME. Sed uíde consilium, sí placet. CA. Quid cónsilist?

ME. Scitum, út ego opinor, cónsilium inuení. CA. Quid est?

ME. Homo cónducatur áliquis iam, quantúm potest, 765
40 [Quasi sít peregrinus. CA. Quid is scit facere póstea?]

Ignóta facie, quae <híc> non uisitáta sit: 768

(Mendáciloquom aliquem <oportet hominem delígi>.)

Falsídicum, confidéntem. CA. Quid tum póstea? 770

ME. Is homo éxornetur gráphice in peregrinúm modum, 767
45 Quasi ád adulescentem á patre ex Seleúcia 771

Veniát, salutem ei núntiet uerbís patris:

Illúm bene gere<re> rem ét ualere et uíuere,

Et eúm rediturum a[u]ctútum. ferat epístulas

Duas: eás nos consignémus, quasi sint á patre. 775

50 Det álteram illi | , álteram dicát tibi

Dare sése uelle. CA. Pérge porro dícere.

ME. Seque aúrum ferre uírgini dotem á patre

Dicát, patremque id iússisse aurum tíbi dare. 779

Tenés iam? CA. Propemodum, átque ausculto pérubens.

55 <ME.> Tum tú igitur demum ádulescenti aurúm dabis, Vbi erít locata uírgo in matrimónium.

CA. Scite hércle sane. ME. Hoc, úbi thensaurum effóderis, Suspícionem ab ádulescente amóueris.

Censébit aurum esse á patre allatúm tibi, 785

60 Tu dé thensauro súmes. CA. Satis scite ét probe:

Quamquam hóc me aetatis sýcophantarí pudet.

Sed epístulas quando ópsignatas ádferet,— 788^a

[Sed quom óbsignatas áttulerit epístulas,] 788^b

Nonne árbitraris éum adulescentem ánuli

65 Patérni signum nósse? ME. Etiam tú taces? 790

Sescéntae ad eam rem caúsae possunt cónligi:

†Illum quem habuit perdidit, alium post fecít nouom.

Iam si ópsignatas nón feret, dici hóc potest,

Apud pórtitores eás resignatás sibi

- 70 Inspéctasque esse. in huius modi negotio 795
 Diém sermone[m] tér[r]ere segnitiés merast :
 Quamuís sermones póssunt longi téxier.
 Abi á<d> then[a]saurum iám confestim clánculum :
 Seruós, ancillas ámoue : atque audín? CA. Quid est?
- 75 ME. Vxórem quoque eampse hanc rem ut celés face. 801 Nam pól tacere númquam quicquamst quód queat.
 Quid núnc stas? quin tu hinc ámoues et té moues?
 Aperí, deprome inde aúri ad hanc rem quód sat est :
 Contínuo operito dénuo : sed clánculum,
- 80 Sicút praecepi[t] : cúntos exturba aédibus. 805
 CA. Ita fáciam. ME. At enim nimis lóngo sermone útimur,
 Diém conficimus, quóm iam properatóst opus.
 Nil ést de signo quó<d> uereare : mé uide.
 Lepidást illa causa, ut cómmemoraui, dícere
- 85 Apud pórtitores ésse inspectas. dénique 810
 Diéi tempus nó n uides? quid illúm putas,
 Natúra illa atque ingénio? iam dudum ébriust.
 Quiduís probare póterit : tum, quod máxumumst, Adférre, non petere híc se dicet. CA. Iám sat est.
- 90 ME. Ego sýcophantam iám conduco dé foro, 815
 [Epístulasque iám consignabó duas,] Eumque húc <ad> adulescéntem meditatúm probe Mittám. CA. Eo ego igitur íntro ad officiúm meum :
 Tu istúc age. ME. Actum réddam nugacíssume. [Exeunt.

ACTVS IV.

CHARMIDES

Senex

- IV 1 Salsípotenti et multípotenti Iouis frátri aetherei Néptuno 820 Laetís lubens laudes ágo et grates, gratíasque habeo e<t>
fluctíbus salsis,
Quos pénes mei <fuit summá> potestas, bonis méis quid foret et meaé uitaé, Quom suís me ex locis in pátriam urbem sic cólumem
reducém faciunt.
- 5 Atque égo, Neptune, tibi ánte alios deos grátias ago atque habeó summas.
Nam te ómnes saeuomqué seuerumque atque áuidis moribus cómmemorant, 825
Spurcíficum, inmanem, intólerandum, uesánum :<ego> contra opera éxpertus.
Nam pól placido te et clémenti meo usqué modo, ut uolui, usús sum in alto.
Atque hánc tuam gloriam iam ánte auribus accéperam—est
nobilis ápud homines—,
- 10 Paupéribus te parcére solitum, diuítes damnare atqué domare.
Abi, laúdo : scis ordíne, ut aequomst, tractáre homines :
hoc dís dignumst : 830
[†Semper mendicis modesti sint.]
Fidús fuisti : infidum ésse iterant. nam apsqué foret te, sat scío in alto

Distráxissent disqué tulissent satellítes tui me miserúm foede 15 Bonaque ómnia item una <méa> mecum passim caéruleos per cámpos :—

Ita iám quasi canes, haud sécus, circumstabánt nauem turbínes uenti : 835

Imbrés fluctusque atqué procellae infénsae frangere málum, Ruere ántemnas, scindére uela—ni túa pax propítia fóret praesto.

Apagē á me sis : dehinc iám certumst otío dare me : satis
 pártum habeo,

20 Quibus aérumnis delúctai, filío dum diuitiás quaero.

Sed quís hic est, qui in plateam íngreditur 840^a

Cum nóuo ornatu speciéque simul? 840^b

Pol quámquam domi cupio, ópperiar :

Quam hic rém agat, animum aduórtam.

SYCOPHANTA

CHARMIDES

Senex

IV 2 Sy. Huíc ego die[i] nomén Trinummo fácio : nam ego operám meam

Tríbus nummis hodié locaui ad ártis nugatórias.

Áduenio ex Seleúcia, Macédonia, Asia atque Árabia, 845

Quás ego neque oculís nec pedibus úmquam usurpauí meis.

5 Víden egestas quíd negoti dát homini miseró mali?

Quín ego nunc subigór trium numm[or]um caúsa, ut hasce epístulas

Dícam ab eo homine me áceppisse, quem égo qui sit homo néscio

Néque noui, neque, nátus necne is fúerit, id solidé scio.

Ch. Pól hiquidem fungíno generest : cápíte se totúm tegit. 851

10 Hílurica faciés uidetur hóminis : eo ornatu áduenit.

Sy. Ílle qui me condúxit, ubi condúxit, abduxít domum:
 Quae uoluit mihi díxit, docuit ét praemonstrauít prius, Quó modo quidque agerém. nunc adeo síquid ego addidero ámplius, 855

Éo conductor mélius de me núgas conciliáuerit.

15 Vt ille me exornáuit, ita sum ornátus: argentum hóc
 facit.

Ípse ornamenta á chorago haec súmpsit suo perículo:
 Núnc ego si potero órnamētis hóminem circumducere,
 Dábo operam ut me esse ípsum plane sýcophantam séntiat.
 <CH.> Quám magis specto, mínus placet mihi haec hóminis facies: míra sunt, 861

20 Ni illic homost aut dórmitator aút sector zonárius.
 Lóca contemplat, círcumspectat sése atque aedis nóscitat:
 Crédo edepol, quo móx furatum uéniat, speculatúr loca.
 Mágis lubidost ópseruare quíd agat: ei rei operám dabo. 865 <Sy.> Hás regiones démonstrauit míhi ille conductór meus:

25 Ápud illas aedis sistendae míhi sunt sycophántiae.
 Fóres pu<l>tabo. CH. Ad nóstras aedis hícquidem hab[e]at rectám uiam:
 Hércle ópinor mi áduenienti hac nóctu agitandumst uígílias.
 Sy. Áperite hoc, aperíte. heus, ecquis his fóribus tutelám gerit? 870

CH. Quíd, adulescens, quaéris? quid uis? quíd istas pultas? <Sy.> Heú<s>, senex,

30 Cénsus quom <sum>, iúratori récte rationém dedi.
 Lésbonicum hic ádulescentem quaéro, in his regiónibus
 Vbi habitet, et item álterum ad istanc cápitis albitúdinem:
 Cálliclem aiebát uocari qui hás dedit mihi epístulas. 875
 <CH.> Meúm gnatum hícquidem Lésbonicum quaérit et amicúm meum,

35 Quóí ego liberósque bonaque cómmendaui, Cálliclem.

Sy. Fác me, si s<c>is, cértiore<m>, hisce hómines ubi habitént, pater.

CH. Quid eos quaeris? aut quis es? aut únde's? aut unde áduenis?

Sy. Múlta simul rogítas: nescioquid éxpédiam potísumum. 88o

Si[n] únum quidquid síngillatim et plácide percontábere, 4o Ét meum nomen ét mea facta et ítinera ego faxó scias.

CH. Fáciam ita ut uis: ágedum, nomen tuóm primum memorá mihi.

<Sy.> Mágnum facinus íncipissis pétere. CH. Quid ita?

Sy. Quía, pat<e>r[em],

Si ánte lucem ire <hércle> occipias á meo primo nómine, Cóncubium sit nóctis, prius quam ad póstreum peruéneris.

45 CH. Ópus †factost uiático ad tuom nómen, ut tu praédicas. 887

<Sy.> Ést minusculum álterum, quasi †iuxillum uinárium.

(94) <CH.> Quid est tibi nomén, adulescens? Sy. 'Páx,' id est nomén mihi:

(95) Hóc cotidiánu<m>st. CH. Edepol nómen nugatórium: 89o

(96) Quási dicas, siquíd crediderim tíbi, 'pax'—periisse fílico.

5o Híc homo solide sýcophantast. quíd ais tu, adulescéns?

Sy. Quid es<t>?

CH. Éloquere, isti tíbi quid homines débent, quos tu quaéritas?

Sy. Páter istius ádulescentis dédit has duas mihi epístulas, Lésbonic is mihist amicus. CH. Téneo hunc manu-festárium: 895

Mé sibi epistulás dedisse dícit: ludam hominém probe.

55 Sy. Íta ut occepi, si ánimum aduortas, dícam. CH. Dabo operám tibi.

Sy. Hánc me iussit Lésbonico suó gnato dare epístulam, Ét item hanc alterám suo amico Cállicli iussít dare.

CH. Míhi quoque edepol, quom híc nug[ur]atur, cóntra nugarí lubet. 900

Vbi ipse erat? Sv. Bene rém gerebat. CH. Érgo ubi?
Sv. In Seleúcia.

60 CH. Áb ipson istas áccepisti? Sv. E mánibus dedit mi ipse ín manus.

CH. Quá faciest homó? Sv. Sesquipede quíd[d]amst quam tu lóngior.

<CH.> Haéret haec res, síquidem ego apsens súm qu[i]a<m> praesens lóngior.

Nóuistin hominém? Sv. Ridicule rógitas, quicum uná cibum 905

Cápere soleo. CH. Quíd est ei nomen? Sv. Quód [d]edepol hominí probo.

65 CH. Lúbet audire. Sv. Illi édepol—illi—ílli—uae miseró míhi.

<CH.> Quíd est negoti? Sv. Déuorauí nómen inpru-déns modo.

CH. Nón placet qui amícos intra déntes conclusó<s> habet.

Sv. Átque etiam modo uórsabatur míhi in labris pri-móribus. 910

CH. Témperi huic hodie ánteueni. Sv. Téneor manifestó miser.

70 CH. Iám recommentátu's nomen? Sv. Déum hercle me atque hominúm pudet.

CH. Víde modo ut hominem nóueris. Sv. Tam quám me: fieri istúc solet,

Quód in manu teneás atque oculis uídeas, id desíderes.

Líttēris recómmīniscar: <C> ést principium nómini. 915

<CH.> Cállī[ci]as? Sv. Non ést. CH. Callippus?
Sv. Nón est. CH. Callidémidēs?

75 Sv. Nón est. CH. Callínícus? Sv. Non est. CH. Cál-limarchus? Sv. Níl agis:

Néque adeo edepol flócci facio, cuándo egomet meminí mihi.

CH. Át enim multi Lésbonici súnť hic : nisi nomén patris Dices, non monstráre istos possum hómines quos tu quaéritas. 920

Quód ad exemplumst? cóniectura sí reperire póssumus.

80 <SY.> Ád hoc exemplumst :—<CH.> án Chares, an Chármides? <SY.> Enim Chármides.

[SY.] Ém, istic erit : qui istúm di perdant. CH. Díxi ego iam dudúm tibi :

Té potius bene dícere aequomst hómini amico, quám male.

SY. Sátin inter labra átque dentes látuit uir minumí preti?

CH. Né male loquere apsénti amico. SY. Quíd ergo ille ignauíssumus 926

85 Míhi latitabat? CH. Si áppellasses, réspondisset nómini. Séd ipse ubist? SY. Pol illúm reliqui ad Rhádamantem in Cercópia [insula].

<CH.> Quí<s> homost me insipiéntior, qui ipse, égomet ubi sim, quaéritem?

Séd nil discondúcit huic rei. quíd ais? quid hoc quod té rogo? 930

Quós locos adísti? SY. Nimium míri[s]modis mirábiles.

90 CH. Lúbet audire, nísi molestumst. SY. Quín discupio dícere.

Ómnium primum ín Pontum aduecti[a] Árabiam terrám sumus.

CH. É<h>o, an etiam Arabiást in Ponto? SY. Est: nón illa ubi tus gígnitur,

Séd ubi apsint<h>iúm fit atque cuníla gallinácea. 935

CH. Nímium graphicum hunc núgatore. séd ego sum insipiéntior,

95 Qui, égomet unde rédeam, hunc rogitem, quae égo sciam atque hic nésciat :

(93) Nísi quia lubet éxperiri, quo éuasurust dénique.

(97) Séd quid ais? quo inde ísti porro? Sv. Si ánimum aduortes, éloquar :

Ád caput amnis, qu[d] de caelo exóritur sub soliό Iouis.

CH. Súb solio Iouis? Sv. Ita dico. CH. E caélo?

Sv. Atque <e> mediό quidem. 941

100 CH. Ého, an etiam in caelum éscendisti? Sv. Immo hóriola aduectí sumus, Ųsque aqua aduorsá per amnem. CH. E<h>o, an tu étiam uidistí Iouem?

<Sv.> [C]Álii di s<s>e ad uíllam aiebant séruis depromptúm cibum.

Deínde porro—CH. Deínde porro nólo quicquam praédices.

Sv. <Séd—CH. Abeo> hercle, si és molestus. nám pudicum néminem 946 105 <Páx, refer>re opórtet, qui aps terra ád caelum peruénit.

Sv. <Fácia>m ita ut te uéllé uideo. séd monstra hosce hominís mihi, <Qu>ós ego quaero, quíbus me oportet hás deferre epístulas.

CH. Quíd ais? tu nunc sí forte eum[i]pse[m] Chármidem conspéxeris, 950

Íllum quem tibi istás dedisse cómmemoras epístulas,

110 Nó[ue]risne hominem? Sv. Né tu me edepol árbitrare béluam, Quíquidem non nouísse possim quícum aetatem exégerim.

Án ille tam esset stúltus, qui mihi mílle nummum créderet Phílipp[e]um, quod me aurúm deferre iússit ad gnatúm suom 955

Atque ad amicum Cálliclem, quoi rem aí[e]bat mandasse híc suam?

115 Míhi concrederét, ni me ille ét ego illum nosse<m> á<d>probe?

CH. Énim uero ego nunc sýcophantae huic sýcophantari
uolo,

Si hunc possum illo mílle nummum Phílippu<m> ci<rc>u[e]mdúcere,

Quód sibi me dedísse dixit. quem égo qui sit homo nésco Néque oculis ante hunc diem umquam uídi, eine aurum créderem? 961

120 Quof, si capitis rés si[e]t, nummum númquam credam plúmbeum.

Ádgredundust híc homo mi astu. heus, Páx, te tribus uerbís uolo.

Sv. Vél trecentis. CH. Háben tu id aurum, quód accepisti a Chármide?

Sv. Átque etiam Philipp[e]úm, numeratum illíus in mensá manu, 965

Mílle nummum. CH. Némpe ab ipso id áaccepisti Chármide?

125 Sv. Mírum quin ab auo eíus aut proauo accíperem, qui sunt mórtui.

CH. Ádulescens, cedodum ístuc aurum míhi. Sv. Quod ego aurum dém tibi?

<CH.> Quód a me te accepísse fassu's. Sv. Áps te accepisse? CH. Íta loquor.

Sv. Quís tu homo's[t]? CH. Qui mílle nummum tíbi dedi ego sum Chármides. 970

Sv. Néque edepol tu is és neque hodie is úmquam eris—auro huic quidem.

130 Ábi sis, nugatór: nugari nógatori póstulas.

CH. Chármides ego súm. Sv. Nequiquam herclé's: nam nil aurí fero.

Nímis argute | óbresisti in eáipse occasiúncula:

Póstquam ego me aurum férre dixi, póst tu factu's Chármides: 975

Príus tu non eras, quam aúri feci méntionem. níl agis :

¹³⁵ Proín tu te, itidem ut chármidatus es, †rursum rechármida.

CH. Quís ego sum igitur, síquidem is non sum quí sum?

Sy. Quid id ad me áttinet?

Dúm ille ne sis quem égo esse nolo, sís mea causa quí lubet.

Príus non is eras quí eras : nunc is fáctu's qui tum nón eras.

CH. Áge siquid agis. <Sy.> Quíd ego agam? CH.

Aurum rédde. Sy. Dormitás, senex. 981

¹⁴⁰ <CH.> Fássu's Charmidém dedisse aurúm tibi. Sy.

Scriptúm quidem.

CH. Próperas an non próperas [ab]ire actútum ab his regiónibus,

Dórmitor, príus quam ego hic te iúbeo mulcarí male?

<Sy.> Quam ób rem? CH. Quia illum quem émentitus és, ego sum ipso Chármides, 985

Quém tibi epistulás dedisse aíébas. Sy. Eho, quaeso án tu is es?

¹⁴⁵ CH. Ís enim uero sum. Sy. Aín tu tandem? is ípsusne's?

CH. Aio. Sy. Ípsus es?

CH. Ípsus, inquam, Chármides sum. Sy. Ergo ípsusne's?

CH. Ipsíssumus.

Áb<in> hinc ab oculís? Sy. Enim uero sério, quoniam áduenis,—

Vápulais méo arbitrato ét nouorum aedílium. 990

<CH.> Át etiam maledícis? Sy. Immo, sáluos quando-quidem áduenis,—

¹⁵⁰ Dí te perdant, sí te flocci fácio an periíssé<s> prius.

Égo ob hanc operam argéntum accepi, té macto infortúnio.

Céterum qui sís, qui non sis, flóccum non intérdúm.

Íbo, ad illum renúntiabo quí mihi tris nummós dedit, 995

Út sciat se pérdidisse. ego ábeo. male uiue ét uale :

¹⁵⁵ Quí di te omnes áduenientem péregre perdant, Chármides.

[Exit Sycophanta.]

CHARMIDES

Senex

- IV 3 Postquam illic hinc abiit, póst loquendi líbere Vidétur tempus uénisse atque occásio.
 Iam dúdum meum ille péctus pungit áculeus, 1000
 Quid illí negoti fúerit ante aedís meas.
 5 Nam epístula illa míhi concenturiát metum
 In córde et illud mílle nummum, quám rem agat.
 Numquam édepol temere tínnit <tint>innábulum:
 Nisi qui illud tractat aút mouet, mutú<m>s<t>, tacet.
 Sed quís hic est, qui huc in pláteam cursuram íncipit? 1006
 10 Lubet óbseruare quíd agat: huc concéssero.

STASIMVS

CHARMIDES

SeruosSenex

- IV 4 ST. Stásime, fac te própere celerem, récipe te ad dominúm domum,
 Né subito metus éxoriatur scápulis stultitiá[m] <tua>.
 Ádde gradum, adproperá: iam dudum fáctumst, quom abistí domo. 1010
 Cáue sis tibi, ne búbuli in te cóttabi crebrí crepent,
 5 Si áb[i]eris ab eri quaéstione: né destiteris cúrrere.
 Écce hominem te, Stásime, nil: sátin in thermipólio Cóndalium es oblítus, postquam thérmpotasti gútturem?
 Récipe te et recúrre petere <ré> recenti. CH. Huic, quísqvis est, 1015
 Gúrgulíost exércitor, is hunc hómínem cursurám docet.
 10 ST. Quíd, homo nili, nón pudet te? tríbusne te potéris
 Mémoia<m> esse oblítum? an uero, quía cum frugi |
 hómínibus
 Íbi bibisti, qui áb alieno fáciie cohiberént manus?—

†Truchus fuit, Cerconicus, Crinnus, Cercobulus, Cólلابus, Óculicrepidae, crúri[i]crepidae, férriteri mastígiae:— 1021

15 Ínter eosne homínés condalium té redipisci póstulas?

†Éorum <quiuís> súrrupuit currénti cursorí solum.

CH. Íta me di ament, gráphicum furem. St. Quíd ego quod períit petam?

Nísi etiam labórem ad damnum ápponam epithecám ínsuper.

Quín tu quod períit periísse dúcis? cape uorsóriam: 1026

20 Récipe te ad erum. <CH.> Nón fugitiuost híc homo: commeminít domi.

<St.> V́tinam ueteres hómín<um mores>, uéteres par-simóníae

Pótius <in> maióre honore hic éssent quam morés mali.

<CH.> Di ímmortales, básilica hicquidem fácinora in-ceptát loqui: 1030

Vétera quaerit, uétera amare hunc móre[m] maiorúm scias.

25 St. Nám nunc mores níl faciunt quód licet, nisi quód lubet.

Ámbitio iam móre sanctast, líberast a légibus:

Scúta iacere fúgereque hostis móre habent licéntiam:

Pétere honorem pró flagitio móre fit. <CH.> Morem ínprobum. 1035

<St.> Strénu<os>os praéterire móre fit. <CH.> Ne-quám quidem.

30 <St.> Móres leges pérduxerunt iám in potestatém suam, Mágisque is sunt obnóxiose quám parentes líberi<s>.

Ea<é> miserae etiam ad párietem sunt fíxae clauis férreis,

V́bi malos morés adfigi nímio fuerat aéquius. 1040

CH. Lúbet adire atque áppellare hunc: uérum ausculto pér-lubens

35 [S]Ét metuo, si cónpellabo, ne áliam rem occipiát loqui.

St. Néque isti<s> quicquam lége sanctumst: léges mori séruíunt, Móres autem rápere properant quá sacrum qua públicum.

<CH.> Hércle istis malám rem magnam móribus dignúmst dari. 1045

<St.> Nón[ne] hoc publice ánimum aduorti: nam íd genus hominum ómnibus

40 Vniuorsis ést aduorsum atque ómni populo mále facit.

Mále fidem seruándo illis quoque ábrogant etiám fidem

Quí nil meriti: quíppe eorum ex ingénio ingenium horúm probant.

Hóc qui in mentem uénerit mihi? re ípsa modo com-mónitus sum. 1050

Síquoi mutuóm quid dederis, fít pro proprio pérditum:

45 Quóm repetas, inimícum amicum benefício inueniás tuo.

(Sí mage exigere occípias, duarum rérum exoritur óptio: Vél illud quod credíderis perdas, uél illum amicum amíseris.)

CH. Méus est hicquidem Stásimus seruus. St. Nam égo talentum mútuom 1055

Quoi dederam, talénto inimicum mi émi, amicum uéndidi.

50 Séd ego sum insipiéntior, qui rébus curem públicis

Pótius quam, id quod próximumst, meo térgo tutelám geram:

Éo domum. CH. Heus tu, asta ílico: audi, heús tu.

St. Non sto. CH. Té uolo.

St. Quíd, si ego me te uélle nolo? CH. Aha nímium, Stasime, saéuiter. 1060

St. Émere meliust quoi ímperes. CH. Pol ego émi atque argentúm dedi:

55 Séd si non dicto aúdiens est, quíd ago? St. Da magnúm malum.

CH. Béne mones: ita fácere certumst. St. Nísi quidem es obnóxius.

CH. Sí bonus es, obnóxius sum: sín secus es, faciam út iubes.

ST. Quid id ad me attinet, bonisne séruis tu utare án malis? 1065

CH. Quia boni malique in ea re párs tibist. ST. Partem álteram

60 Tíbi permitto, illam álteram apud me, quód bonist, appónito.

CH. Sí eris meritus, flet. respice húc ad me: ego sum Chármides.

ST. Hém, quis est qui méntionem fácit homo hominis óptumi?

CH. Ípsus homo optumús. ST. Mare, terra, caélum, di, uostrám fidem, 1070

Sátin ego oculis pláne uideo? estne ípsus an non ést? is est.

65 Cérté is est, is ést profecto. o mí ere exoptatíssume, Sálué. CH. Salué, Stásime. ST. Saluom té—CH. Scio et credó tibi.

Séd omitte alia: hoc míhi responde: líberi quid agúnt mei, Quós reliqui hic filium atque fíliam? ST. Viuónt, ualent.

<CH.> Némpe uterque? ST. Vtérque. CH. Di me sáluom et seruatúm uolunt. 1076

70 Cétera intus ótiose pércontabor quae uolo:

Eámus intro: séquere. ST. Quo tu té agis? CH. Quonam nísi domum?

ST. Hícine nos habitáre censes? CH. V́binam ego alibi cénseam?

ST. Iám—CH. Quid 'iam'? ST. non súnť nostrae aedis ístae. CH. Quid ego ex te aúdio? 1080

ST. Véndidit tuos nátus aedis—CH. Périi. ST. prae-sentáriis

75 Árgenti mínis numeratis. CH. Quót? ST. Quadraginta. CH. Óccidi.

Quís eas emit? ST. Cállicles, quói tuám rem commen-dáueras:

Ís habitatum huc cómmigrauit nósque exturbauít foras.

CH. Vbi nunc filiús meus habitat? St. Híc in hoc postículo. 1085

80 CH. Mále disperii. St. Crédidi aegre tíbi id, ubi audissés, fore.

CH. Égo miserrumís periclis súm per maria máxuma
Véctus, capitalí peric[u]lo pér praedones plúrumos
Mé seruauí, sálu<o>s redii: núnc hic disperí miser, Própter eosdem quórum causa fúi hac aetate exércitus: 1090 85 Ádimit animam mi aégritudo: Stásime, tene me. St. Vísne
aquam

Tíbi petam? CH. Res quom ánimam agebat, túm esse offusa<m> opórtuit.

CALLICLES CHARMIDES STASIMVS

Senes II

Seruos

IV 5 CA. Quid hoc híc clamoris aúdio ante aedís meas?

CH. O Cállices, o Cállices, °o Cállices,
Qualíne amico méa commendauí bona? 1095

CA. Probo ét fideli et fído et cum magná fide.

5 Et sálue et saluom te áduenisse gaúdeo.

CH. Credo, ómnia istaec sí ita sunt ut praédicas.

Sed quis istest tuos ornátus? CA. Ego dicám tibi:

Thensaúrum effodiebam íntus, dotem, fíliae 1100

Tuae quae daretur. séd íntus narrabó tibi

10 Et hóc et alia: séquere. CH. Stasime. St. Em. CH.
Strénue

Curre ín Piraeu[u]m atque únum curriculúm face.

Vidébis iam illic náuem qua aduectí sumus.

Iubéto Sa[n]gariónem quae imperáuerim 1105

Curáre ut efferántur, et tu itó simul.

15 Solútu<m>st portitóri iam portórium.

Nil ést mora<e>. cit<o> ámbula: actutúm redi.

ST. Illíc sum atque hic sum. CA. Séquere tu hac me intró. CH. Sequor. [Exeunt Callicles et Charmides.

ST. Hic méo ero amicu<s> sólus firmus réstitit, 1110
Neque démutauit ánimum de firmá fide,

20 Quamquám labores múlto ob rem et líberos
<Abséntis mei eri> eum égo cepisse cénseo.

Sed hic únus, ut ego súspicor, seruát fidem.

[Exit Stasimus.

ACTVS V.

LYSITELES

Adulescens

- V 1 Hic homóst omnium hominum praéciuos, 1115
Voluptátibus gaudiisque ántepotens.
Ita cómmoda quae cupio éueniunt,
Quod ago ádsequitur, subest, súbsequitur :
5 Ita gaúdiis gaudium súppeditat.
Módo me Stasimus Lésbonici séruos conuenít <domi> :
Ís mihi dixit súom erum peregre huc áduenisse Chármidem. 1121
Núnc mihi is propere cónueniundust, út, quae cum eius fílio Égi, ei rei fundús pater sit pótior. eo <quantum potest>.
10 Séd fores hae sonitú suo mihi moram óbiciunt incómmode.

CHARMIDES CALLICLES

LYSITELES

Senes II

Adulescens

- V 2 CH. Néque fuit neque erít neque esse quémquam hominem in ter<ra>[dum] árbitror, 1125
Quoí fides fidélitasque amícum erga aequiperét tuam :
Nam éxaedificauísset me ex hisce aédibus, apsque té foret.
CA. Síquid amicum ergá bene feci aut cónsului fidéliter, 5 Nón uideor meruísse laudem, cúlpa caruisse árbitror.
Nám beneficium hómini proprium quód datur, pro <suo> súmpserit : 1130
Quód datur utendum, íd repetundi cópiast, quandó uelis.

CH. Ést ita ut tu dícis. sed ego hoc né<q>ueo mirarí satis,
Eúm sororem déspondisse suam ín tam fortem fámiliam.

10 CA. Lýsiteli quidém P<h>iltonis filio. LY. Enim me nóminat.

CH. Fámiliam optumam óccupauit. LY. Quíd ego cesso hos cónloqui? 1135

Séd maneam etiam, opínor: namque hoc cómmodum orditúr loqui.

CH. Váh. CA. Quid est? CH. Oblítus intus dúdum tibi sum dícere:

Módo mihi aduenientí nugator quídam occessit óbuiam,

15 Nímis pergraphicus sýcophanta. is mílle nummum se aúr<e>um

Meó datu tibi férre et gnato Lésbonico ai[e]bát meo: 1140

Quem égo ne<c> qui esset nóram, neque eum ante úsquam conspexí prius.

Séd quid rides? CA. Méo adlegatu uénit, quasi qui aurúm mihi

Férret aps te, quód darem tuae gnátae dotem: ut filius

20 Túos, quando illi a mé darem, esse allátum id aps te créderet,

Neú qui[s] rem ipsam pósset intellégere, [et] thensaurúm
tuom 1145

Mé esse penes, atque éum [a] me lege pópuli patrium pósceret.

CH. Scíte edepol. CA. Megarónides commúnis hoc meus ét tuos

Bénevolens comméntust. CH. Quin conlaúdo consilium ét probó.

25 <LY.> Quíd ego ineptus, dúm sermonem uéreor interrúmpere,

Sólus sto nec quód conatus sum ágere ago? hominis cónloquar. 1150

CH. Quís hic est, qui huc ad nós incedit? LY. Chármidem socerúm suum Lýsteles salútat. <CH.> Di dent tíbi, Lysiteles, quae uelis.

CA. Nón ego sum dignús salutis? LY. Ímmo salue, Cállicles.

30 Húnc priorem aequómst me habere: [CA.] túnica propior pállios.

CA. Deós uolo consília uostra <uóbis> recte uórtere. 1155 <CH.> Fíliam meam tíbi desponsam esse aúdio. LY.
Nisi tú neuís.

CH. Ímmo haud nolo. LY. Spónden ergo tuám gnatam uxorém mihi?

CH. Spóndeo, et mille aúri Philippum dótis. LY. Dotem níl moror.

35 <CH.> Si ílla tibi placét, placenda dós quoquest quam dát tibi.

Póstremo quod uís non duces, nísi illud quod non uís feres.

<CA.> Iús hic orat. LY. Ímpetrabit té aduocato atque árbitro. 1161

[LY.] Ístac lege fíliam tuam spónden mihi uxorém dari?

CH. Spóndeo. CA. Et ego spóndeo idem hoc. LY. Oh sáluete, adfinés mei.

40 CH. Átque edepol sunt rés, quas propter tíbi tamen suscénsui.

LY. Quid ego feci? CH. Meúm 'corrumpi quía perpersu's fílium. 1165

LY. Si íd mea uoluntáte factumst, <ést> quod mihi suscénseas.

Séd sine me hoc aps te ímpetrare quód uolo. CH. Quid id és<t>? LY. <S>cies:

Síquid stulte fécit, ut ea míssa facias ómnia.

45 Quid quassas capút? CH. Cruciatur cór mihi, et metuo.

LY. Quidnam id est?

CH. Quóm ille i[s]tast ut ésse nolo, id crúciór: metuo, sí tibi

1170

Dénegem quod me óras, ne te léuiorem erga mé putes.

[CH.] Nón grauabor: fáciam ita ut uis. LY. Próbus es:
eo, ut illum éuocem.

CH. Míserumst male proméríta, ut meríta súnt, s ulcisci nón licet.

50 LY. Áperite hoc, aperíte propere, et Lésbonicum, sí domist, Fóras [e]uocate: ita súbitumst, propere quód eum conuentúm uolo.

1175

<LESBONICVS LYSITELES CALLICLES CHARMIDES>

Adulcentes II

Senes II

V 3 LE. Quís homo tam tumúltuoso sónitu me exciuit [subito] foras?

LY. Béneuolens tuos átque amicus. LE. Sátine salue?
díc mihi.

LY. Récte: tuom patrém rediisse sáluom peregre gaúdeo.

LE. Quís id ait? LY. Ego. LE. Tún uidisti? LY. Et túte item uideás licet.

5 LE. Ó pater, patér mi, salue. CH. Sálue multum, gnáte mi.

1180

LE. Síquid tibi, patér, laboris—CH. Níl euenit, né time:
Béne re gesta sáluos redeo—sí tu modo frugi ésse uis.

Haéc tibi pactast Cállicli <huius> fília. LE. Ego ducám, pater,

Ét eam et siquam aliám iubebis. CH. Quámquam tibi suscénsui,

10 [CA.] Míseria <una> uní quidem hominist ádfatim. CA.
Immo huíc parumst:

1185

Nám si pro peccátis centum dúcat uxoris, parumst.

LE. Át iam posthac témporabo. CH. Dícis, si faciés modo.

LY. Númquid causaest quín uxorem crás domum ducam?

CH. Óptimumst [licet].

[CA.] Tú in perendinúm paratus sís ut ducas. Ω. Plaúдите.

[Exeunt omnes.]

NOTES.

Argumentum. The metrical summaries of the contents of the Plautine plays are of two sorts, acrostich and non-acrostich. We have the acrostich arguments of all the plays except the Bacchides. The non-acrostich arguments survive to five plays only (Amph. Aul. Mil. Merc. Pseud.). They are of 15 lines each, except that to the Amphitruo; which is of 10.

The acrostichs are the earlier and the better in knowledge of Plautine usage and versification. They are considered to belong to the best period of Plautine studies in the 7th cent. A.U.C., the date to which the Prologues belong, and may on the suggestion of F. Osann be ascribed to Aurelius Opilius (84 B.C.), who is mentioned by Gellius III. 3. 1 as the author of 'indices' on Plautus.

The non-acrostichs are later and rougher. They may be ascribed to the grammarian C. Sulpicius Apollinaris of Carthage (150 A.D.), who wrote the arguments to the books of the Aeneid and to Terence.

1. Thensaurum, the 'treasure' from which Philemon's play was named. For the spelling Thensaurus=θησαυρός cf. Scaptensula=Σκαπτῆ ὕλη or Σκαπτῆσύλη, Chersonensus=Χερσώνησος, Megalensia=Μεγαλήσια. The n appears in these words not so much to represent η as to come from the tendency which gives such misspellings as occansio for occasio. See Lindsay, Latin Language pp. 69 and 136.

The last syllable of abstrusum is not elided, i.e. there is hiatus in caesura.

3. filius=Lesbonicus.

4. et, 'even.' This sense of et=etiam is not Plautine.

5. poscitur, 'Lesbonicus' sister is asked in marriage without a dowry.' Cf. v. 384.

6. minus quo cum inuidia=ut cum minore inuidia.

8. hunc is the Sycophant whose mission is explained in v. 7. Ut uenit followed by ut rediit is clumsy.

9. quoniam nubunt liberi, i.e. Charmides' daughter is married to Lysiteles, his son Lesbonicus to Callicles' daughter. On this use of nubere applied to a man see Nonius p. 143 'Nubere ueteres non solum mulieres, sed etiam uiros dicebant, ut nunc Itali dicunt. Pomponius, Nupsit posterius dotatae, uetulae, uaricosae, uafrae.'

Prologus. It has been pointed out in the Introduction that the Prologue is outside the play proper, and is usually delivered by a young actor in a special dress (ornatus prologi), that most of the Prologues we possess are post-Plautine, but that this Prologue to the Trinummus is, at least as a whole, from the hand of Plautus himself.

This is one of the cases where the Prologue is delivered by some allegorical person who does not appear in the action of the play. Thus we have Arcturus in the Prologue of the Rudens, Auxilium in the Cistellaria, and Lar Familiaris in the Aulularia. The only difference in this case is that there are two allegorical persons, Luxuria and her daughter Inopia, but as Inopia speaks only a single line and then enters the house, the departure from the usual practice is not great. Such use of allegorical persons in Prologues was common in Menander, and was taken by him from the tragic stage. Thus compare with this scene the similar scene in the sphere of Tragedy, viz. Eur., Herc. Fur., where Iris sends Lyssa (Madness) into the house of Heracles.

The difficulties and peculiarities of this Prologue are excellently discussed by Trautwein, pp. 23—32.

The curtain is lowered. On the stage in front of the houses are seen Luxuria and her daughter Inopia, who is sent into the house occupied by Lesbonicus to do her work.

1. fungaris. The rule by which these deponent verbs are regularly followed by the abl. (instr.) is not yet fixed in Plautus' time. uti takes generally the abl., but sometimes the acc., at least where the object is neuter, abuti the acc., frui once in Plautus with abl., in Terence four times with abl., once with acc., potiri in Plautus twice with gen., twice with acc., twice with abl. Fungor in both Plautus and Terence regularly takes the acc. Plautus has this phrase munus fungi six times, Terence has officium fungi five times, and officio fungi only once.

2. finem fore quem dicam, a popular and colloquial expression instead of qui finis futurus sit, common in Plautus with dicere, praedicare, arbitrari and credere.

3. adest, sc. finis itineris or sequendi.

em, 'there.' Em may be the imperative of ēmo, lit. 'take,' a sense which suits well in phrases like em tibi, 'take that' (in giving a blow) as Asin. 431 em ergo hoc tibi, or it may be the adverbial accus. of is, which in old Latin is em, also perhaps properly spelt im. With this line cf. Merc. 313 si umquam uidistis pictum amatorem, em illic est. Joined with ille, em gives ellum, ellos just as ecce gives eccillum, eccillos &c. Em as an interjection is not elided before illae.

nunciam scanned as a trisyllable: so etiam and quoniam. Brix derives it from nunci (cf. vuvl) + the adverbial ending am. The distinction between nunciam and iam nunc is that nunciam refers to the immediate present and future 'in a minute,' 'directly,' iam nunc to the past and present 'now already.'

Inopia enters the house. Luxuria turns and addresses the spectators.

4. erret, a metaphor from straying from the right path amplified and continued in deducam in uiam, while that the phrase is metaphorical is shewn by the addition of paucis, 'in a few words.'

5. operam dare, 'to give me your attention' = audire. So Capt. Prol. 6 id ego hic apud uos proloquar, si operam datis. The bare infin. instead of acc. and infin. (uos dare). Cf. v. 956.

Notice dare not uos daturus esse, i.e. pres., not fut. infin., after promittitis. This use of the pres. instead of the fut. infin. is common in Plautus and old Latin after such verbs as promitto, spero, uoueo, minor, iuro, dico, nego and the like. Cf. v. 755 dotem dare si dixerim, v. 736 &c.

6. siet is even in Plautus' time archaic, and the forms siem, sies, siet are regularly used only at the end of the line. The old Latin siem, classical sim (= ἐσθην = ἐλην), is properly an optative form, as are possim, edim, uelim, duim, perduim, &c., and some -a forms as creduam. Cf. v. 102 comedis.

7. huc, pointing to the house which Inopia has entered.

8. nomen Luxuriae indidit. By the regular attraction Luxuriae is dat. the case of mihi, as in est mihi nomen Balbo (not Balbus) and Asin. Prol. 10 huic nomen Graece Onagost fabulae, where Onago is dat. by the same attraction. By nomen indidit we are to understand, not that Plautus invented the scene, but that he has given Τρυφή and Ἀποπία of the original their Latin names.

9. Spengel, to avoid the hiatus, proposes tum hanc autem = δ' αὖ.

10. introierit should be written as one compound word. For thus the o is not elided. If elision is to take place, the two words intro and ire are written separately. So circumire and circum ire, &c.

11. accipite, 'listen,' 'let me tell you.' And so often date = 'tell me.'

uociuas, 'empty,' 'disengaged,' the archaic form of the later uacuas used by Plautus. Cf. Pseud. 469 fac sis uociuas aedis aurium; uocatio for uacatio, notare for natare in vulgar Latin, and Cas. 527, where Plautus puns on uocare and uacare. See Munro's note on Lucr. I. 520.

12. adulescens = Lesbonicus. Hisce, hosce, hasce before a vowel, hi, his, hos, has before a consonant.

13. me adiutrice, i.e. meo auxilio, 'by my help.'

14. quoniam, i.e. quom iam, 'now that' = postquam, i.e. it is used by Plautus in a temporal sense. Cf. vv. 112 and 149.

qui is the old abl. (instr.) of the relative, the interrogative, and the indefinite pronoun, used of all genders (e.g. it is fem. in v. 15), and sometimes of both numbers. Here it is abl. of the rel. = 'whereby,' 'by means of which he could support me.' The imperf. subj. aleret follows the historic pres. uideo, because this is virtually the same as uidi. Cf. Bacch. 290 quoniam sentio quae res gereretur, nauem extemplo statuimus.

relicui, part. gen. after nil, 'nothing of a balance' = 'nothing left': relicuus in Plautus is always quadrisyllabic.

15. exigat, pres. subj. after the past tense dedi, a sequence not uncommon in Plautus where the purpose is future, the result represented as still continuing, and found sometimes where this is not the case. Cf. Amph. 195 me a portu praemisit domum, ut haec nuntiem, Bacch. 352 ita feci, ut auri quantum uellet sumeret, Epid. 444 non repperisti, adulescens, tranquillum locum, ubi tuas uirtutes explices, ibid. 570 exciuiisti...ut uideas, Mil. 131 dedi mercatori quoidam, qui ad illum deferat, Pseud. 795 Orcus recipere ad se hunc noluit, ut esset hic qui mortuis cenam coquat. It is hardly too much to say that the strict sequence of tenses did not exist in colloquial Latin, but that the tense is decided by the point of view which is at the base of each individual sentence. See also Sonnenschein's note on Rud. 127 ff. On quicum see v. 905.

16. sed, abruptly breaking off and changing the subject. Cf. vv. 66, 151, 400.

The argument (ὑπόθεσις) was generally explained in the Prologue. That the spectators may not wonder why this is not done here, they are told that the explanation will be given in the play itself, by the old men Megaronides and Callicles, who appear in the first Act. In this Prologue, as in Asin., Cas., Merc., are given (1) the Greek name of the play, (2) the Greek poet, (3) the Roman adapter, (4) the Latin title.

17. ei (nom. pl.), scanned by synizesis as a monosyllable, just as ei dat. sing. is scanned in v. 15.

18. Thensauro, dat. by attraction to the case of fabulae. Cf. v. 8 and Asin. Prol. 10 there quoted, also v. 20. On the spelling Thensaurus see Arg. 1.

19. Plautus uortit barbare. On the use of the name Plautus, not poeta, in a genuine Prologue see Trautwein l.c. pp. 23, 24.

uortit barbare = uortit Latine. It is a striking proof how essentially Greek in tone these plays are that whenever it is necessary to refer to anything Latin in true Greek fashion it is styled 'foreign' (βάρβαρος). Thus Curc. 150 fite causa mea ludii barbari = Roman play-actors, Mil. 211 poetae barbaro = a Roman poet (Naeuius), Stich. 193 mores barbaros = Roman customs.

20. Trinummo, dat. by attraction as before. Cf. v. 391 Lesbonicost nomen, i.e. est ei nomen Lesbonico. Luxuria asks in the poet's name, as if the request came from himself, that his name for the play, viz. Trinummus, should be accepted by the spectators. Cf. Asin. Prol. 12 Asinariam uult esse, si per uos licet.

hoc belongs to nomen, 'he asks that this play should be allowed to keep this name.' For the position of the demonstrative cf. vv. 28, 87, 153.

22. tantumst, 'so much for this,' 'that is all' = Cicero's sed haec hactenus, Herodotus' τοσαῦτα μὲν περὶ τούτων εἰρήσθω. Cf. Cas. Prol. 87, Merc. 283 where the words are used in the same sense.

adeste cum silentio, to bespeak a quiet hearing for the play, like Asin. Prol. 14 date benigne operam mihi.

ACT I. SCENE 1 (23—38). Enter Megaronides. He is greatly disturbed by what people are saying of his friend Callicles, and comes resolved to remonstrate with him on his conduct.

Metre throughout the Act Iambic Trimeters.

23. noxiam, 'blame,' as Ter. Phorm. 225 ad defendendam noxiam. Plautus and Terence do not use the form usual later, viz. noxa. Meritus is either active (deponent) or passive. Meritam here and commerita v. 26 are passive, whereas in Ter. Phorm. 1014 esse in hac re culpam meritum non nego, and Aul. 738 me culpam commeritum scio, they are active.

24. inmoenest facinus, 'a thankless office.' Festus p. 109 inmunis, uacans munere: aliquotiens pro improbo ponitur. But cf. Merc. 105 dico eius pro meritis gratum me et munem fore, 'obliging.' For the spelling inmoene for immune (as in vv. 350 and 354) cf. moenera and munera, Poenus and Punicus, poena and punire, and oenus for unus: oe replaces older oi and later u, as coiranit, coerant, curant. See Lindsay, Latin Language, pp. 246—248.

in aetate, 'in life,' 'in this world.' Cf. v. 462 and Rud. 1235 in aetate hominum. In this sense sometimes with a possessive gen., but always without the possessive pronouns, i.e. in aetate or in aetate hominum, not in aetate mea &c. Men. 838 qui saepe aetate in sua &c. is a different use.

25. conducibile, 'advantageous.' Plautus is fond of adjs. in -bilis. This word for instance occurs some six times in Plautus, but is hardly found elsewhere.

nam, 'the reason why I say this is that.' nam introduces a particular illustration of the general statement that has just been made. It gives not the reason why it is thankless to find fault with a friend, but explains Megaronides' purpose in speaking.

26. concastigabo...commerita, the compounds are stronger than the simple castigare and meritam v. 23.

27. inuitus...inuitet playing on the similarity of sound, as Rud. 811 inuitas, ni istunc istis inuitassitis. Perhaps we may translate 'against my will, did not loyalty will that I should do so.' Alliteration and assonance are very common in Plautus. Note faciam fides in this line and morbis mores in the next, followed by mores mali in v. 30 and metere messem maxumam in v. 32. ni inuitet, 'did not loyalty call me to do so' (but loyalty does call me to do so). The pres. subj. expresses a state of things that really exists, a non-existent state of things would be expressed by the imperf. So Sall. Iug. 31. 1 multa me dehortantur a uobis, Quirites, ni studium rei publicae omnia superet, 'did not zeal for the commonwealth outweigh all considerations (but it does outweigh all).' Tibull. I. 4. 63 carmina ni sint, ex umero Pelopis non nituisset ebur, ibid. I. 8. 21, 22 cantus et e curru Lunam deducere temptat, et faceret, si non aera repulsa sonent, Catull. vi. 2 with Prof. R. Ellis' note.

28. hic, 'here,' referring to Athens in the original, but meant to be understood in Plautus of Rome. So vv. 33, 34.

nimum and nimio in Plautus regularly = 'very,' 'very much,' strengthening the force of adj., verb or adv., not 'too much.' So v. 34 nimio pluris faciunt, 'they value far more highly,' v. 931 nimum mirimodis mirabiles (locos), 'wondrous in very wondrous wise,' v. 936 nimum graphicum nugatorem, 'a very exquisite braggart.' Here then nimum strengthens the verb inuasit 'has greatly i.e. violently attacked.' Similarly the verb is used of a disease Asin. 55 sed eum morbus inuasit grauis.

29. plerique omnis, 'almost all,' i.e. the meaning of omnis is narrowed by the attribute plerique. So Ter. Andr. 55 quod plerique omnes faciunt adolescentuli, Phorm. 172 ita plerique omnes sumus ingenio. Omnīs is a form for omnes constantly given by the best MSS. Varro, L. L. VIII. 66, says that in his time puppīs and puppēs, uestīs and uestēs were rival forms, like Abl. oui and oue, auri and aue. Early inscriptions generally give -es: but Lex Repetund. (123—122 B.C.) has ceiueis, Sent. Minuciorum 117 B.C., fineis and finis. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 399, and cf. vv. 212, 307, 948, 1080, 1150, 1186.

intermortui, 'half-dead,' 'hovering between (life and) death,' just as 'twilight' is 'the time 'twixt light (and darkness).' The word is used here only in Plautus.

30. illi = mores boni.

interim, 'meanwhile,' an acc. sing. adv. form like partim, passim, pedetemptim &c. These forms are very numerous in Old Latin. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 556.

31. inrigua, passive 'well-watered.' So Hor. S. II. 4. 16 inriguo nihil est elutius horto.

33. uile, 'cheap,' an allusion to the scarcity and high prices at Rome, like v. 484 cena hac annonast sine sacris hereditas. Vv. 32 and 33 were transposed by Buecheler (Rh. M. XXVII.).

34. nimioque pluris, 'value at a higher price by much,' 'value far more highly (see on v. 28) the favour of the few.' Pauciores (plures = οἱ ὀλίγοι, 'the aristocrats,' 'the optimates.' Cf. the complaints of self-seeking v. 1033 ff.

35. faciunt, plur. after pars hominum which implies a number of persons, a common κατὰ σύνθεσιν or ad sensum construction.

quam id quod prosint pluribus, 'than they (value) that wherein they may benefit the many.' This, the reading of A, is supported by Shilleto (quoted by Prof. Mayor on Cic. 2 Phil. 21. 30, q.v.). Id is acc. after faciunt, quod is the limiting (adverbial) acc. of neut. pron. so common in Plautus, e.g. Curc. 327 sed quod te misi, nihilo sum certior, 'but I am no wiser about what I sent you for,' lit. 'as to what,' Curc. 456 quid hoc quod ad te uenio? 'but what about the business on which I come to you?' So id and idem frequently. Cf. Ouid. Epist. VI. 3. 4 hoc tamen ipsum debueram scripto certior esse tuo.

36. illud conducibile = id quod prosint pluribus.

gratiae. Just as irae = 'different outbursts of anger,' so gratiae is properly 'tokens of favour,' 'different exercises of influence.' Plautus uses the plur. of abstract nouns where the sing. would be used in the classical period. So v. 490 opulentiae, v. 1028 parsimoniae. But in Plautus the pure abstract meaning is rare, and the plur. has its proper force. Thus astutia, 'cunning' once only, Capt. 679, but astutiae, 'cunning plans,' 'crafty tricks,' frequently. And so with dolus, fabrica, fallacia, perfidia and other words the plur. denotes different manifestations of the cunning, treachery and so forth. See Langen, Beiträge p. 105 ff.

37. odiosae, or as A odiossae, a genuine spelling. The suffix is formed of two elements (-went + -to) in Latin where Greek uses only one. The termination = 'having,' 'full of' is in Greek -eis = fevts = uant + s. Thus χαπτεῖς (χαπ-fevts) 'grace-ful,' στονδ-εις, 'woe-ful,' δοδδ-εις, 'guile-ful.' But the Latin dolōsus (Gk. δοδδεις) = dolo-uenssus* from dolo-went-to-s*. So odio-went-to-s*, odio-uenssus*, odionsus, odiossus, odiōsus. Cf. retrorsum, retrōsum for retro-uersum and see Lindsay, L. L., pp. 352, 353.

38. remoram, 'hindrance.' So Poen. 928 remora si sit. The word is used by Lucilius, but as it is against analogy it is afterwards disused.

rei. Scanned as a monosyllable by the regular synizesis.

SCENE 2 (39—222). Callicles comes out of the house of Charmides, which he has purchased from Charmides' son Lesbonicus. As he comes out he addresses his wife who is inside the house. In comedy a person coming out frequently addresses the first words to a person unseen within the house (as the Roman Comic Stage does not shew interiors). But the person addressed is made clear by the words used, as here by uxor.

39. Larem. Each household possessed a Lar, whose image representing the founder of the family in his toga stood in the lararium or sacrarium. Cf. Aul. Prol. 2, ibid. 386, Merc. 834. There were two penates who stood in the sacrarium one on each side of the Lar. The Lar and the penates are spoken of under the general name of lares, but the distinction is preserved in the phrases redire ad larem suum and redire ad penates suos. See Sonnenschein on Rud. 1207.

The Lar changed houses with the family and was propitiated by prayer and offerings, and likewise was decorated on all occasions of importance in the family history, a departure (Merc. 834), a return (Stich. 534), a wedding (Aul. 386).

40. uenerare, 'pray,' ueneror=oro, a classical meaning. Cf. Rud. 257 quisquis est deus, ueneror ut nos ex hac aerumna eximat, ibid. 305 and 1349. With what follows cf. Cic. div. I. 102 omina maiores nostri quia ualere censebant, idcirco omnibus rebus agendis, quod bonum faustum felix fortunatumque esset, praefabantur.

41. euenat. One of the short subjunctive forms used by Plautus only at the end of the line. Others are aduenat (Pseud. 1030), peruenat (Rud. 626), also peruenant v. 93 and euenant (Epid. 321). These are properly aorist forms and are used by the dramatic poets only under metrical necessity. So the aorist forms attigas, attulas &c. usually (but not always) occur at the end of the line. See Lindsay, L. L., pp. 464, 465. Note that euenire is used with adj. (bona &c.) not with adv. So often in the historians, because euenire almost=feri.

42. teque. The force of uenerare is continued 'and pray that I may see you &c.' Callicles has now turned away from his wife and speaks these words so that she should not overhear them.

43. Megaronides looking at Callicles says 'here is the man who in his old age has become a boy.'

senecta aetate. Also Amph. 1032, and so aetate inuenta at the end of a hexameter on an inscription.

puer, i.e. ut castigandus sit as the next line shews. Puer was probably originally pue-ro-s* (puers*>puer), and puere is the only form of the voc. found in Plautus, e.g. Asin. 382 and 891.

45. quoia, 'whose,' the possessive of the interrogative or relative pronoun quoi-us, -a, -um, formed from the gen. of the pronoun itself. Being colloquial it is common in Plautus and Terence.

46. tui beneuolentis, 'the voice of a good friend of yours,' gen. because quoia=cuius. Beneuolens is often used as a substantive in Comedy, as vv. 356 and 1148. And so bene merens is used='benefactor,' Capt. 935.

si ita's ut ego te uolo=si ita es ut ego te esse uolo, almost si talis es qualem. See vv. 307, 657, 1170.

47. es scanned ēs. So egēt v. 330, erīs v. 971.

48. atque...Megaronides are bracketed as an interpolation by many editors because of the hiatus, the awkward arrangement, the pointlessness of aequalis and the fact that Callicles takes no notice of the question ut uales, 'how are you?' but puts the same question himself.

But the hiatus at the caesura is legitimate, aequalis = συνέφηβος, cf. v. 326, and is perhaps playful, addressed by one old man to another, and the disregard of the question is not strange as the two greet and question one another almost simultaneously.

50. ualen? i.e. ualesne? So uin=uisne v. 59, scin=scisne, uiden=uidesne, satin=satisne &c. Plautus does not use nonne, which is replaced by satin or simple -ne.

ualeo, et ualui rectius, 'I am well, and I have been better.' But Brix refers rectius to ualeo as well as ualui, and understands it as satis bene, 'I am and have been pretty well.' Recte is used of health, as Pers. 503 ego ualeo recte, hence rectius=melius.

51. plus quam ego uolo, 'stronger than I wish.' Cic. ad Att. iv. 14. 1 has the opposite, quod minus ualuisses. Such jests on women, wives and marriage are a staple with the writers of the New Comedy and are reproduced with zest by Plautus. See Introduction and note on Asin. 19.

52. bene herclest, 'gad, I'm delighted.' bene est=εὖ ἔχει, καλῶς ἔχει, and so optume est, subjective, 'I am glad,' but optimum est, objective, 'capital.' Cf. Capt. 699 bene est, Capt. 706 optumest, but Aul. 237 and Asin. 786 optimum est. tibi, dat. incom., 'to plague you.'

53. mali, partitive gen. after si quid, as in hoc boni, id mali and the like.

55. eho tu, used to call a person's attention before asking a question or issuing a command. Before a question eho an denotes generally angry surprise or derision, e.g. vv. 934 and 942. A word rarely intervenes between eho and an as v. 986 eho, quaeso an.

57. uitae tuae superstes suppetat, 'that she may outlast and outlive you.' The dat. uitae tuae depends both on superstes and suppetat, and the effectiveness of the phrase is increased by the alliteration. suppetat='be supplied to,' 'be sufficient for,' as Asin. 56 non suppetunt dictis data. Cf. Pers. 331 ut mihi supersit, suppetat, superstitet, where there is the same alliteration.

58. dumquidem hercle. Scan dūm quid' hērc|le and cf. potēst v. 80, is ēst v. 354, hērcle v. 559, &c. 'Provided she were married to you, I should assuredly have no objection.' Plautine pres. subj. of the unfulfilled condition. Cf. Asin. 188. Sane with uelim is concessive.

60. faxo haud tantillum dederis uerborum mihi, 'I'll warrant you will not take me in the least bit,' i.e. I shall not get the worst of the bargain. tantillum δεικτικῶς, 'not even so little.' Cf. v. 483. uerborum, part. gen. after tantillum, and dare alicui uerba is a regular phrase=to deceive, to cheat. Dederis here and obrepseris v. 61 are fut. perfs. in the idiomatic sense 'you will find that you have,' 'the result will shew that you have.' Cf. Aul. 578 ego faxo et operam et uinum perdiderit simul. See Roby, L. G. 1604. faxo is properly a sigmatic aorist form. The sigmatic aorist had in Latin a subjunctive in -o, faxo, i.e. fac-so, dixo (dic-so), ero (eso*), and an optative in -im, dixim, faxim, axim, ausim &c. for older dic-siem, like sim for siem. These forms are used for the fut. perf. and the perf. subj. respectively. Thus faxo=fecero and faxim=fecerim. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 465. Faxo is most often paratactic, i.e. it is only formally juxtaposed with the verb used with it. According to Sonnenschein (on Rud. 365) with faxo the fut. indic. is found fifty times in the MSS. of Plautus, the pres. subj. sixteen times. Both these constructions faxo scies and faxo scias are paratactic, the hypotactic construction faxo ut scias in Asin. 897 is quite exceptional in Plautus.

61. namque enim tu, credo. So the MSS., but Ritschl nempe, Geppert nantum enim te credis &c. But namque enim is right. Plautus uses namque in the place of nam before a vowel: thus always namque edepol, but nam...edepol when another word like tu intervenes. Namque introduces an easily supplied ellipse when it is followed by an affirmative particle like enim—here scanned as if enī through the slurring of final m. Enim is an affirmative particle in at enim, quia enim, nū enim, non enim, nunc enim, certe enim, immo enim, uerum enim and enim uero. See Langen's discussion, Beiträge, p. 262 ff., where he maintains that this is the exclusive force of the word in Plautus. Briefly, in old Latin enim is merely an asseverative particle—cf. classical enimuero—in Plautus it asserts and strengthens, meaning 'indeed,' probably never is a purely causal, 'for,' but in Terence it begins to mean 'for.'

credo is inserted parenthetically and is generally ironical, 'I suppose,' 'no doubt.'

me inprudenter obrepseris, '(you will not get the worst of the bargain) for you no doubt will be found to have stolen a march on me unawares.' 'You are a likely fellow to get round a simpleton like me,' ironically. Obrepere foll. by acc., though the dat. is the classical construction, just as occursare takes the acc., Mil. 1047 nam ita me occursant multae.

62. ne tu hercle faxo haud nescias, 'faith I'll warrant you would not be ignorant (=you would soon know) what you have done.' On the construction faxo nescias see v. 60. Nē is the affirmative particle (ne confirmatiua) to be distinguished from nē (ne interrogatiua) which cannot stand first. Nē is strengthened by hercle, and tu stands between them just as in ne tu edepol, ne tu ecaster &c.

63. habeas ut nanctu's, 'keep her, as you've got her.' 'You've made your bed: lie on it.' Rud. 871 ut nanctu's, habe.

mala res=malum, and therefore may have an epithet as nota here. So Epid. 78 abi in malam rem maxumam. With Megaronides' philosophy cf. Liv. XXIII. 3 notissimum quodque malum maxime tolerabile dicentes esse, and Shaks. Hamlet III. 1. 81, 82. As 'the evil we know is best,' so a wife one is accustomed to may be the best after all.

64. nesciam, 'I should not know,' is the apodosis to si capiam.

65. proinde ut bene uiuitur, diu uiuitur, lit. 'just as you live happily, (so) you live long,' i.e. 'long life depends on happiness.' If you destroy existing harmony, you destroy with it your hopes of long life. Many editors transpose diu and bene, reading ut diu uiuitur, bene uiuitur, i.e. 'happiness depends on habit,' 'you live happily in the way to which you are accustomed.' But the MSS. are against this—bene uiuitur diu AP—and this sense would seem to require a perf. in place of the pres. ut diu uiuitur. For proinde ut cf. v. 659.

66. sed, breaking off and changing the subject as v. 16. hoc = huc, 'hither,' i.e. 'to me.' Cf. Capt. 329 nunc hoc animum aduerte, ibid. 480.

aufer ridicularia, 'drop jesting.' Cf. Capt. 964 tandem ista aufer, Asin. 330 mitte ridicularia.

67. quid uenis? 'why do you come,' lit. 'as to what thing do you come,' the adverbial limiting accus. of the neut. pron. See on v. 35.

68. malis te ut uerbis multis multum obiurigem. From uenis supply uenio before ut: 'I come to scold you much with much abuse.' Multum is an accus. used adverbially like nimum, partim, saltem, &c. and a few plural forms alteras, foras. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 556. malis uerbis='abuse,' and therefore allows the epithet multis, like mala res, v. 63.

obiurigem. In Plautus iurgo is still sometimes iūrgo, and purgo is sometimes purigo. So balineum, balineator, ualide and other words that afterwards lost a syllable by syncope, the syllable lost being that which followed the accent. Iurigo and purigo are formed like nauigo, remigo, &c.

69. men ? nē interrogatiua, 'what ! me ?'

70. tene obiurigem ? 'whether it is you,' &c.

71. dicturum male, foll. by dat. mihimet, as male dicere, nec recte dicere = male dicere &c. take dat. mihimet is the dat. strengthened by -met, as it sometimes is by -pte, mihipte. Other similar forms are egomet, tutimet, tibimet, temet. Met is found occasionally with possessives in Plautus, but not in Cicero or Caesar. It is thus more a particle for personal than for possessive pronouns. But -pte is common with possessives, but almost exclusively with the abl., as meopte ingenio, suapte manu. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 429.

72. artes antiquae tuae, 'your good old ways.' Antiquae in a good sense like vv. 295 and 381: artes = ἐπιτηδεύματα. So Ter. Andr. 32 ff. nihil istac opus est arte ad hanc rem quam paro, sed eis...fide et taciturnitate, infr. v. 228, and malae artes, improbae artes often. aegrotant as v. 30. The three lines which follow are spurious. The first is not found in A. The second repeats the same thing in another way, and the two lines cannot stand together. The third looks like an interpolated gloss. Eos is weak, ast is very rare in Plautus, captare nouos mores is not a Plautine phrase. Further, mores is wrongly used in the passage. The three lines may be safely enclosed in brackets.

75. morbum tu incuties grauem: take this line as the apodosis of v. 72 = 'you will produce in all your friends' or 'will inoculate all your friends with a serious disorder.' Callicles is spoken of as if he were highly infectious. The nature of the 'disorder' is explained by the next line.

76. ut te uidere audireque aegroti sient, 'making them sick to see and hear you' = ut uisus et auditus tuus iis morbus sit. The infin. was merely a case (usually dat. or loc. sing.) of a verbal noun. Here uidere = uide-si*, audire = audi-si, i.e. they are loc. from an s-stem. This origin of the infin. will explain its use, known as the complementary or expegetic infin., to define or complete the meaning of an adj., as aegroti here. Cf. Merc. 288 non sum occupatus unquam amico operam dare, ibid. 805 defessus sum urbem totam peruenarier. It will also explain the so-called infin. of purpose, as infr. v. 1015 recurre petere.

77. qui, 'how,' abl. of the interrogative as v. 87: see on v. 14. Scan īstaec, and in the next line ōmnīs.

dicta dicere, 'to say saws,' 'to vent witticisms,' is an instance of the common figura etymologica, like messem metere v. 32, seruire seruitutem v. 302, facta facere, turbas turbare, somnium somniare, &c.

78. adcurare: the verb is exclusively comic, the part. adj. accuratus and the adv. are classical.

79. segregent. So Asin. 774 suspiciones omnis ab se segreget. Sē, 'by itself,' as an adv.= 'apart,' makes sēd-itio, 'a going apart,' sedulo (se-dolo), securus, secerno, soluo (se-luo), also the legal phrase se fraude, 'without harm.'

80. qua-propter and propterea. Cf. ad-eo and quo-ad. Qua and eā are abl. sing. fem. as postea, praeterea, antea, eadem, haud-qua-quam, qua-tenus, &c.

81. ego meo sum promus pectori, 'I am butler to my own bosom.' promus or cellarius was the slave who had charge of the wine-cellar and the larder. He took out provisions (promere) when wanted and stored them safely away (condere). Cf. Mil. 837 bono subpromo et promo cellam creditam, Pseud. 608 condus promus sum, procurator peni. Callicles says in effect that he has the key of his own breast and can lock out blame, he has not the key of other people's breasts to lock out suspicion. Pectori is a dat. (commodi) freely used in comedy where we might expect the gen. Cf. vv. 126, 131, 177, 204. Pectus, cor, the seat of the intellect as well as the affections. So v. 82, Epid. 385.

83. nam, to introduce a particular illustration of the principle just laid down. The crime here imagined was proverbial for a daring sacrilege. Cf. Men. 941 at ego te sacram coronam surrupuisse Ioui scio.

surrupuisse, from rapio. Cf. u in compounds for a in contubernium, percutio, conculco, exsulto, insulsus, &c.

85. columine=culmine. So Amph. 367 audaciai columen, Cas. 535 senati columen. Plautus never has the form culmen. On the top of the pediment of the temple Jupiter was represented as triumphator, crowned with a laurel-wreath and in a quadriga. The statue and the terracotta quadriga were modelled by Turianus, an Etruscan sculptor from Fregenae. See on the Temple of Jupiter Capitolinus generally Middleton's Ancient Rome, p. 227 ff.

86. suspiciarier. The form suspiciarier has never been satisfactorily explained. The ordinary infin. pass. and depon. in i is originally dat. (=indogerm. ai*) e.g. agi, dici, sequi &c. The longer form agi-er, dici-er, laudari-er, is found contemporaneously, but not earlier. Stolz (Müller, Hdb. 11². 380) would explain these as formed from the usual infinitive in i with the infinitive-suffix -ere borrowed from the thematic verb. The shortening -er from -ere he illustrates by biber (Titinius) and haber (Corp. Inscr. Lat. 8. 8369).

Plautus regularly uses this long form of the infin. dep. and pass. only at the end of the line.

87. ne suspicer is unusual after prohibere, which usually takes acc. or acc. with infin. But Terence (Eun. 808) also once has prohibere followed by ne with subj. The pron. id is governed by suspicer. For its position see on v. 20.

88. istuc negoti, 'that business of yours,' viz. Megaronides' intention announced v. 67. For the construction see v. 60.

90. quoi pectus sapiat, 'of a wise understanding.' For pectus like the Homeric φρένες is the seat of the understanding. So Mil. 786.

haud...dolo, 'not with deceit,' 'frankly,' 'unreservedly,' v. 480, Men. 228.

92, 93. These lines are rejected by some editors as a mere amplification of sunt quos suspicer. But the triple division is right. Some he knows to be friends, others he fancies to be friends, about others he does not know what to say. The sing. amici, inimici and the use of pars are more serious objections to v. 93, which I should regard as a gloss, but keep v. 92. For the form peruenant see on v. 41.

95. siquid...inprobe, 'anything you know me to have done foolishly or wickedly.' Inscite, in a way that deserves blame but not punishment, inprobe is a stronger term.

96. id non me accusas, a double accus., one of the person, the other of the charge (cognate). So arguo, iubeo, prohibeo, e.g. Pseud. 13.

98. siquid = εἰ τι for ὅ τι, as v. 148 ausculto siquid dicas.

primumdum omnium, 'first of all then.' Dum, an accus. sing. neut. from a pronominal stem, is used as an asseverative particle just like the Greek δὴ, another case-form from the same stem. Thus primumdum = πρῶτον δὴ, quidum = πῶς δὴ; dicdum = λέγε δὴ.

100. turpilucricupidum, 'fond of filthy lucre,' being Plautus' translation of αἰσχροκερδῆ.

101. uolturium, 'a vulture,' on account of his greediness. We should say 'shark.' Cf. Capt. 844.

102. hostisne an ciuis comedis, parui pendere, 'they say that you care little whether you ruin strangers or fellow-countrymen.' The oratio obliqua follows uocant quite easily without a fresh verb of saying. Parui, the so-called gen. of price, is a loc., and a true gen. like pluris in v. 34 is used on analogy. 'Foreigner,' 'stranger' is the first meaning of hostis, 'enemy' is a later sense. See Varro L. L. v. 3 hostis, nam tum eo uerbo dicebant peregrinum, Cic. Off. 1. 12. 37 hostis apud maiores nostros is dicebatur, quem nunc peregrinum dicimus. So Curc. 5 si status conductus cum hoste ('stranger') intercedit dies. Hostis, Germ. gast, our 'guest,' keeps its meaning in the derivatives hostel, osteria, hôtel.

comedis is an optative subjunctive form, on which see v. 6. Cicero (Fam. IX. 20) has comedim and (de Fin. II. 7. 22) edint. Another of these forms duint occurs v. 436.

103. is, i.e. iis. Cf. v. 17.

104. est atque non est mihi in manu, 'it is and yet it is not in my power,' 'within my control.' Cf. Amph. 564 istuc tibi in manu, Rud. 983 in manu non est mea. Like so many colloquial phrases this is found in Cicero's Letters, e.g. Fam. XIV. 2. 3.

105. ut ne, consecutive, like Mil. 149 faciemus ut, quod uiderit, ne uiderit, Most. 1053 pergunt turbare usque, ut ne quid possit conquiescere.

107. rem, 'the facts of the case,' which he proceeds to tell. So Epid. 713 iam res ipsa dicet tibi, Aul. 421 res ipsa testis. In the next line rem = rem familiarem, 'the estate,' 'property.'

auctorem, legal, 'surety,' 'guarantee,' used in apposition to the fem. rem, as in Stich. 129 a woman says auctores sumus, and Verg. of a woman auctor ego audendi.

108. filius = Lesbonicus.

109. prostratum, 'flung down,' a strong expression but effective of an uncared for and neglected state. Cf. Cic. Cluent. 6 perfregit ac prostravit omnia cupiditate ac furore. Prostratum Bergk, B gives protractum whence protractum is sometimes read.

110. adultam. So that she ought to have a dowry and be married.

111. simul eius matrem suamque uxorem mortuam, 'sees too that the girl's mother and his wife is dead.' 'The girl's mother and his wife' are of course one and the same person. In English 'the girl's mother,' 'his wife' would be said in apposition without an 'and.' But Latin often uses the copula in such descriptions, e.g. Capt. 470 ridiculus inopesque ab se segregat = eos qui ridiculi et inopes sunt, Bacch. 647 regias copias aureasque optuli, and so in Greek, Eur. Iph. Aul. 1454 πατέρα τὸν ἀμὸν μὴ στύγει πῶς τε σὸν.

112. quoniam iturust. See on v. 14. The construction begun in the hist. pres. uidet is continued.

ipsus is a by-form of ipse (ip(e)sð*). Ipsē is not a development of ipsus: the two are separate forms, ipse for -sð, ipsus for -sðs. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 441. Ipsus is the form used by the comedians before a reflexive, e.g. ipsus sibi.

Seleuciam. If the town is meant, we have the same shortening of an unaccented long syllable Σελεύκεια to Seleucia as occurs in πλατείᾳ plátēa, χορεῖα chorēa, βαλανέιον balinēum &c. But from v. 845 where Seleucia is named with Macedonia, Asia and Arabia it is more probable that the province Σελευκίς is meant, and used for Syria, like Persia for Περσίς.

114. corruptum. B. corruntum i.e. corruptum, and so v. 240 corrumpitor. This nasalised form is like thensaurus, nactus v. 63, and finctum for fictum, Ter. Eun. 104.

115. credo haud crederet. Credo is parenthetical as v. 61, and does not affect the construction, 'I trow he would not trust.' But Plautus is fond of such phrases. Cf. Merc. 207 credo, non credet pater, Epid. 507 nolo scire si scis &c., Shaks. K. J. III. 1. 7 and 9 'I trust I may not trust thee, Believe me I do not believe thee, man.' Crederet is imperf. subj. where we should use plup. 'he would not have trusted.' See on v. 133.

116. quid tu? an elliptic question used to prepare the way for and call attention to a second question which it introduces. So v. 330 quid is? egetne, Capt. 717 quid tu? una nocte postulavisti?, Epid. 148 quid tu? nunc patierin ut ego me interimam?

117. fide, here a dat., and this form for the fifth declension gen. and dat. is common. Livy, Sallust and even Cicero have often as gen., more rarely as dat., such forms as acie, specie, fide, spe, die. Gellius (Noct. Att. IX. 14) quotes Caesar as saying that huius die and huius specie ought to be the forms used, and mentions the theory that die, specie were abl. forms used as gen.: modern philologists have made them loc., like die crastini &c. In Plautus and Terence rei, spei &c. are nearly always monosyllabic, fidei is always dissyllabic in Terence and usually so in Plautus. Hor. C. III. 7. 4 has constantis iuuenem fide. See further on these forms Neue, Formenlehre I. p. 379, Lindsay, L. L. 382 ff.

118. quin eum restituis? The object is adulescentem. But that is put forward for emphasis and becomes an anticipatory accus., so the object is repeated in the pronoun eum. Cf. Asin. 527 illos qui dant, eos derides, Cas. 655 tua ancilla, quam tu tuo uilico uis dare uxorem, ea intus.

quin ad frugem conrigis? 'why don't you reform him to honesty?'—a short expression for conrigis ut ad frugem redeat. Cf. Bacch. 1084 uiso ecquid eum ad uirtutem aut ad frugem opera sua compulerit.

119. ei rei. Both words are scanned as monosyllables and rei is elided. Perhaps re as v. 117. ea res is explained in the next line.

120. siqui, 'if by any means,' 'to see whether you could.' qui abl. of the indefinite pronoun v. 14 = $\epsilon\lambda\ \pi\omega\varsigma$.

non uti, ἀνακολούθως, but livelier than the correct quam uti.

122. malo, the more general word instead of the special culpa, with special reference to v. 99.

123. non istuc meumst, 'that's not my way.' So Asin. 190 non meumst, Pers. 46 hoc meumst, infr. v. 445.

124. quid taces? is interjected parenthetically, then, ubi nunc &c., the main sentence is continued, and hasce aedes further defined. So Men. 616 per Iouem deosque omnis adiuro, uxor—satin hoc est tibi?—me isti non nutasse, Mil. 801 ille—eiusmodi est—cupiet miser.

127. factum, not factum est. The rule is that where factum or the like stands alone est is omitted, where there is a subject or pronoun est is inserted, as v. 429 *factum id quoque*st. This is a sentence, factum is merely an exclamation. So bene hercle factum, factum optime and the like.

128. edepol fide adolescentem mandatum malae. On the dat. fide see v. 117. The whole line is an acc. of exclamation after edepol, as often after eu, hercle and the like, e.g. Asin. 580 edepol senem Demaenetum lepidum fuisse, Epid. 72 eu edepol res turbulentas, ibid. 212 hercle rem gestam bene, infr. vv. 138 and 592.

129. dedistine = nonne dedisti? The second syllable of dedisti is scanned short, as also v. 127. Qui here and again vv. 132 and 135 is instrumental abl. of the rel. There is an allusion to the Greek proverb μή παιδί μάχαιραν.

130. quid secus est aut quid interest, 'what distinction or what difference is there (between giving a sword and) that you should give' &c. The expression is pleonastic, but such pleonasm is a marked feature of comedy, e.g. vv. 615, 633, 1096. Secus is a neut. nom. sing., used also as adv. and prep., like tenus.

131. amanti homini adolescenti, animi impoti, 'a mere stripling, in love and not master of himself': homo is used like ἀνὴρ in Greek to intensify the meaning of words, good or bad, generally in a pitying or contemptuous sense, e.g. seruos homo = δοῦλος ἀνὴρ, 'a mere slave,' or 'a poor slave.' Here it goes with adolescens. Impos (the opposite of compos, and like it foll. by gen.), cf. Cas. 629 suist impos animi.

132. qui exaedificaret, 'to enable him to complete,' lit. 'finish the building of worthlessness he has begun.' But in v. 1127 exaedificare = ex aedibus eicere. With the metaphorical sense in this line cf. Cic. de Orat. I. 35. 164 ne graueris exaedificare id opus quod instituisti and the N.T. use of οικοδομεῖν as 1 Cor. viii. 1 and 10. Incohatam is the better spelling, see Lindsay, L. L. p. 57.

133. redderem, 'duly to pay.' Reddere is 'to give or deliver to the proper person money due to him,' 'a letter addressed to him,' and so on, = ἀποδιδόναι. Non redderes, 'you ought not to have paid it,' is an emphatic negation of Callicles' own words, instead of ne redderes which strict grammar would require. The imperf. subj. is common of 'advice applicable to circumstances no longer existing' (Roby, L. G. 1604). Cf. the tenses in the next two lines, Rud. 379 rogas, quid faceret? adseruaret dies noctesque, 'do you ask, what he ought to have done? He ought to have watched &c.,' ibid. 842 caperes aut fustem aut lapidem, 'you ought to have taken &c.,' Pseud. 286 si amabas, inuenires mutuom, 'you ought to have found &c.,' ibid. 437 uel tu ne faceres tale in adulescentia, 'else you ought not to have done.' In this sense, referring to past time, Plautus always uses the imperf., classical Latin both the imperf. and the plup. Sonnenschein on Rud. 379.

135. nec qui deterior esset faceres copiam, 'nor ought you to have given him any opportunity to damage himself.' The instrumental qui here refers to a fem. noun copiam. For copiam facere cf. Ter. Haut. Prol. 28 date crescendi copiam, nouarum qui spectandi faciunt copiam, 'give an opportunity of rising (to those) who give you an opportunity of witnessing new plays.'

136. inconciliastin, 'have not you entangled,' 'inveigled into difficulties?' Ne=nonne, as v. 129. In compounded with verbs is, with hardly an exception, intensive, it is negative only with adj. and participles. Inconciliare therefore is an intensive form of conciliare, 'to bring to oneself,' 'purchase,' as v. 856. The meaning may be seen from conciliatrix, 'a match-maker,' 'a woman who entraps people into matches'; hence inconciliare= 'to embarrass,' 'to bring into difficulties by intrigues and the like.' Cf. Bacch. 551 inconciliaret copias omnis meas, 'embarrass,' Most. 613 ne inconciliare quid nos porro postules, 'get into difficulties,' Pers. 834 credo eo, quia non inconciliauit quom te emo, 'intrigued,' and so the third meaning given by Festus, p. 107 per dolum decepisti. But Langen, Beiträge pp. 181—183, quoting indecet=non decet, infiteri=non fateri &c., takes inconciliare=non conciliare, 'to estrange,' 'to divide.'

137. ille qui mandauit, for illum qui, the demonstrative being attracted to the case of the following relative where its own verb comes after the relative sentence. So v. 985, Curc. 419 istum quem quaeris ego sum, Epid. 448 sed istum quem quaeris...ego sum, Most. 250 mulier quae se suamque aetatem spernit, speculo ei usus est.

exturbasti ? = nonne exturbasti ? Ne is not repeated in the second sentence, but its force is continued. If eum is retained we must scan exturbasti. Cf. vv. 250, 318, 385, 964.

138. edepol...probe. See v. 128 for this acc. of exclamation. pulcre and probe ironical.

139. crede huic tutelam: suam melius rem gesserit, 'entrust this man with the care of a boy, you'll find he'll take more care of his own interests,' i.e. consulet sibi, quum pupillo consulere deberet. The imper. crede is bitterly ironical, the protasis of the sentence is in the imper. See Roby, L.G. 1557. Cf. Ou. A. A. II. 647 quod male fers, adsuesce, feres bene, Cic. Verr. II. 23 attendite: iam intelligetis, = si attenditis &c.

141. adeo, i.e. ad-eo (cf. ad-quo, a variety of quo-ad, as Afranius 249 R. iratus essem adquo liceret) lit. 'there-to' means (1) 'moreover,' 'what is more,' a regular comic use, as v. 181 neque adeo, atque adeo, nunc adeo, (2) 'to such a point,' adeo res rediit, 'things have reached such a pass,' and of time adeo donec, (3) 'to the end that,' adeo ut, (4) with weakened force, merely to emphasise the word which it follows, nunc adeo, nos adeo &c. See Langen, Beiträge p. 139 ff. Here we may connect adeo ut as in (3). But as the regular construction is subigo ut, not subigo adeo ut, it is better to put a comma after adeo and take nouo modo adeo together. 'You force me by your abuse, in a way too quite strange to you, obliging me (ut mihi necesse sit) to entrust to you, what has been secretly entrusted to my silence &c.' The order is subigis me, ut mihi necesse sit tibi concedere, quod conceditumst meae taciturnitati, ne enuntiare &c. Vt is repeated (v. 144) because of the long interval which has intervened since it was first used in v. 141. Cf. Aul. 791 nunc te obtestor, Euclio, ut si quid ego erga te imprudens peccaui aut gnatam tuam, ut mi ignoscas, Ter. Phorm. 153. For the position and use of adeo cf. Amph. 981 haec curata sint fac sis, proinde adeo ut uelle med intellegis, 'see please that these points are attended to, in the way too that you see I wish.' fide, see v. 117.

145. sumes ubi posueris. Megaronides speaks of the secret to be communicated to him as a sum of money, a deposit, entrusted to his safe-keeping, which the owner will recover safely just where he placed it. So Mil. 234 salua sumes indidem. Posui is the form of the perf. exclusively used by Plautus and Terence: posui is used first by Ennius, then by Lucilius, Lucretius, Catullus. See Neue, Formenlehre II. p.

490. Posiui is the true perf., posui has come from a false apprehension of positus, i.e. po-situs, as if it were posi-tus, like moni-tus.

146. circumspicedum te. See on v. 98 for dum. The addition of te, 'just look round you,' is Plautine, cf. v. 863, but Mil. 955 circumspicedum, ne quis nostro hic auceps sermoni siet, corresponds to the ordinary usage, i.e. the verb is intransitive. As circumspicere is trans. and takes an object here, so penetrare is trans. and takes a direct object, vv. 276, 291, 314. The transitive is the older use, the intransitive use a later weakening. Cf. abstinere, inclinare, praecipitare &c.

arbiter, 'witness'—the regular meaning in Plautus—or 'spy,' as Ou. M. II. 458 procul est, ait, arbiter omnis, Cic. Att. xv. 16. Arbiter for ad-biter, with r for d, as in the formula SCR. ARF., i.e. scribendo arfuerunt (adfuerunt), and in meri-dies for medi-dies.

148. ausculto siquid dicas, as v. 98.

149. quoniam hinc est profecturus. Cf. vv. 14 and 112 : quoniam is temporal and the tense is historical.

peregre is a locative, 'at abroad,' as Amph. Prol. 5 peregre et domi, 'abroad and at home.' But it is also used in the sense 'to abroad,' as here and v. 596, and 'from abroad' as v. 423 and Epid. 126 aduenientem peregre, 'on his arrival from abroad.' So nusquam = 'no whither' as well as 'no where,' and intus = ἐνδοθεν (Men. 218 euocate intus Culin-drum) as well as ἐνδον.

151. conclauae is 'any room that may be locked up,' specially a state-room, whereas cubiculum is specially a dwelling-room.

sed circumspice, inserted parenthetically by Callicles in his nervousness lest they should be overheard. See on v. 124. When Megaronides has replied nemost, Callicles continues his description of the treasure.

152. nummorum Philippeum ad tria milia, 'amounting to three thousand gold Philips.' The coin, worth about 16s., was named after Philip of Macedon, father of Alexander the Great, who minted gold from the mines near Philippi. Five Philips went to the mina (£4). The coins became current at Rome, where there was no gold currency. At the time of this play they must have been recently introduced, for they are not mentioned by Livy before the triumph of Flaminius, 195 B.C. The second syllable of Philippeus is regularly shortened, and Plautus prefers the proper name Philippus to the adj. Philippeus. Further he commonly uses the old short gen. plur. nummum, not the longer form nummorum. Thus v. 959 mille nummum Philippum, 'a thousand (of) Philippes d'or,' v. 965 Philippum (aurum), v. 966 mille nummum, 'a thousand (of) pieces,' v. 1158 mille auri Philippum dotis, 'a thousand

(of) Philippes d'or of dowry.' Accordingly Langen (Beiträge p. 85 ff.) would bring this passage into line with the common usage by reading nummum aureum Philippum ad tria milia, 'amounting to three thousand Philippes d'or.' Other passages where the coin is mentioned are Asin. 153, Bacch. 230 and 1183, Rud. 1314.

153. id, 'that fact,' 'that secret,' rather than 'that sum of money.' Id is the object of crederem, see v. 20.

solus solum = μόνος μόνον. Cf. Asin. 500 solus mihi talentum argenti soli adnumeravit, Capt. 602 solus te solum uolo, Mil. 1019 cedo te mihi solae solum, Pseud. 1142 praesens praesentem, Stich. 373 ipsus ipsum.

155. unde = a quo, as Epid. 80 and 115, and often.

permanascere, ἀπαξ εἰρημένον, an inceptive form of permano (see Capt. 221 neu permanet palam haec nostra fallacia), intended to express the slow and secret spreading of the news.

156. reuenit, pres., although the verb in the main sentence is fut. So v. 713, Capt. 409 and 587.

reddam suom sibi, 'I will restore to him his own,' i.e. the treasure. We should expect ei not sibi. But suom draws the dat. into its neighbourhood and makes it reflexive. So often in the Comedians suom sibi and the like, e.g. Pers. 81 sua sibi pecunia hodie illam faciat leno libertam suam, Poen. 1083 suam sibi rem saluam sistam. See Roby, L. G. 1143 and 2265.

157. siquid eo fuerit, 'if anything should happen to him,' a euphemism like siquid eo acciderit, εἰ τι πάθῃ, to avoid saying 'if he dies.' After facere and fieri the abl. (instr.) is the regular construction, e.g. v. 594 quid ea re fuat, Truc. 799 quid eo fecisti puero? Truc. 417 quid me futurumst? But occasionally where a person is in question the dat. is used, as Men. 663 quid mihi futurumst? = τί μοι γένωμαι; and so v. 822.

158. habeo dotem unde dem, 'I have the means for providing a dowry &c.' But the hiatus is very harsh. Perhaps we should read ut inde dem or ei habeo dotem unde dem.

159. ut...conlocem. The order is ut conlocem eam (filiam) in conditionem dignam se. Conlocare, 'to settle' and condicio, 'a match,' 'partie' as v. 455, are specially used of marriage. Se is abl. after dignam: for the order in se dignam see Madvig, Advers. crit. II. p. 514. The separation of the preposition from its case by another word is usual in oaths and adjurations (per te deos oro &c.), but otherwise is almost confined to poetry.

160. pro di immortales, a purely colloquial exclamation, 'good heavens,' not a real invocation. These phrases are generally elliptic, as v. 591 di, uostram fidem (sc. imploro), pro deum immortalium (sc. fidem), di melius, di meliora &c. Pro is followed either by voc. as here, or by acc. of exclamation as pro deorum atque hominum fidem, Cic. Tusc. v. 16. The order of the following words is quam cito paucis uerbis (instr.) alium me fecisti. For alium...alius cf. Verg. Georg. 1. 420 pectora motus | nunc alios, alios dum nubila uentus agebat, | concipiunt.

162. sed ut occepisti and v. 897 ita ut occepi, a standing formula for resuming a narrative after an interruption, 'but as you began,' more fully Rud. 1119 ut id occepi dicere.

perge porro proloqui, 'go on further to explain.' Proloqui, an infin. after perge, like Men. 244, 245 operam numquam sumam quaerere... numquam desistam exsequi, and see note on v. 76. Porro, an adv. meaning motion towards, like retro, citro, ultro. From the spelling porod on a Praenestine cista it is clear that ō represents -ōd, the old abl. ending of O-stems. Porro means (1) 'farther' (of space), (2) 'further,' (3) 'more-over.' Perge porro is like loquere porro, ausculta porro &c. Perge does not require porro, but the emphatic pleonasm is in the style of comedy, as redemi russum v. 182.

163. qui = quo modo, 'how Charmides' forethought, my loyalty and the whole secret were almost utterly ruined by that blockhead.' The proper sequence after qui would be dederit, but owing to the length of the relative sentence and the position of the verb at the end, the subj. is ἀνακολούθως replaced by the indic. dedit. Cf. Amph. 17 nunc cuius iussu uenio et quam ob rem uenerim dicam, Rud. 355 non audiuiisti quo pacto leno clanculum nos hinc auferre uoluit...inposiuit? The distinction between dependent and independent questions &c. had not been fully made in Plautus' time. This is clear from the cases where indic. and subj. are used together without difference of meaning, as Cist. 58 eloquere...et quid tibi est et quid uelis nostram operam.

165. ignauōs, nom. sing. Old Latin avoided -uu, hence suōs, not suus, suom not suum, quom not quum &c., but at the end of the third cent. B.C. ō passed into ū, e.g. bonum for earlier bonom, but equom till the time of Quintilian. Ille ignauos = Lesbonicus.

pessum dedit, lit. 'sent to the bottom.' So pessum ire, pessum abire, pessum premere, like uenum dare (uendere), uenum ire (uēnire), nuptum dare, nuptum ire &c.

166. quidum? = πῶς δῆ; see vv. 14 and 98.

ruri dum sum ego unos sex dies, 'while I am in the country for only a few days.' Ruri is the true loc. form, and rure is properly

'from the country.' See Langen, Beiträge p. 308. Unus is used in the plur. in the sense of solus, as Bacch. 832 tres unos passus, Pseud. 54 unae quinque remorantur minae.

167. inconsultu meo, ἀπαξ ἐληφμένον, but like iniussu meo &c.

168. aedis uenalis hasce inscribit litteris, 'by means of a bill he advertises this house for sale.' So Ter. Haut. 144 inscripsi ilico aedis mercede. For the acc. after inscribere, not strictly a transitive verb, cf. Cic. Verr. II. 2. 167 inscribere statuas, and see Roby, L. G. 1120.

169. adesuriuit...lupus. Magis has been inserted by some one who did not see that acrius qualified both verbs. Cf. v. 200. Adesurire on the analogy of addubitare = 'to begin to be hungry.' So Stich. 180 essurio acrius. The original passage in Philemon was an allusion to the Greek proverb λύκος ἔχαιρεν.

170. observauit dum dormitaret canes, 'he watched until the dog (as he thought) was asleep'—dormitaret, not as the MSS. dormitarent, because one watch-dog only, viz. Callicles, is in question. Plautus uses canes, the old form of the nom. sing., along with canis the later form, by which canes had been replaced in the time of Varro, L. L. VII. 32.

171. gregem uniuersum uoluit totum auortere, 'he wished to carry off the whole flock entirely.' The use of totum adj. for adv. (antimeria) is idiomatic—as in totus doleo, sum totus uester &c.—nor is the word otiose after uniuersum, for uniuersum qualifies gregem while totum strengthens the verb. So Most. 146 non uideor mihi sarcire posse aedes meas, quin totae perpetuae ruant, 'to prevent it falling into ruin from end to end.'

172. haec...canes, δεικτικῶς, 'the dog in my person,' 'I the dog.' So v. 1115 hic homo = ego, Capt. 153 huic illud dolet, ibid. 335 huius est cluens, Epid. 74 haec puppis, Pseud. 723 hoc caput.

174. quid...facere? The question is put independently, not dependent on fac sciam. Cf. Pseud. 695 id tu modo, me quid uis facere, fac sciam, where the form is still that of a direct question. Fac, which is not older than face, is formed like dic, duc, on the analogy of the short injunctive forms es, fer, uel = es-s*, fer-s*, uel-s*. Cf. δός, σχές &c. Dic, fac, &c. are used where the words go closely together as dic mihi, fac sciam, but where there is anything of a pause dice, face are used, as Mil. 256 haec ei dice, monstra, praeci-pe. A good instance is Rud. 124, Daem. tu si quid opus est dice. Ples. dic quod te rogo; where we have first dice because of the break which follows, then dic closely combining with the next words. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 518. On the paratactic construction fac sciam, cf. on v. 60.

176. aduersum quam, 'contrary to what,' is not found elsewhere. SC. de Bacch. 25 aruorsum ead quam &c. It is like prae quam, praeter quam, contra quam, where quam is due to the comparative sense of the adverbs.

177. dominum...hisce aedibus, 'owner to this house,' dat. where gen. might be looked for. See on v. 81.

178. qui emisset, eius essetne ea pecunia? 'the man who bought it, would the money (the treasure) be his property?' The relative clause stands emphatically first, and ne is affixed to the second word in its clause.

181. neque adeo, 'nor further,' 'and moreover I did not &c.' See on v. 141 and cf. v. 918.

182. illi redemi russum, 'I bought back the house for him' (Char- mides). For the pleonasm see on v. 162. Rursus, russum for reuersus, reuersum. Plautus uses russum mainly at the end of the line and after compounds with re- as redeo russum. Rursus becomes russum as prorsum becomes prossum (Cist. 699). Lucretius has rusum introsum, prosum susum, see Munro on Lucr. III. 45.

a me, 'out of my own pocket.'

183. si recte seu peruorse facta sunt. This is the regular form of disjunction in Plautus and Terence, si...seu (siue) 'whether'... 'or' like et...etne, never seu (siue) in the first member. So e.g. Curc. 4 si media nox est, siue est prima uespera.

185. em mea malefacta &c., 'there you have my misdeeds.' For em see v. 3, Capt. 373 and 540 em tibi hominem, ibid. 859 em manum.

186. hascine propter res maledicas famas ferunt, 'these are the actions on account of which they spread slanderous reports.' Enclitic ne affixed to the first word in the sentence in positive as well as interrogative clauses. Cf. Epid. 73 haecine ubi scibit senex &c., Mil. 309 hocine si miles sciat &c. See Minton Warren, American Journal of Philology, vol. 2; C. M. Mulvany, Classical Review, IX. i. p. 15. Ferunt, with the indefinite subject 'they' = 'people generally,' means 'spread' as Pers. 351 inimici famam non ita ut natast ferunt.

187. παῖδες. Other Greek words in this play vv. 419, 705, 1025. So euge, sophōs &c. and many borrowed words. Like the Greek in Cicero's Letters, they are best represented in translation by a French equivalent.

castigatorem, with reference to Megaronides' intention, as explained v. 23 ff.

188. occlusti must not be regarded as a shortening of occlusisti.

It is an older and properly a sigmatic aorist form. So dixti, duxti, spexti, misti, &c., with the corresponding infins. dixe, duxe, misse, &c.

190. prouinciam, 'duty,' the department or province of work assigned to a man. So regularly in Plautus, e.g. Mil. 1159 hanc tibi ego impero prouinciam, Cas. 103 abi dierectus tuam in prouinciam.

192. numquid uis? 'you don't want anything, do you?' A polite formula used before leaving, to make sure that you have done all that is required. So numquid aliud? numquid me aliud? and more fully numquid nunc aliud me uis? num quippiam aliud me uis?

193. sed quid ais? 'but look here!' A standing formula to attract a person's attention before asking him a question, to which this question (= 'I say you,' dis donc) is prefixed. 'But what do you say to the question I'm going to ask you?' Cf. quid tu? v. 116. Other instances in this play are vv. 196, 892, 939. In v. 892 the main question is interrupted by the counter question quid est? just as it is by Callicles' quid uis? here.

habet=habitat as v. 390.

194. posticulum hoc recepit, 'he reserved this little building at the back.' Posticulum, a little posticum, i.e. δπισθόδομος, only here and v. 1085. Recepit=excepit, legal. Gellius XVII 6. 6 nunc quoque in uenditionibus recipi dicuntur, quae excipiuntur neque ueneunt. Quo uerbo Plautus quoque in Trinummio usus est in hoc uersu "Posticulum hoc recepit, quom aedis uendidit," i.e. quom aedis uendidit, particulam quandam, quae post eas aedis erat, non uendidit sed retinuit. And similarly Nonius p. 384, save that he quotes the line with uenderet instead of uendidit.

195. 1 sane nunciam. So sane with imper. often, as Asin. 464 at nosce sane, Merc. 500 sequere sane, ibid. 677 da sane, Pers. 198 i sane, ibid. 772 cēdo sane &c.

196. Callicles has only gone a few paces when Megaronides calls him back with a fresh question, this time about Lesbonicus' sister.

nempe apud test? 'of course she is at your house?' Nempe (i.e. nem*, a case-form of the pronominal no-*, as -tem in autem is of to*, + pe) is used to introduce a question to which an affirmative reply is certainly expected. So vv. 328, 966, 1076. It is also used to introduce a statement, 'I mean.'

197. iuxta...cum mea, 'just as I do my own daughter.' Iuxta in Plautus is an adv.=aeque, and always used with cum. So Sall. Cat. 58. 5 iuxta mecum omnes intellegitis.

recte facis, uox comprobantis) (bene facis, uox gratias agentis. See on v. 384.

198. numquid &c. See on v. 192. Finding that Megaronides has exhausted his questions, Callicles withdraws. Megaronides finishes the scene by a soliloquy.

The soliloquy depicts the eager curiosity of Athenian gossip. For their political curiosity see Dem. Phil. i. 10; and this whole side of the Athenian character is admirably caught, Acts xvii. 21 'Now all the Athenians and the strangers sojourning there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell or to hear some new thing.' As the New Attic Comedy is wholly social, such traits of character are constantly handled.

199. stultius neque stolidius. The two words are identical in derivation and differ little in meaning. The idea is emphasised by being stated twice in terms nearly the same.

200. mendaciloquus and confidentiloquus are expressive compounds coined by Plautus.

neque argutum magis. A gives neque adeo argutum magis. If this is kept we must read neque mendaciloquom neque adeo argutum magis, where magis applies to both adjectives as acrius does to both verbs in v. 169. But if this reading is adopted, it becomes almost inevitable to transpose lines 201 and 200 so as to bring neque adeo to the end of the list. Its position in the middle is awkward. So that on the whole it is safer and simpler to cut out adeo and leave the lines in their present order.

201. confidentiloquius, 'more brazen in speech.' Confidens in Plautus is generally in malam partem, 'impudent,' 'brazen-faced.'

peiurius = periurius, and so peiëro where the r of per has been dropped owing to the consonantal value of the i.

202. quam urbani adsidui ciues, quos scurras uocant, 'than your fine busybodies of citizens whom they call men about town.' Adsiduus (adsidere), a man always present and occupied with something. Cf. deses idle (desideo). Urbanus) (rusticus, 'in the city style,' thinking himself a polished gentleman.

scurras, 'dandies,' 'flâneurs,' young, well-dressed, idle men of fashion who frequent the regular places for gossip and discuss everyone's affairs. Cf. Epid. 15 where scurra is opposed to homo militaris, Most. 15 tu urbanus uero scurra, deliciae populi, rus mihi tu obiectas? Truc. 491 non placet quem scurrae laudant, Catull. 22. 12. But in Horace scurra = parasitus in Plautus.

203. atque egomet...ibidem traho, 'and I class myself too along with them.' The meaning is iisdem adnumero, and from its use v. 412 ibidem una traho the phrase is taken from reckoning, 'place in the same category,' 'enter under the same head.' Scan ibidem—it is rarely ibidem in Plautus.

204. qui illorum uerbis falsis acceptor fui, 'who acted as receiver to—i.e. listened to—the lying words of those who' &c. Illorum is antecedent to qui in the next line. The dat. uerbis falsis after acceptor is in the comic style. See on v. 81. The whole phrase is colloquial.

206. habēt. So egēt v. 330.

207. sciunt id quod in aurem rex reginae dixerit. Reize, perhaps rightly in view of the subj. dixerit, suggests sciunt quid &c. By rex reginae the ἄρχων βασιλεύς and the βασίλισσα, mystically married at the Anthesteria, have been understood. It seems more probable that, if there is any definite allusion, it is to the Great King, the Persian monarch, who was the type of monarchy to Athenian eyes. But is not the expression popular and proverbial? Cf. Stich. 133 suos rex reginae placet, where there is no allusion to any sovereign, and the proverbial turn of the next line, with which cf. Theocr. Id. xv. 64 πάντα γυναῖκες ἴσαντι, καὶ ὡς Ζεὺς ἡγάγεθ' Ἡραν. Wagner aptly quotes Butler's Hudibras, Canto 1,

'He knew the seat of paradise,
Could tell in what degree it lies;
What Adam dreamt of, when his bride Came from her closet in his side;
Whether the devil tempted her
By a High Dutch interpreter' &c.

For a defence of the passage as it stands see Langen, Plaut. Stud. p. 79.

209. futura=futura sunt. For the omission of the copula cf. Amph. 1133 quae futura et quae facta eloquar, Bacch. 510 haec hic quae futura fabulor. neque...neque as vv. 134 and 971.

210. falsos an uero laudent, culpent...faciunt, 'whether falsely or truly they praise, (or) blame whom they choose, they do not care one straw.' Laudent, culpent, with the asyndeton common in Plautus, e.g. Amph. 13 haec ut me uoltis adprobare, adnitier, Asin. 169 ductando, amando, Bacch. 407 perdidit, pessum dedit, infr. vv. 242 and 243 &c. For floci loc. see Rud. 47, 782 &c.

212. omnis mortalis nom. pl.=tout le monde. BCD have omnis mortalis, A omnes mortales. See v. 29.

214. bonis...suis, 'because he had ousted this young fellow from the property which belonged to him.' Suis referring to the object of the sentence, Lesbonicus, not to the subject, Callicles, is emphatic from its position. A gives omnibus.

215. de, of the basis or starting-point, 'from,' 'on,' passing into a temporal sense, 'immediately after.' Roby, L. G. 1907 and 1912. So de die, de nocte, Most. 697 non bonust somnus de prandio. famigeratorum, 'tale-bearers,' 'gossips,' a Plautine word.

insciens. So v. 167. Plautus and Terence use insciens only, inscius is later. But Plautus uses nescius also in the same sense.

216. prosilui castigatum. Prosilui denotes the undue haste with which Megaronides now feels that he has acted: castigatum is supine, i.e. the acc. of the verbal noun, used after a verb of motion, like ire spectatum &c.

218. unde quidquid auditum dicant, 'on which they have heard anything that they say.' Vnde=ex qua (auctoritate) and depends on auditum. Quidquid should probably for the sake of the metre be corrected to quidque = quodcumque. But old Latin quidquid is used = quidque without the force of a relative, as v. 881. See also Aul. 198 qui ubi quidquid tetigerunt tenent, Mil. 311, Most. 831.

nisi id appareat. The force of si in quodsi is continued. There are two 'if' clauses, juxtaposed by asyndeton, covering the three lines 217—219, then these 'if' clauses are resumed and repeated in hoc ita si fiat, and we have the apodosis to the whole in publico fiat bono. 'If their authority were demanded..., if, unless it were forthcoming, the tale-bearer had to deal with fine and flogging—if (I say) this were so ordered, it would be ordered for the general good.' There is a similar sentence with a double protasis infr. v. 468 ff.

219. res sit cum damno et malo, 'had business to transact with,' used colloquially 'had to do with,' 'had to deal with fine and flogging,' which are practically personified by the use. Damnum, a money fine)(malum, corporal punishment.

220. publico fiat bono, lit. 'it would be done with the general good,' an abl. of attendant circumstances, as Amph. 321 olet homo quidam malo suo, Capt. 499 quid est suavius, quam bene rem gerere, bono publico? Varro, R. R. I. 13. 7 pessimo publico. See Roby, L. G. 1243.

221. pauci sint faxim &c., 'there would be few, I'd guarantee, who (pretend to) know what they don't know, and they'd keep a stricter watch (or 'a tighter rein') on their silly talking.' For the sigmatic aorist optative faxim and the paratactic construction, see on v. 60.

222. oclusiorem, lit. 'more shut up,' is a comparative formed from the part. occlusus. So factius v. 397. Both occlusior and stultiloquentia

(cf. uaniloquentia and tolutiloquentia) are Plautine words. Megaronides retires and leaves the stage vacant.

ACT II. SCENE I (223—275). Lysiteles, the virtuous young man, as his name derived from λυσιτελεῖν indicates, debates with himself in a lyrical monologue (canticum) whether he shall pursue love and pleasure or property (223—234). He expounds the ways of love. When love comes, property goes. The lover is a ruined man (235—255). He loses credit and friends (256—265). Love then must be shunned. He resolves to lead a steady life (266—275).

Such a canticum as this partly replaces the lost Chorus. The loss of the Chorus is also to some extent made up by the moralising turn of certain characters in a play, such as Lysiteles and his father Philto here.

The resolve of Lysiteles to lead a steady life introduces naturally the negotiations for his marriage.

The whole of Act II. is devoted to the second element of the story, viz. the marriage negotiations. Act I. is concerned with the position of Callicles, Act II. with the affairs of Lysiteles—these two strands will be woven together in Act III.

The metres in this canticum change with extraordinary rapidity. Each change of subject and feeling is represented by a corresponding change of metre. The scansion of some lines is very doubtful, but the metres are probably as follows:—See Niemeyer, Kritischer Anhang, p. 144.

223—231	Bacch. Tetram. acatalectic
232	Bacch. Dimeter
233, 234	Septenarian Iamb.
235	Anapaest. Dimeter
236?	Iamb. Dim. + cret. dim. catal. (Septen. Iamb.?)
237 a	Anap. Dim.
237 b?
238	Septen. Troch.
239 and 241?
240 and 242	Anap. Dim.
243—4—6	Cret. Tetram.
245 and 7?
249—251	Cret. Tetram.
252	Anap. Tetram.
253	Sept. Troch.

- 254, 5 Iamb. Dim.
 255 b Iamb. tripod. catal.
 256—9 Anap. Dim.
 260?
 261—9 Anap. Dim.
 270 and 273 Cret. Tetram.
 271 and 272 Cret. Dim. + Troch. dipod.
 274 and 275 Anap. Dim.

For a full discussion of the metres see Spengel.

223. sīmitū is an old form = simul, used frequently by Plautus, found as an archaism in some inscriptions of the Empire, and quoted by Nonius with examples from Plautus and Lucilius. Plautus elides the last syllable, Stich. 249 mecum simitu ut ires ad sese domum.

224. indipiscor, from indu (endō) and apiscor, is more frequent in Comedy than apiscor or adipiscor. Cf. induperator, old Latin for imperator, indugredi for ingredi, indaudire and indutiae, and Greek ἐνδον, ἐνδο-θι, ἐνδο-θεν. See Lindsay, L. L. pp. 582, 583.

225. egomet...defetigo, 'I vex and distress and wear myself out.' Coquo often in poetry = 'vex,' as Ennius Ann. 340 cura quae nunc te coquit; macero regularly in Plautus of the effects of grief and the like, as Capt. 133 tuo maerore maceror. Defetigo (not defatigo) is the best spelling in early Latin, though defatigo is usual later.

226. magister exercitor, 'master trainer'—two nouns where adj. and noun would be normal. But cf. Pers. 780 dies corruptor, servus homo, ἀνὴρ στρατιώτης, &c. In v. 1016 exercitor only. The reflections of his mind keep Lysiteles as busily employed as the παιδορπίζης does a boy in the Palaestra, i.e. his thoughts are task-masters. Exercitōr, and so v. 1016.

227. sed, 'but still,' despite all my exertions in thinking.

228. artem, 'which plan of life of these (two) I am to choose by preference.' Artem, see on v. 72: harum is explained by amor and res in v. 230.

229. aetati agundae firmiorem, 'which I am to consider the more secure (ἀσφαλέστεραν) for the conduct of life.' The dat. is the 'dat. of work contemplated,' see Roby, L. G. 1156 and 1157.

230. amorin med an rei opsequi potius par sit, 'whether it is right for me to give my adhesion by preference to love or to money.' Rei = quaestui, and rei obsequi = rei studere. Mēd, the old Latin acc., which by the time of Terence has become mē, owing to the Latin phonetic law that final d was lost after a long vowel. Med, ted, sed are probably abl. of the pers. pron. used as acc. See Müller, Handbuch 11². p. 345, Lindsay, L. L. p. 421. It is necessary to read med, for rei is apparently spondaic only before consonants.

231. utra in parte, 'on which side (i.e. on the side of love or the side of money) there is more pleasure for living one's span of life, this is a point on which I am not quite clear.' The order of the words is plus uoluptatis sit ad aetatem uitae agundam. Cf. Amph. 633 satin parua res est uoluptatum in uita atque in aetate agunda?

233. hau is used for haud only before consonants, e.g. hau scio, but haud habeo: the unusual order satis hau for haud satis gives more emphasis to both words, as Aul. 231 tu me bos magis haud respicias, gnatus quasi numquam siem.

nisi hoc sic faciam, opinor, 'only, I think, I'll do this.' Nisi='only,' elliptically, 'it is not clear, except (it is clear),' as with nescio nisi, 'I don't know, except (I know),' e.g. Rud. 750 profecto nescio: nisi scio probiorem hanc esse quam te, Pseud. 1102 non edepol scio: nisi opseruemus quo eat, Cic. pro Rosc. Am. 99 nescio: nisi hoc uiideo, &c.

234. ut follows sic and explains what he proposes to do: 'I'll do this, I'll consider well both courses together, act as judge and arraigned person for the purpose.' Iudex, because he will decide between amor and res; reus, because he will shape his life according to the decision given.

236. expediant, 'develope,' 'run their course'; expedire is used absolutely, as Amph. Prol. 5 ut res uostrorum omnium bene expedire uoltis, ibid. 521 nequiter paene expediuit prima parasitatio. See Langen, Beiträge, pp. 1—3.

237 b. postulat, 'expects.' Postulare in comedy = ἀξιοῦν. It may be followed either by acc. and infin., as here se conicere, or by the simple infin. as v. 972. Love is personified as a hunter trying to entangle the game in the toils.

As cupidum hominem refers to a class of men rather than any individual, we have v. 238 the plur. eos. Cupidum...cupit is an intentional assonance, 'lusts for the lustful,' 'has a passion for the passionate.'

238. subdole ab re consulit, 'Love counsels them craftily against their interest.'

ab re, 'away from the interest of,' i.e. 'contrary to the interest of,' must be carefully distinguished from ex re=in rem, 'for the interest of,'

as v. 628. Thus Asin. 224 haud est ab re aucupis, 'contrary to the fowler's interests,' Capt. 338 dum ab re nequid ores, but Pseud. 336 ex tua re non est, 'it is not to your interest,' Capt. 386 quod in rem recte conducatur tuam, 'what would be really to your interest,' &c.

Blanditur is a gloss which has wrongly been incorporated into the text.

239 a. blandiloquentulus, 'fair-spoken,' a Plautine diminutive, ἀπαξ εἰρημένον. harpago=ἄρπαξ.

239 b. cuppes, ἀπαξ εἰρημένον, = 'fond of cuppedia' (Stich. 714 nil moror cuppedia), i.e. 'dainty,' 'lickerish.'

elegans, 'fastidious.'

240. latebricolarum, proleptic, 'he seduces men and makes them haunt low places.' In the next line the MSS. agree in blandus, inops. Blandus occurs rather soon after blandiloquentulus, but that in itself is not decisive against the word. Inops is probably right, quoniam inops est, celata indagat, Hor. Epist. I. 18. 98.

241. celatum, short gen. plur., the old form. The termination -ōm, Greek -ων, would in time in Latin become -ōm, then -īm, e.g. socium in S.C. de Bacch. But as A-stems took both in Greek and the Italic languages the termination -āsōm (Μουσάδων = Μουσάων = Μουσῶν and Μουσάδων = Μουσᾶρīm), a gen. plur. of O-stems was formed in Latin with the suffix -ōrum, in old Latin -ōrom, which by Cicero's time altogether ousted the older -om, -um. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 401.

242. nam qui amat quod amat &c., 'for as soon as the lover is smitten and stricken down by the kisses of the beloved (i.e. sauis eius quod amat), forthwith his substance slips away and melts,' 'slips and slides away.' As qui amat regularly = amator, so quod amat frequently = amica, e.g. Merc. 744 nam qui amat quod amat si habet, id habet pro cibo. quom extemplo=ἐπεὶ τάχιστα, vv. 492 and 725. It is renewed by ilico in the apodosis, as Mil. 1176 quom extemplo hoc erit factum, ubi intro haec abierit, ibi tu ilico facito &c., and Epid. 563 postquam audiui ilico, ... continuo argentum dedi. Sagittatus, perculsus and labitur, liquitur are pairs of parallel words juxtaposed with asyndeton. Cf. turbant, miscent, v. 285, and see on v. 210. Sagittatus is scanned sagittatus, and sauis becomes a dissyllable by synizesis. So by synizesis v. 235 omnium, and v. 269 obnoxios.

244. da mihi hoc...si audes. These are the words of the amica, 'Give me this, my honey, if you love me, if you please.' Si audes, 'if you please,' often contracted sodes as v. 562, si uis contr. sis v. 650, si uultis contr. sultis.

245. cuculus, 'simpleton.' The lover's reply follows.

ocelle, 'apple of my eye,' 'darling,' Asin. 664, Catull. 31. 2.

247. illa pendentem ferit, 'she hits him when he's down.' The expression is taken from the custom of tying a slave up to flog him. He is helpless to resist, and so the lover here. So Most. 1167 uerberibus caedere multum pendens, Men. 951 ego te pendentem fodiam stimulis, &c. There are similar descriptions of the lady's mercilessness, Truc. 50 ff. and 425 ff. iam = ἤδη, 'forthwith.' But orat without a personal object is odd, and possibly iam amplius orat should be expunged as a gloss on pendentem ferit, and ni amplius etiam as another gloss. Thus Langen, Beiträge, p. 318, would make two lines

*ibi pendentem ferit: non satis id est mali, (pps. ei for mali?)
quod ecibit, quod comest, quod facit sumpti.*

248. non satis id est mali...quod facit sumpti. The quod clauses are subjects to non satis est mali; 'what she drinks up, what she eats up, what she squanders is not mischief enough, unless there is more still.' ecibit, 'consumes by drinking,' comest (= comedit), 'consumes by eating,' as Truc. 156 uos saltem si quid quaeritis, ecibitis et comestis. Whether the words are genuine or not, the construction non satis est ni is quite correct. Cf. Ter. Phorm. 724 non satis est tuom te officium fecisse, id si non fama adprobat, and Merc. 692 parumne est malai rei...ni sumptuosus insuper etiam siet?

250. sumpti, gen. of sumptus, 4th decl. This is in the Comedians the normal genitive of the 4th declension. Other instances are peni, v. 254 (though this may be gen. from the neuter form penum), gemiti, uicti, tumulti, quaesti, senati. Quintilian in the first cent. A.D. says that it is impossible to decide whether senatus or senati is the proper gen. of senatus. See Neue, Formenl. 1. p. 352 ff., Roby, L. G. 399.

251. nox datur: ducitur familia tota, 'an assignation is made: she takes her whole household with her.' So Bacchis, Ter. Haut. 739 ff., is represented as escorted by a whole retinue of slaves. familiā, perhaps preserving the original length of the nom. in A-stems. But see Lindsay, L. L. pp. 210 and 373, who thinks that the lengthening is only metrical, except in the case of Greek words.

252. uestiplica, 'wardrobe-woman,' but A gives uestispica, which is the form in Nonius p. 12 and some inscriptions.

unctor, 'bath-attendant,' who anointed persons in the bath. Sen. Epist. 123. 4. Iuv. III. 76 and VI. 421 speaks of this slave by his Greek name, aliptes = ἀλείπτῃς.

auri is used for 'jewellery' generally. flabelliferae, carrying the peacock's feathers, which were used as fans—sandaligerulae, because sandals were taken off when the guests took their places at table, and brought by a slave just before they took their departure. Hence soleas poscere &c. as Hor. Sat. II. 8. 77 = 'to prepare to get up and go.'

253. cantrices, probably to sing during the meal : cistellatrices—the cistellae contained money and valuables. Girls with cistellae are very common on painted vases. The plurals are plurals of rhetorical exaggeration to make the whole number appear as large as possible, and with the same object the 'messengers' are comically subdivided into nuntii, renuntii, as if there was one set to bear messages and another set to carry replies.

254. raptores panis et peni, 'plunderers of prog and provender,' in apposition to the slaves described in the two preceding lines, to whom also illis v. 255 a refers.

257. ubi qui eget, quam preti sit parui, 'of how little account a man is when he is poor,' qui is indefinite and ubi qui = si quis. Cf. Pers. 313 nam ubi qui mala tangit manu, dolores cooriuntur, Pseud. 681 bene ubi quoi scimus consilium accidisce, hominem catum eum esse declaramus. Preti, by the shortening to which words properly iambic were subject, known as 'the brevis breuians' law.

258. apage is the Greek imper. ἀπαγε. In Latin it is really an exclamation used either absolutely or, as here, with an acc., apage te, 'avaunt thee,' which is an acc. of exclamation, like the accs. after ah, o, eu &c.

259. illud, like ἐκεῖνο, of something that is to follow, here the infinitives esse (= edere) et bibere. 'Although this is pleasant, I mean feasting and drinking, still Love brings bitterness enough to vex (the lover).' Amor amara are brought together for the assonance. So Vergil plays on the sound, Ecl. III. 110. Cf. Cist. 68 eho an amare occipere amarum est? ibid. 69 Amor et melle et felle est fecundissimus, gustui dat dulce, amarum ad satietatem usque oggerit.

260 b. satis quod aegre sit. We seem to want, as Leo says, satis quod <amatori> aegre sit. The lover is the subject to the verbs in the following lines, and that he should be mentioned here seems indispensable. Otherwise the change of subject from amor to amator is a harsh κατὰ σύνεσιν construction.

261. fugitat for fugat, Spengel. Cf. Poen. 508 atque equidem hercle dedita opera amicos fugitavi senes, and with the whole passage Truc. 574 (meretrix meum erum) priuabit bonis, luce, honore atque amicis.

264 b. procul abhibendust atque abstandus, 'one must keep love at a distance and stand aloof from it.' Abhibendus is ἀπαξ εἰρημένον, and a correction of the MSS., A adhibendus, CD abtinendus. Leo proposes to change to the second person throughout,

mille modis, Amor, ignorandu's, procul abhibendu's atque abstandu's.

But this weakens the effect of the direct address to Love, v. 266. For the use of the gerundive of the neuter verb absto cf. v. 1159 placenda est dos and Epid. 74 puppis pereundast probe. 'The use dates from a time when the border-line between verbs transitive and verbs neuter had not been sharply drawn.' If this view is correct, to change to the gerund, as has been proposed—e.g. procul apsbitendum atque abstandumst, 'one must withdraw to a distance and stand aloof,'—is unnecessary, and harsh after the gerundive (ignorandus) in the preceding line.

265 a. praecipitauit, intrans., 'has fallen,' 'plunged.' See on v. 146.

265 b. quasi saxo saliat, 'than if he were to leap from the rock.' An allusion to the punishment of criminals by throwing them from a height, κατὰ τοῦ κρημνοῦ among the Greeks, from the Tarpeian Rock (Liv. xxv. 7. 14) at Rome. Saxo, a bare abl., as v. 639 officio migrat. This is naturally more common with compound verbs, as v. 601 exturbauit nostris aedibus, v. 650 corde expelle desidiā tuo.

quasi = 'than if' in old Latin. In Plautus there are at least three other passages, Aul. 231 magis haud...gnatus quasi numquam siem, Mil. 481 neque...plus curat quasi non seruitutem seruiat, Truc. 340 me nemo magis respiciet, quasi...fuerim mortuos. But Poen. 240 cogita, amabo, item nos perhiberi quam si salsa muriatica esse autumantur we get quam si in the sense of quasi, 'as.' The classical differentiation between quasi, 'as' and quam si, 'than if' had not yet been made. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 607.

266. tuas res tibi habeto, 'pack up your traps and go,' a jocular turn of the regular formula of divorce, given in full Amph. 928 ualeas, tibi habeas res tuas, reddas meas, Cic. II. Phil. 69 illam mimam suas res sibi habere iussit, Mart. X. 41. 1 ueterem, Proculeia, maritum | deseris, atque iubet res sibi habere suas.

267. fuas, an archaic form, properly an optative—see on v. 6—used as pres. subj. So v. 594 fuat, Bacch. 156 fuam, also at the end of the line, and as an intentional archaism Verg. Aen. x. 108 Tros Rutulusue fuat &c. In place of forsitan Plautus has fors fuat an, e.g. Pseud. 432.

268. sunt tamen quos miseros maleque habeas, 'still there are people for you to keep wretched and in misery.' Tamen = 'even if you let me alone.' For miseros maleque habeas, adj. and adv. coupled together, cf. Bacch. 474 Pistoclerum falso atque insontem arguis, Pseud. 110 quo pacto et quantas soleam turbellas dare, ibid. 687 nimis diu et longum loquor.

269. quos tibi obnoxios fecisti, 'the people whom you have got into your power'—an explanation of the previous line.

270. certa res est = certum est, v. 585, 'the thing is decided' = 'I am resolved.' So Mil. 267 res paratast, ut pugnandoque hominem capere est certa res, Stich. 473 G. promitte. E. certumst. G. sic face inquam. E. certa res, and certa res generally closes a line. ad frugem, v. 118.

271. animo labos, the reading of the 'Palatine' MSS. A omits animo.

272. boni, in its social sense, 'men of family, position, standing,' like ἀγαθός) (κακός in the Greek gnomic poets: rem, 'property,' 'wealth,' as vv. 230 and 243, fidem, 'credit,' honorem &c., 'office, (political) prestige and influence.'

273. pretium, 'reward,' 'recompense for their labours,' as Capt. 940.

274. eo mihi magis lubet &c., 'therefore I rather wish to live with men of principle in preference to men of no principle and lying tongues.' There is no real pleonasm in the use of both magis and potius, for magis goes with lubet, potius with cum probis. So Asin. 689 magis decorumst libertum potius quam patronum onus in uia portare.

Now that Lysiteles has resolved to avoid a wild and extravagant life, we are prepared for his proposal to his father that he shall marry and settle down.

SCENE 2 (276—391). Philto comes out in search of his son. He laments the degeneracy of the age. Lysiteles claims to have lived an innocent life, and asks his father's assistance to help a friend in trouble. Philto moralizes again on the danger of helping the bad so as to feed their distemper, and utters a number of sententious commonplaces. He is dismayed to hear that the friend Lysiteles wishes to help is the spendthrift Lesbonicus, but when he understands that Lysiteles does not wish to give anything but to receive Lesbonicus' sister without a dowry, he consents and undertakes to make the proposal to Lesbonicus.

The choral character and the lyric metres of the last scene are continued. The lyrical monody is succeeded by a lyrical dialogue. Niemeyer gives the metres as:—

276—278	Anapaest. Dim.
279, 81, 83	Cretic Tetram.
280	Anapaest. Dim.
282, 4, 5, 6	Octonarian Iamb.
287—292	Anapaest. Dim.
293, 5, 7	Cretic Tetram.
294, 6, 8—300	Anapaest. Dim.
301—391	Septenarian Troch.

According to this scheme vv. 288—292 are made into two lines each, and so v. 299—300 is divided.

276. quo illic homo foras se penetrauit? 'whither has that fellow (my son, Lysiteles) betaken himself?' Penetrare is used as a transitive (reflexive) verb. So vv. 291 and 314, Amph. 250 penetrant se in fugam, but Bacch. 66, according to the MSS., it is intransitive, penetrem huius modi in palaestram? See on v. 146. Spengel penetrauit? But MSS. penetrauit ex aedibus? Ex aedibus may be a gloss on foras.

278 a. neque tibi ero in mora, 'I will not delay you.' So Ter. Andr. 467 ne in mora illi sis, Pers. 51 caue fuas mi in quaestione = 'be to seek,' Cic. Fam. VIII. 14 quod iudicium nunc in expectatione est, etiam in bona spe.

279. par, 'in conformity with.'

282. necullum sermonem exsequi, 'to engage in any conversation at all.' Necullum = οὐδ' ἔνα, as Capt. 104 necullast spes iuuentutis, Lucr. v. 839 necutrum. See Munro's notes on Lucr. II. 23 and IV. 1217. Nec in old Latin has the sense of non, as XII. Tab. ast ei custos nec escit: hence its uses in the compounds neg-otium, neg-lego, nec-opinans, in the legal phrase res nec mancipi, in Plautus' nec recte dicere = male dicere (Asin. 155), and Catullus' (64. 83) funera nec funera = τάφοι ἀταφοί. For the use of exsequi cf. v. 686 egestatem exsequi, Capt. 195 aerumnam exsequi, Pseud. 995 mortem exsequi, where it is an equivalent for perpeti, 'to endure.'

283. hoc saeculum, 'the present generation.' So v. 290 hoc genus hominum.

285. turbant, miscent. For the asyndeton see on v. 210. Mores is the object, mali the subject. Then mali is subdivided into and explained by the three singulars, rapax, auarus, inuidus.

The denunciation of the age is perfectly general. It fits Greek quite as well as Roman life, and we need have no doubt that the passage is modelled on Philemon's original and not an addition of Plautus' own.

286. habent, 'they regard what is sacred as common, state-property as private property,' i.e. they don't know the difference between meum and tuum, either in their religious or their political life.

hiulca, 'gaping.' This is usually taken in the sense of 'greedy,' in which case the metaphor will be the same as in inhiare v. 169, viz. eagerly open-mouthed to get all they can. But perhaps the figure is rather taken from the gaping of ill-caulked timber, and the meaning is 'untrustworthy,' 'with great gaps and cracks in their characters,' = rimosa.

287 b. canto, 'I din it into you,' 'preach to you,' of constant repetitions in a monotonous sing-song tone, as Ter. Haut. 260 qui harum mores cantabat mihi. And so ὑμνεῖν.

288. tantum fas habent..., 'they think themselves bound to keep their hands off only what they cannot clutch.' tantum, 'so much only,' quo manus abstineant = (fas habent) ut ab eo manus abstineant, a construction like that of dignus &c. Manū, queñt, habent, manūs. Such frequent shortenings only in anapaests.

289. cetera 'rape, trahe, fuge, late,' 'with everything else it is "grab, haul, run, hide,"' i.e. their own words are quoted, as Pseud. 138 qui haec habent consilia, ubi data occasiost, 'rape, clepe, tene, harpaga, bibe, es, fuge.'

290. quia...durauit, 'because I have lived to see the present race of men.' Durare ad = ἐπιδῆν. The clause is dependent on lacrimas haec mihi eliciunt = lacrumo (cf. Mil. 1328 lacrumo quia diiungimur). After verbs of the affections, joy, sorrow, anger and the like, Plautus almost invariably uses quia not quod, and, generally, following colloquial usage he prefers quia to quod. See Langen, Beiträge, p. 55 ff.

291. quin prius me ad pluris penetraui? 'why did I not sooner wend my way to another world,' or 'join the majority?' Perhaps 'why was I not sooner gathered to my fathers?' might serve as an equivalent. Pluris, 'the majority,' is an euphemism to avoid saying 'the dead.' So Petronius, Sat. 42. 12 abiit ad plures, and Ar. Eccl. 1073 γραῦς ἀνεστηκῦῖα παρὰ τῶν πλειονων = παρὰ τῶν τετελευτηκότων.

292. nam hi mores maiorum laudant, eosdem lutitant quos conlaudant, 'for though the men of the present day praise the ways of their fathers, they heap contempt upon the very people they eulogise.' This is Philto's reason for wishing himself dead. His contemporaries honour the past with their words, but dishonour it by their deeds. Lutitant, ἄπαξ εἰρημένον, is a frequentative from lutum, lutare, meaning 'to bespatter with dirt,' 'bring into contempt.' Cf. conlutulentet,

'cover with infamy,' v. 693. The whole sentence is a good example of the Latin co-ordination of contrasted clauses. In Greek also contrasted clauses are co-ordinated, but made clearer by μέν...δέ. In English the first clause is subordinated to the second and introduced by 'while' or 'though.' See Prof. Mayor's note on Cic. II. Phil. 110. There are similar sentences vv. 645, 646, also v. 832.

293. hisce ego de artibus gratiam facio, 'about these practices (see v. 72) I let you off following them or tainting your mind with them.' The phrase gratiam facere alicui alicuius rei or de aliqua re means 'to renounce something in favour of someone,' and may be used (1) literally 'to give up,' or (2) 'to let off.' Thus Cas. 372 de istac Casina huic nostro ulico gratiam facias, 'give up,' Rud. 1414 iuris iurandi uolo gratiam facias, 'let off.' See Sonnenschein's note ad loc. For alicuius or de aliqua re a ne with subj. clause may be substituted, as Mil. 576 quam benigne gratiam fecit, ne iratus esset, 'how kindly he dispensed with being angry.' So here Philto tells his son that 'he lets him off,' 'dispenses with his following' the practices in question. 'He is not anxious that his son should follow these practices' is by emphatic meiosis equivalent to saying 'he is anxious he should not follow them.'

294. ne colas neue inbuas ingenium = ne eas colas neue eis inbuas ingenium. Inbuere carries with it the notion that the thing tainted is new (so 'your young mind' here) or that the action is done for the first time. So Sen. Troad. 215 rudem cruore regio dextram inluit, 'stained for the first time a hand unstained before,' Mart. VIII. 51. 17 inbuat egregium digno mihi nectare munus, 'the first time your splendid gift (a cup) is used may it be filled with wine worthy of it.' Philto does not wish his young son's unformed mind to take its first colouring from the corrupt ways of his degenerate contemporaries.

295. antiquis, 'good old ways,' as v. 72.

297. nil ego istos moror faeceos mores, 'I don't care about those impure morals, thick and muddy.' Faeceos, ἀπαξ ἐληφμένον, 'full of lees and sediment,' like wine from the bottom of the cask. The metaphor is continued in turbidos which, applied to liquid, means 'thick, muddy,' the opposite of liquidus. But turbidos may be a gloss on faeceos. Nil moror, 'I do not detain,' 'I dismiss,' hence 'I do not value,' e.g. Stich. 714 nil moror cuppedia, 'I don't care about dainties,' Hor. Epist. I. 15. 16 uina nihil moror illius orae, Verg. Aen. v. 400 nec dona moror.

298. boni, 'men of position.' See on v. 272.

299. haec tibi si mea imperia capesses, 'take upon yourself,' 'take in hand my directions.' So Verg. Aen. I. 77 iussa capessere.

302. seruiui seruitutem, 'served a regular service to,' a strong and overdrawn way of saying 'I have steadily obeyed.' Seruire seruitutem, 'to serve a service,' is an instance of the figura etymologica of which, because of the alliteration, Plautus is fond, e.g. dicta dicere v. 77, uitam uiuere, facere facinora, pugnam pugnare, machinam machinari, prandium prandere &c., and with nouns and adjs. pretio pretioso, pulcrum pulcritudinem, or advs. and verbs propere properare, ualide ualere, nitide nitere &c., e.g. Amph. 278 optumo optume optumam operam das. For the asyndeton imperiis, praeceptis see on v. 210.

303. pro ingenio, 'according to natural disposition' = quatenus ingenium meum spectabam. Ingenium, 'natural disposition') (animus, 'fancy,' 'inclination' = ἐπιθυμία. pro imperio tuo, 'according to your authority,' for imperium = patria potestas as Pers. 343 meum, opino, imperiumst in te, non in me tibi where a father is speaking to his daughter.

305. qui homo, 'if a man' = si quis, as Asin. 323 em ista uirtus est, quando usust, qui malum fert fortiter, 'when one can on occasion take a thrashing like a man,' Aul. 489 &c. Cf. note on 257.

306. utrum...ne...an. So often in Plautus, e.g. Capt. 268, Mil. 345, Pseud. 709, Rud. 104. There are three particles, but only two alternatives. Vtrum must still retain in part its old pronominal meaning 'which thing of two' (cf. πότερον), and is used to shew that there is going to be a deliberative question with two alternatives, which are introduced respectively by -ne and an.

308. si animus hominem pepulit, actumst, 'if his inclination has routed the man, it is all up with him.' Pepulit continues the figure begun in depugnat.

309. dum uiuit, uictor uictorum cluet, 'his whole life long he is called the conqueror of conquerors.' Victor uictorum, 'the conqueror of conquerors' = 'the greatest of conquerors.' 'He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city,' Prov. xvi. 32. Cluet, 'is called,' like audire ('Matutine pater, seu Iane libentius audis') ἀκούειν, κλύειν, bene audire &c. Cf. vv. 496 and 620. Or we may take dum uiuit, 'in his lifetime,' i.e. his glory comes at once, not, as with most conquerors, after death.

311. nimio satiust &c., 'it is far better to obey the dictates of duty than the promptings of inclination,' lit. 'to be as it is your duty than as pleases inclination.' Nimio, 'by much,' see on v. 28. Even if this line is allowed to pass as a not inapt conclusion of Philto's speech, the next line must be enclosed in brackets as a gloss, and those critics may be right who regard both these verses 311, 312 as later additions substituted for the preceding lines 305—310.

313. istaec, 'those precepts of yours,' explained by the two succeeding lines. integumentum, 'a protection,' 'shield' for the warrior depicted in Philto's speech as fighting against inclination.

314. penetrarem me. See on v. 276.

damni conciliabulum, 'meeting-place of loss,' i.e. any place where I should meet with loss by gambling, drinking &c. Conciliabulum=σὺλ-λογος. Cf. v. 553 hospitiumst calamitatis, Bacch. 80 ut solet in istis fieri conciliabulis, Cic. Att. IX. 18 area sceleris, pro Rosc. Amer. 134 deuersorium flagitiorum omnium.

315. irem obambulatum, 'go prowling about,' for the construction (supine) see on v. 216.

316. neu...parsī sedulo, 'and I have done my best to avoid causing you vexation.' Parsi is the common early (and late) perf. of parco, the reduplicated peperi prevails in the classical period.

317. sarta tecta, 'in good repair,' 'patched and thatched,' a phrase properly applied to buildings 'in good repair and well-roofed.' Cf. Cic. Fam. XIII. 50 M' Curium sartum et tectum, ut aiunt, ab omni incommodo, detrimento, molestia sincerum integrumque conserues, whence it appears that the expression became proverbial. The asyndeton sarta tecta is legal. So ruta caesa, 'minerals and trees.' The metaphor suggested here is followed up by Philto v. 323.

318. quid exprobras bene quod fecisti? 'why cast up, make a fuss about your virtuous deeds?' Cf. Amph. Prol. 46 sed mos numquam illi fuit patri meo, ut exprobraret quod bonis faceret boni. Others place the mark of interrogation after exprobras and take bene quod fecisti with what follows. The pronouns are emphatic by position. 'For your own interest you have done them, not for mine: my life is almost spent, for you it is of the greatest possible importance, matters most vitally.'

319. tua istuc refert maxume. Whatever case re in refert, 'it conduces to the interest of,' originally was (whether nom. dat. or acc.) it looks like an abl., and hence is constructed with the possessive pronouns mea, tua &c. Then by analogy the same construction was extended to interest. See Roby, L. G. 1285.

320. is probust, quem paenitet &c., 'he only is a good man, who is dissatisfied with his goodness and virtue.' In Plautus 'dissatisfied' is the regular meaning of paenitet, it is not used with any idea of repentance or remorse. Cf. Bacch. 1182 me nil paenitet ut sim acceptus, 'I am not dissatisfied with the way in which I have been received,' Pseud.

305 eho an paenitet te quanto hic fuerit usui? 'are you dissatisfied with the amount you've got out of him?' Rud. 578, Stich. 551. With the same meaning in Terence (Eun. 1013, Haut. 72) and Cicero's Letters (Att. I. 20. 3, Fam. VI. 1).

frugi is properly predicative dat. 'for food,' 'for good' (with the epithet bonae), then it comes to be used as an indeclinable adj. 'useful,' 'honest.' Cf. Pseud. 337 numquam eris frugi bonae, 'you'll never be any good,' Capt. 956 fui ego bellus, lepidus: bonus uir numquam neque frugi bonae, Roby, L. G. II. p. xlvi. a.

322. qui ipse se contemnit &c. The line is often bracketed as an interpolation. But the language is faultless, and it is Plautine to express the same notion twice, negatively and positively. Probably the number of lines in Philto's reply should correspond with the number in Lysiteles' speech. Some editors by making Lysiteles' speech begin with v. 312 give six lines to each. But Lysiteles almost certainly begins v. 313 istaec &c. If then the length is to correspond exactly, this line must be bracketed to give them five lines each.

323. perpluant, 'roof over your good deeds with other good deeds, that they may not let the rain through.' This is following out the idea suggested in v. 317. Lysiteles claims 'by his steadiness to have kept his father's precepts in good repair.' Philto replies that it will not do to be satisfied with what he has done. He must put fresh work into his roof, if it is to be watertight. Cf. Most. 110 dominus indiligens reddere alias (tegulas, 'tiles') nouit; uenit imber, perlauit parietes, perpluunt.

324. ob eam rem haec, pater, autumaui, quia &c., i.e. I did not speak because I was satisfied with myself, I only spoke because &c. Ob eam rem explained by quia.

325. dare ueniam, 'to grant permission,' 'to consent.'

326. adulescenti hinc genere summo, 'to a young man of this town, of high family.' The MSS. give huic which would make Lysiteles point to the house in which Lesbonicus lives. But Lysiteles does not reveal his friend's identity until v. 359, and hinc is an almost certain correction. Hinc=αὐτόθεν, 'of this town.' So Epid. 602 hinc Athenis ciuis eam emit Atticus, Ter. Andr. 833 illam hinc ciuem esse aiunt.

327. cogitate=prudenter, as Mil. 944 haec uti meditemur cogitate.

328. illi, 'to him I wish to do a good turn, if you have no objection.' Illi resumes, after the relative sentence, adulescenti which is some distance off. Is is the pronoun most generally used for this purpose, e.g. Asin. 527 illos qui dant, eos derides, Bacch. 386 (arbitror) homini amico, qui est amicus ita ut nomen possidet, nisi deos ei nil praestare, Cas. 655 tua ancilla, quam tu tuo uilico uis dare uxorem, ea intus.

nempe de tuo? 'at your own expense I presume?' For nempe in a question, see on v. 196. The question is ironical, for Lysiteles cannot yet call anything his own. With de tuo cf. Bacch. 98 ad eam operam facere sumptum de tuo, Truc. 953 noster esto—sed de uostro uiuito.

331. publicisne adfinis fuit an maritumis negotiis? 'was he engaged in tax-farming or sea-trade?' The passage raises difficulties. Adfinis in the sense 'connected with' is followed by the dat., Cic. pro Sulla 70 huic adfines sceleri, as it is by the gen. Cic. pro Sulla 17 huius adfines suspicionis, and Ter. Haut. 215 illarum adfines rerum: but in Plautus, with the exception of this passage, it always means 'a connexion by marriage,' as vv. 422, 622, 626, 1163. Nor is the meaning of publica negotia plain. It can hardly mean ordinary 'public business' with the notion that a man is so engrossed in the affairs of the state that he has no time to attend to his own. But it may perhaps mean the business of the publicani, who farmed the revenue and often no doubt lost money. See Langen, Beiträge, p. 272. Plautus himself is said to have lost his money in marituma negotia.

332. mercaturan, an uenalis habuit, ubi rem perdidit? 'was it by commerce, or was he a slave-dealer, when he lost his money?' Mercaturan, i.e. mercaturane rem perdidit, but the structure of the sentence is disjointed because the alternative (an uenalis habuit) has a verb of its own, and so what ought to be the principal verb is thrust into the temporal clause ubi rem perdidit. Venales (seruos) habere = 'to be a slave-dealer,' which is characterised Capt. 98 as quaestus inhonestus.

333. per cōmitatem '(he lost his money) through his liberality.' So v. 356 and Rud. 38 rem bene paratam comitate perdidit.

334. animi causa, 'for pleasure's sake,' 'to gratify his inclinations.' So Epid. 45; Rud. 932; Aesch. Choeph. 750 τῷ πρῶτῳ φρενός.

335. edepol hominem praemandatum ferme familiariter, 'upon my word you recommend the fellow quite like an intimate friend.' On the acc. of exclamation after edepol see on v. 128. Praemandatum is the reading of A. Praemandatum 'recommended beforehand' because Lysiteles' object in introducing him has not yet been explained. On the use of the word see Langen, Beiträge p. 307. The Palatine text gives praedicatum, 'described,' but that in this sense is 'unplausible.' A perhaps has firme, but BC ferme.

336. quiquidē as v. 953. atque, 'and yet.'

337. nil moror as v. 297. cum eius modi uirtutibus, 'with virtues of that kind' (uirtutibus is ironical), instead of the plain descriptive ablative. So cum is used Mil. 16 nempe illum dicis cum armis aureis, ibid. 658 tres hominis cum istis moribus. Cf. v. 375 sine dote uxorem = indotatam.

338. quia sine omni malitias, tolerare ei egestatem uolo, 'because he is without any wickedness, I wish to relieve his poverty.' Sine omni is colloquial for sine ulla, as v. 621 sine omni cura, Aul. 215 sine mala omni malitia, Merc. 146 sine malo omni. With tolerare ei = subleuare ei cf. vv. 358 and 371.

339. de mendico male meretur qui ei dat quod edit, 'he does a beggar an ill turn who gives him anything to eat.' Edit is subj. as v. 102. See on v. 6. Lactantius (Inst. VI. 11) calls this detestanda sententia. It would make a good motto for an Anti-mendicity society.

340. illi prodit uitam, 'prolongs the beggar's life.' Prodit = producit. Cf. Ter. Andr. 313 ut aliquot saltem nuptiis prodant dies.

341. quin, 'how not' (qui-ne). Trans. 'as if...not.'

342. sed ego hoc uerbum quom illi quoidam dico, 'but I in giving the rule (v. 339) for that someone am warning you.' Illi quoidam = that friend of yours whose name you have not yet told me. See v. 326 where Lysiteles describes but does not name his friend. Cf. Amph. 621 ibi forte istum si uidisses quendam in somnis Sosiam, Merc. 458 illi quoidam qui mandauit tibi si emetur. B spells praemostro, for which compare mostellum, the diminutive of monstrum, and Mostellaria. But -ust becomes -st only between vowels. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 311.

343. ut ita te aliorum miserescat, ne tis alios misereat, 'to pity others so far that others may not pity you,' ita...ne restrictive. Tis is an old Latin form of the gen. of tu, like mis the old Latin gen. of ego, which have been ousted by tui and mei the gen. sing. of the possessives tuus and meus. Tis is read also Mil. 1033 quia tis egeat, Pseud. 6. Roby, L. G. 386, Müller, Handbuch II². p. 345.

344. deiuuare, 'refuse assistance,' ἀπαξ ἐλπημένον. The word is chosen for the correspondence of sound, deserere...deiuuare.

345. Pol pudere quam pigere praestat totidem litteris, 'faith, to feel shame is better than to be sorry by as many letters as the words contain,' i.e. it is better to be ashamed to refuse assistance but to give him nothing, than to be sorry when you've lost your money.' Cf. Pseud. 281 nimio id quod pudet facilius fertur quam illud quod piget. Totidem litteris is best taken as an abl. of measure, but it is often taken as a descriptive abl. 'though it contains the same number of letters,' i.e. 'though there are six letters in pigere as in pudere,' a use exactly paralleled by Mil. 321 mirumst lolio uictitare te tam uili tritico, 'it is strange that you should live on tares though wheat is so cheap.'

346. edepol deum uirtute, dicam, pater &c., 'thanks to the gods (I will say it, father), thanks to our forefathers and to you.' Dicam is parenthetic: uirtute=beneficio is regular in this formula, see vv. 355, 643, Aul. 166 ego uirtute deum et maiorum nostrum diues sum satis, Pers. 390 pol deum uirtute dicam et maiorum meum &c. For the gen. pl. deum, with nostrum and meum in the passages quoted, see on v. 241.

348. ne and also ut in ut potius pudeat refer back to multa bona habemus, 'we have plenty of property, so that one would not be sorry for doing a friend a kindness, so that one would rather be ashamed if one failed to do it.' Ut is not strictly required to complete the sense, but is added in antithesis to ne.

350. sed cui inmundi scin (=scisne) quid cantari solet? 'but don't you know the catch sung about an uncontributing citizen?' For the spelling of inmundi see on v. 24. Munus means both 'a gift' and 'a duty.' Lysiteles uses inmundi in the sense 'ungiving,' 'without a gift,' qui nulla munera dat. But Philto v. 354 explains it of a man who does not possess the means of discharging his duty, who contributes nothing to the general good, 'undutiful,' 'without a duty.' Horace (C. III. 23. 17, C. IV. 12. 23, Epist. I. 14. 33) uses the word in Lysiteles' sense 'without a gift,' see Mr Page on C. III. 23. 17.

quid solet, not, as it ought to be in a strictly dependent sentence, quid soleat. Cf. vv. 578, 847.

351. quod habes &c. The two lines are quoted from some popular song. Other similar fragments, also in trochaics, are quoted in Teuffel and Swabe, vol. I. pp. 14, 15.

352. quandoquidem...alteri, 'inasmuch as you can't allow either yourself or your neighbour to be comfortable.'

pote is used for potes. Possum is found in old writers in its unpounded form potis and potē sum. Potē is properly the neut. of potis (pote est=potest), but both masc. and neut. forms are used of any gender and of either number, e.g. Pseud. 1302 credo equidem potis esse te, scelus, and so potis and pote are used without sum, as in the common potin ut i.e. potisne ut=potest ut, 'is it possible that?' as v. 628. Cf. Pseud. 1135 qui neque tibi bene esse patere et illis quibus est inuides, equivalent to our 'dog in the manger.'

353. equidem is merely a strengthened form of quidem. E is the Indo-European pronominal stem o* (ā*) seen in Gk. ἐ-κεῖ, Osc. e-ko (hic), and perhaps e-nos in the Song of the Arval Brothers. Equidem regularly replaces quidem in Plautus and Terence in such phrases as atque equidem, quando equidem. In the preceding line unless we write as one word quandoquidem, we must write quando equidem not quando quidem. So scio equidem always, not scio quidem. And equidem is not confined to the first person, it is used no matter what the person is, as Bacch. 974 quadringentos filios habet atque equidem omnis lectos sine probro and infr. v. 611.

354. qui, instr.=quo, as also v. 356, see on v. 14; for the acc. after fungor see on v. 1.

355. deum uirtute &c. as in v. 346. What Lysiteles means is—we need not be afraid of becoming inimunes in your sense, for we have enough to enjoy ourselves and to enable us to be liberal to friends besides.

356. cōmitati, predicative dat., like damno esse, lucro esse, usui esse. This is the only instance of comitati quoted. Comitas has the same meaning as in v. 333. For beneuolens=amicus, see on v. 46.

357. pernegare, 'persist in saying no,' as Asin. 322 pernegabo atque obdurabo.

359. huic. Now that he gives the name Lysiteles points to the house of Lesbonicus. See on v. 326.

Charmidai, 'of Charmides.' This old gen. form is often found in Plautus in the gen. of Greek proper names in es, e.g. Periphanai Epid. 246, 508, 635, but it is also found in other words, familiaī (Amph. 359), audaciaī (Amph. 367), impudicitiaī (Amph. 821), filiaī (Aul. 295), simiaī (Merc. 241), sapientiaī (Mil. 236), siluaī (Mil. 1154) &c. Lucretius is fond of the form, and it is used by Lucilius, Vergil and other epic writers. Martial quotes it as the type of early poetry (xi. 90. 5) attonitusque legis 'terrai frugiferai,' | Accius et quidquid Pacuuiusque uomunt. For the stages by which ai passed into the classical -ae, see Lindsay, L. L. p. 381, and for further instances, Neue, Formenl. i. p. 12.

360. quin comedit quod fuit, quod non fuit? 'do you mean the man who has squandered all and more than he possessed?' quin is qui rel. nom. + nē interrogatiua, and the elliptic sentence in full would be eine uis egestatem tolerare qui &c. The interrogative particle, properly belonging to the demonstrative or personal pronoun, is often thus affixed to the relative, as Epid. 449 quemne in adulescentia memorant? 'do you mean the man who they say in youth &c.?' ibid. 719, Mil. 16, Rud. 1019. quod fuit, quod non fuit is a comic inclusive formula equivalent to an emphatic omnia. So fanda nefanda, dicenda tacenda, digna indigna and the like. Cf. Ter. Adelph. 990 quia non iusta iniusta, prorsus omnia omnino obsequor. Soph. Elect. 305 τὰς οὐσας τέ μου καὶ τὰς ἀπούσας ἐλπιδας.

362. mentire, 'you are mistaken.' So ψεύδεσθαι. Note that mentire, not mentiris, i.e. the form of 2nd sing. dep. and pass. in -re not in -ris, is the usual form in old Latin and even in Cicero. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 533.

363. ipsus fingit fortunam sibi, 'is the fashioner or architect of his own fortune.' Cf. the proverbial faber est quisque fortunae suae (Appian, Sall. de Republ. Ordin. 1). In the next line eo is abl. caus. = ideo, and malus = 'unskilful')(fictor probus.

365. multa illi opera opust ficturae = illi opus est multa opera ficturae, 'he needs much pains in fashioning.' Ficturae = fingendi and is used for the sake of the paronomasia ficturae...fictorem.

366. expetit, 'desires to be a skilful fashioner of the conduct of life.' Cf. v. 229. Expetit se esse is like postulat se conicere v. 237 b.

admodum, i.e. ad modum, 'to the measure or limit,' so 'fully,' 'completely.' 'But my friend here is quite a stripling' and therefore has not had time 'to fashion his fortune.' Admodum scarcely occurs in poetry outside the comic poets. Another use of the word in Plautus is in an emphatic affirmative = πάνυ γε, 'quite so,' e.g. v. 421, Rud. 143 and 269.

367. apiscitur, 'is obtained,' the only passage in Plautus where the word is used passively, but Asin. 279 indipiscet, Aul. 775 indipisces, a compound is used in an active form which makes this passive use natural. For the meaning cf. Publ. Syrus, Sent. 590 sensus, non aetas inuenit sapientiam. The wise man, like the poet, nascitur non fit.

368. sapienti...cibust, 'age gives a relish, adds a piquancy, to wisdom, but wisdom is the food of age.' Sapiens is concrete for the abstract sapientia. Condimentum, 'a relish,' is an improvement but not essential or indispensable; cibus, necessary nourishment, which it is impossible to forgo. In Greek μέν...δέ would make the sentence clearer. See on v. 292. But see Langen, Plaut. Stud. p. 375.

369. agedum. See on v. 98. A gives this line, the Palatine MSS. give vv. 369, 368 after v. 361. Transp. Muretus, Acidalius.

nil quicquam, 'nothing at all.' Nil is strengthened by quicquam, as Asin. 146 nil quicquam meret, Bacch. 1036 nil quicquam dabo, Merc. 507 and 666, nemo quisquam Pseud. 808.

372. eo, 'yes! (by that),'—an affirmative answer given by repeating the word of the question.

licet, 'certainly,' 'very well.' 'Licet' affirmantis est=faciam ita ut uis. So v. 517, Amph. 544, Curc. 95, Capt. 949 and Rud. 1210—1226, where the whole passage depends for its point on this use of licet.

373. scin tu illum quo genere natus sit? 'do you know him, of what family he is born?'='do you know to what family he belongs?' an instance of the common prolepsis or antiptosis, by which the subject of the dependent clause is brought forward out of the dependent clause and made the object of the principal clause. So οἶδά σε τίς εἰ, 'I know thee, who thou art,' 'conceal me, what I am'; nosti Marcellum quam tardus sit, 'you know Marcellus, how slow he is,' Aul. 117 rogitant me ut ualeam, and in this play vv. 88, 283, 698, 873, 960, 992.

adprime probo, 'to a very good family.' So Cist. 125 adprime nobilis, Rud. 735 adprime probus (ironical).

374. grandis='of marriageable age,' as Aul. 191, Ter. Adelph. 673.

375. sine dote uxorem? 'as your wife without a dowry?' the words of the previous speaker repeated as a question in surprise and incredulity.

ita, 'even so'='yes,' in an answer generally without est, as Aul. 775, Capt. 262 &c. So ita uero Men. 1096, ita enim uero Amph. 410, ita profecto Amph. 370. Ita est only Trin. 196, non ita est Trin. 649.

376. tua re salua, 'without expense to yourself'—res as in vv. 230 and 272.

377. auxiliarier: for this form see on suspiciarier v. 86.

378. egone indotatam te uxorem ut patiar? sc. ducere from v. 375. 'What, am I to allow you to marry a wife without a dowry?'—ne...ut, regular in indignant questions, as Asin. 810 egone ut haec patiar?, ibid 884 egon ut non domo...subrupiam?, Pseud. 516 egon ut cauere nequeam?

380. multa ego possum docta dicta, quamuis facunde, loqui, 'I can quote sage saws by the dozen, as fluently as you please.' Multa in close union with the predicate='quote in numbers.' Docta dicta, as Asin. 525 uerba blanda esse aurum rere, dicta docta pro datis? Possum, 'I can,'='I am in a position to do so if I choose,' as Verg. Georg. I. 176 multa equidem possum ueterum praecepta referre.

quamuis facunde=tam facunde quam uis. Quamuis in Plautus is always thus used with an adj. or adv., never in the sense 'although,' i.e. it is always an adverb, never a conjunction. Cf. v. 797, Bacch. 339 ab eo licebit quamuis subito sumere, Men. 318 quamuis ridiculus est. Roby, L. G. 1627.

381. ueterem atque antiquam. Vetus) (nouus, = what is relatively old, no longer new; antiquus) (recens, = what belongs to the past, generally with the notion that the old is better (see on antiquae artes v. 72). The two words are used together here according to the common comic idiom by which repetition in a slightly different form gives emphasis. So Pers. 53 ueterem atque antiquom quaestum maiorum meum seruo, Capt. 718 nuperum et nouicium, infr. vv. 1076 saluom et seruatum, 1096 fideli et fido et cum magna fide, 1126 fides fidelitasque. Philto can 'quote sage saws' because 'his grey head bears (the weight of) all the history of the past.'

383. aduorsatus fui. There is no difference in meaning between aduorsatus sum and aduorsatus fui in Plautus. Fui is very common, especially with deponent verbs. See the instances quoted by Ussing on Amph. 183, by Brix on Mil. 102.

istac iudico, 'I decide in your way, i.e. in the way you propose,' 'I side with you.'

384. posce, 'ask her hand in marriage,' as vv. 386, 450, 499, 571.

di te seruassint mihi, 'heaven bless you for it,' a warm expression of thanks. So v. 436 and Asin. 46 di diuint tibi quaequomque optes, v. 1152 di dent tibi quae uelis, Mil. 570 at tibi di faciant bene. Similarly the common di te ament, di te amabunt, bene facis, benigne dicis and the like are 'gratias agentis,' and to be distinguished from recte facis v. 197, which is 'uox comprobantis.' Seruassint is a sigmatic aorist optative = perf. subj., like occultassis v. 627, see on v. 60 and Lindsay, L. L. p. 460 ff.

386. eum = Lesbonicum, the girl's brother. concilies, 'win him over.'

eccere, 'there we have it,' 'that is it, is it?' Eccērē is probably ecce-re, 'lo! indeed,' rather than as Ribbeck takes it ecce-rem with loss of final m as in postmodo (post-modum), propemodo. Ecce itself, which is formed from the pronominal stem eke* (eko*) with appended -ce, or by doubling of the consonant as in att-at (see Lindsay, L. L. p. 617), is used in Plautus in two ways: (1) = 'lo' in a sentence complete without it, (2) with an accus. (of exclamation), ecce and the accus. forming a complete sentence, ecce me = me voici, e.g. v. 1013.

387. nimio = multo, 'more quickly by much,' i.e. 'much more quickly.' See v. 28.

389. repperi negotium, 'I've got a troublesome job.' In Plautus exhibere negotium (alicui) = πράγματα παρέχειν, 'to cause someone trouble,' hence this phrase = 'to get trouble oneself,' as Merc. 740 nimum negoti repperi, Rud. 483 repperi negotium. The spelling repperi shews that the perf. of the simple verb was originally reduplicated, re-p(e)-peri. So rettuli=re-t(e)-tuli—tetuli is the regular form in Plautus—reppuli=re-p(e)-puli, &c.

390. lepidus uiuis, 'you are kind.' Lepidus is a favourite Comic word, perhaps best represented by our 'jolly,' so lepidam famam v. 379; uiuo is frequent in Comedy=sum, as uiuo miser. Cf. Bacch. 614 inamabilis, inlepidus uiuo, Capt. 828 nemo uiuit fortunatior, &c.

haec, i.e. hae-ce, in Plautus far more common than hae and used exclusively before vowels and h. Lucretius is fond of this nom. plur. fem. and does not use hae, the form is found in Cicero and Caesar, and Verg. Georg. III. 305 haec quoque non cura nobis leuiore tuendae. See Neue, Formenl. II². p. 417. An instance of haec before a consonant is Stich. 18 haec res uitae me, soror, saturant.

habet=habitat, as v. 193.

391. Lesbonico, see on v. 8.

Exit Lysiteles—Philito is left alone on the stage.

SCENE 3 (392—401). Philito soliloquises. Things are bad, but they might be worse, and a father who thwarts his son needlessly is a fool.

Metre—Iambic Trimeters.

394. sēd hōc me ū|num consolatur. So Pers. 32 sed hoc me unum excruiat. Hoc is explained by the next two lines.

395. quia, not quod. See on v. 290.

396. nugas agit, 'is acting absurdly.' So v. 441 nugas postulet, 'would ask an absurdity,' 'expect the impossible,' Asin. 91 maxumas nugas agis, 'utter nonsense.' Nugae is written elsewhere naugae by C, nōgae by B. Cf. frausus and frustra, Plautus and Plotus (older), aurichalcum (Plaut.) and orichalcum (Verg. and Hor.), claudio, include, Clodius. The word is derived from naucum, 'a trifle,' used in the phrase non nauci esse (habere or facere), as Most. 1041 homo timidus nauci non erit.

397. miser ex animo fit, factius nillo facit, 'he makes himself utterly wretched without making the deed a whit more done,' i.e. without getting any nearer to success. After all ἀπρακτος ἀποχωρεῖ. Ex animo as Stich. 1 credo ego miseram fuisse Penelopam, soror, suo ex animo, Epid. 526 &c. Factius is a perf. pass. part. compared like an adj. See on occlusior v. 222 and cf. auctior, emendatior, accuratior, &c. The word is used here for the sake of the sound factius...facit, by which a comic effect is obtained Poen. 991 multus me est hodie Poenus Poenior.

398. senēctuti.

399. quom...conciēt, 'in rousing.' Conciēt is here pres. from conciēo, but there is also a 3rd conj. form cio from which conciēt, Amph. 476, is fut. So beside clueo, v. 309, there is a form cluo.

400. commodum, 'just in time' = opportune, as v. 1136. This use of commodum as an adv. of time is colloquial.

The Roman stage does not shew interiors. Accordingly all meetings must take place in the street, i.e. in front of the houses which form the background of the stage. If A is to meet B, B either meets him in the street or comes out of his house opportunely just as A arrives. So Lesbonicus and Stasimus come out opportunely here, and Philto's words serve to introduce them to the spectators.

SCENE 4 (402—601). Philto, standing aside, overhears the conversation between Lesbonicus and his slave Stasimus. He learns that the house has been sold and the money spent. He shews himself, v. 432, and asks in his son's name for the hand of Lesbonicus' sister. Lesbonicus, despite all the efforts of Stasimus, refuses to betroth his sister without a dowry. He has one farm left, he will give her that. Stasimus, in terror that their last possession will go, draws Philto aside and tells him that the farm is fatal to its possessors, and that Lesbonicus only wants to get rid of it. Philto is impressed, returns to Lesbonicus and makes the betrothal, leaving the bride's brother and the bridegroom to settle the matter of the farm.

The scene in B is marked DV, i.e. diuerbium, dialogue. The metre throughout is Iambic Trimeters.

402. minus quindecim dies sunt quom, 'it is less than a fortnight since,' as Asin. 251 iam diuſt factum quom diſceſti, ibid. 890 iam dudum factumſt quom primum bibi. For the omission of quam after amplius, plus, minus see Roby, L. G. 1273.

403. accepistī. The slave receives and keeps the money for his master. So Messenio has his master's purse, Men. 265.

405. quid factumſt eo? 'what has become of it?' Eo, 'that sum,' though minas quadraginta has preceded, as Bacch. 1029 ducentos nummos...id, Epid. 115 quadraginta minas...quod, Truc. 740 quinque minas...istuc, Asin. 90 uiginti minis...id. So in other reckonings, as Ter .Haut. 62 annos sexaginta natus es, aut plus eo. Cf. v. 960.

406. comessum...balineis, 'it has been used in eating, drinking and unguents, and washed away in baths.' For the force of the prepositions see on v. 250 and Roby, L. G. 1949. For the spelling comessum cf. adessus, exessus, peressus &c., missi, missere, hausserat, caussa &c. and see Lindsay, L. L., p. 112. The number of costly unguents, perfumes and so on, was enormous. The Romans not only anointed themselves after the baths, but also perfumed themselves freely besides.

407. pistor = 'miller,' not 'baker,' in Plautus.

408. holitores, 'greengrocers.' Holus, &c. is the better spelling, see Lindsay, L. L., p. 228, myropolae = μυροπωλαιοι, aucupes, 'poulterers,' 'bird-sellers,' not here 'bird-catchers.'

confit = conficitur, 'it is got through,' 'used up,' Pers. 761 effieri, Lucr. II. 1004 effit, where see Munro's note, and Neue, Formenl. II. 611.

409. minus goes with cito, diuorse with distrahitur, 'it is not less quickly torn to shreds,' lit. 'torn apart in opposite directions.' Cf. Merc. 470 quo pacto ego diuorsus distrahor and v. 617, where distrahitur is again used of the dissipation of property.

410. papauerem, 'a poppy,' the masculine is attested by Nonius p. 220, occurs again Poen. 326, and is regular in ante-classical writers. Cf. gutturum v. 1014.

412. ibidem una traho, 'I put that in the same list,' see on v. 203.

413. defrudaui B, defraudauī AC. But cf. frustra, frustrari and see Ritschl, Parerg. p. 541. On em see v. 3, ratio = 'account.' This line is apparently too long, and is reduced to proper size by the omission of quid, ego or istaec. This last is the only word which can be spared, but it is doubtful whether it ought to be excised. Cf. Amph. 793 and the lines quoted ad loc. by Leo.

414. non tibi illud apparere, si sumas, potest, 'it is impossible,' or 'possible it is not for the money to be forthcoming, if you choose to spend it, unless indeed you think that your money can't die.' Non from its position emphatically negatives the whole, as vv. 133, 1027, 1046, 1153. si sumas = si eo uti uelis.

416. These two lines are an 'aside' by Philto, who overhears the conversation. The dialogue between Lesbonicus and Stasimus is not interrupted by the lines, or by the similar 'aside' vv. 422—424.

sero atque stulte qualify putat, the relative quod refers to rationem putat and = ut rationem putet. In English it is best to make two sentences, 'It is late and silly to take now the precaution he ought to have taken at first. He first spends the money and then balances the account.' Post resumes postquam. So vv. 975 and 998, Poen. 321 prius quam Venus expergiscatur, prius deproperant, &c.

418. nequaquam argenti ratio conparet tamen, 'all the same the account of the money is by no means clear.' Tamen refers to the last words of Stasimus, nisi tu immortale rere esse argentum tibi, and means 'even if I allow money can't last for ever.' By conparet Lesbonicus means 'is not clear (to the mind),' i.e. 'does not seem to agree,' 'to balance.' But Stasimus takes it literally = 'is not clear (to the eyes),' 'is not visible,' and playing on the words conparet...apparet replies 'the account is clear enough' ('here it is for you to see'), it is the money that est perdu.' For Greek words in Plautus see on v. 187. Cicero has this passage in his mind Att. VI. I. 1 non ὁχεται tua industria &c., and in Pis. 61 caput sinistra manu perfricans, commurmuratus sit, 'ratio...ὁχεται.'

421. mancipio is better taken as an abl. 'by legal transfer,' 'by conveyance' (cf. testamento dare, usu capere &c.) than as a predicative dat. 'as a possession.' See Roby, L. G., Pref. p. 1. a. In the famous line Lucr. III. 971 uitaque Mancipio nulli datur, omnibus usu, 'life is given to no one by conveyance, to all by use' (i.e. we none of us possess the fee-simple of life, but only the 'use,' which might be broken before any right grew up) both words are best explained as abl.

admodum, 'precisely so.' See on v. 366.

422. Another 'aside' by Philto. Opino is parenthetic, and does not affect the syntax. This non-deponent form for opinor occurs Epid. 259, and other non-deponent forms in Plautus are assentio, arbitro, aucupo, auspico, crimino, contemplo, cuncto, fabulo, frustro, indipisco, lucto, minito, mereo, medico, pacisco, uago, uenero. See Brix on Mil. 172 and Lindsay, L. L. p. 520. Early Latin allows the use of the two forms side by side; but in the classical period there is less freedom, and one form has ousted the other. But Quintilian (IX. 3. 7) allows both assentio and assentior.

adfinis, 'our connexion,' see on v. 331, because Philto's son proposes to marry Lesbonicus' sister.

423. peregre, 'from abroad,' see on v. 149.

in porta, 'at the gate,' where beggars took their stand. So Capt. 90 uel ire extra portam Trigeminam ad saccum licet.

424. in uentrem filio, 'eo enim aedes eius migrarunt.' Cf. v. 753.

425. trapezitae mille drachumarum Olympico, 'the thousand drachmae, which according to the account you owed, have been duly paid to Olympicus the banker.' Trapezita, or tarpessita in its more

Latin form, is τραπεζῖτης. Through Aeolic, which had a tendency to thrust back r after the vowel (βράδιστος, βάρδιστος, bardus, κρῖνω cerno, κροκόδειλος corcodilus &c.), the word passed through Lower-Italy into Latin. Z was brought into use at Rome in the transcription of Greek words only at the close of the Republic. Previously s had been used, single s at the beginning, ss in the middle of a word. Thus sona = ζώνη, massa = μᾶσα, badisso = βαδίζω, patrisso = πατρίζω. For the history of the sound see Lindsay, L. L. p. 104. The true Latin for 'banker' is mensarius.

mille is by Plautus regularly treated as a noun, = χίλις, and so followed by the gen., 'a thousand of drachmae.' So mille nummum, 'a thousand of pieces,' vv. 954, 959, 966, 970, 1139. For the 'inserted' vowel in drachuma beside the Greek δραχμή (anaptyxis or svarabhakti), see Introd. p. xxi.

426. dehibuisti. The compounds of habeo are always scanned in Plautus as if they were written in the contracted form. Here dehibuisti is scanned dēbuisti, cohibeo may always be scanned as if written cōbeo, and prohibeo as if prōbeo. On the other hand praebeo is sometimes written praehibeo, but the scansion is apparently always trisyllabic. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 143.

427 a. spopondi...dependi, 'You mean the thousand for which I stood bail' (nēmpē, as v. 328), 'Nay, say "for which I stood payment." If you had only gone bail it would not have mattered, but you had to pay: therefore your statement needs correction.' Plautus uses pendere in the sense 'pay,' but not elsewhere dependere. But Cicero in his Letters uses spondere and dependere together just as they are used here, e.g. Fam. i. 9. 9 dependendum tibi est, quod mihi pro illo spopondisti.

427 b. qua sponsione pronuper tu exactus es. A gives this 'unplautine' line before the preceding line. It might be licked into shape by correcting 'quia sponsionem propter tute exactus es,' 'because on account of your bail you yourself were forced to pay,' 'were dunned for payment,' applying exigor = flagitor to the person on whom the demand is made. But the line is a versified gloss on the previous line and, as it spoils the connexion, should be bracketed. Pro illo adolescente &c. follows immediately on v. 427, 'Nay, say, "which I paid" for the youth, whom you declared to be wealthy,' so that according to your shewing you ran no risk of being called upon for the money.

429. ut quidem illud perierit is dependent on factum. Stasimus takes up Lesbonicus' factum. L. 'That is true,' or 'That's a fact.' S. 'Yes! a fact that that money is gone.' So Aul. 154, E. in rem hoc tuam est. M. ut quidem emoriar. 'Yes! it is to my interest to die outright.' Illud, 'that sum,' after mille drachumarum as v. 405. For factum (without est) and factum id quoquest see on v. 127, for quidem v. 971.

430. nam nunc eum uidi miserum. Here nunc marks a contrast between the present and the earlier state of things. 'Then I thought he was rich: now I have seen that he is in sorry state, and I am sorry for him.' Nunc is not infrequently joined with the perf. in Plautus, if an action is indicated still recent in point of time, in contrast with an earlier time, e.g. v. 1089 nunc hic disperii miser. See Langen, Beiträge pp. 39, 40.

431. miseret te aliorum, tui nec miseret nec pudet. A chiasmus as vv. 701, 1129.

433. ne is nē confirmatiua, strengthening the asseveration edepol.

434. peculio, 'savings.' Peculium is the regular word for a slave's savings, scraped together with a view to purchasing his freedom (v. 564, Stich. 751). Stasimus as a slave uses the slave's phraseology, and says that he would like to 'own Philto with his savings,' for the slave had no legal right to property, and held even savings only by his master's indulgence. In other words, then, Stasimus means, 'Philto has a nice fortune: I wish it could become mine.'

435. erum atque seruom. The salutation of slave as well as master is Greek, not Roman.

436. duint, pres. subj. (properly optative, see on v. 6) from the old Latin pres. duo, and used, as archaic forms generally are, at the end of the line. The forms used by Plautus are duim, duis, duit, duint—obviously convenient forms to end an iambic line—and from compounds interduim v. 994, perduim, perduis, perduit, creduis, creduit, and, most common of all, perduint.

438. edepol mutuom mecum facit, 'faith, I reciprocate his feeling.' So Mil. 1253 mutuom fit, sc. a me, Pers. 766, L. omnia quae tu uis, ea cupio. T. mutua fiunt a me.

439. nequam illud uerbumst 'bene uolt,' nisi qui bene facit, 'That is a worthless expression, unless a man crowns "kind wishes" with kind deeds.' Nisi qui=nisi quis=εἰ μή τις, as vv. 257 ubi qui eget and 1005 nisi qui illud tractet. The indeclinable adj. nequam again, v. 1036.

440. nequiquam uolo. Wishes, says Stasimus, are useless. I wish to be free, but (as I cannot purchase my freedom) I wish in vain. Nequiquam (i.e. ne-quiquam, the modal abl. used adv.), 'not in any way' = frustra, 'in vain,' is spelt in B nequidquam (the old abl. form?), and in CD, by assimilation, nequicquam. See Neue, Formenl. II. p. 642.

441. hic postulet frugi esse, nugas postulet, 'if Lesbonicus here expected to be steady, he would expect impossibilities.' Hic postulet = si hic postulet. The pres. subj. of an entirely hypothetical case without any opinion that the hypothesis is really practicable, as vv. 148, 457, 474, 628. Langen, Beiträge, p. 43 ff., discusses the Plautine usage. The Latin language at the time of Plautus had not yet reached the stage at which possible and realisable wishes and conditions were expressed by pres. or perf. subj., impossible and unfulfilled by imperf. and plup. It had reached the stage at which realised conditions were expressed by the indic., unrealised by the subj., whether the realisation was considered possible or impossible. On nugas see v. 396.

445. hau nosco tuom, 'I don't recognise you,' lit. 'your way' or 'character.' Your coming to make a mock of me is so unlike you that you are changed beyond recognition. So meum, 'my way,' vv. 123 and 631, Ter. Eun. 1066 non cognosco nostrum tam superbum, where Bentley explains non solebatis esse tam superbi.

446. bonis tuis rebus, rather abl. instr. 'by means of your prosperity,' than mere abl. absolute 'when you are prosperous.'

447. ita me amabit Iuppiter, 'so shall heaven be kind to me, as I neither come to mock you nor think that a right thing to do.' Ita me amabit Iuppiter is a positive assertion 'so shall,' ita me di ament v. 1024 is properly a wish 'so may,' but both are used as strong asseverations, that as surely as the speaker hopes for happiness what he says is true. The asseveration may be followed (1) by ut answering ita, as Aul. 496 ita me di amabunt ut ego hunc ausculto lubens, (2) immediately by the main proposition as here, (3) as in v. 1024 by an accus. of exclamation. dignum puto, like aequom censeo vv. 306 and 392. Cf. Aul. 223 neque edepol ego te derisum uenio neque derideo, neque dignum arbitror.

449. uerum hoc quod dixi, 'but as I said' = ita ut dixi.

451. meorum rerum ordinem, 'the rank befitting my fortune,' 'the social position to which my means entitle me.'

452. factio in a political sense is 'a party,' 'a following,' homo factiosus, 'a man with a following,' 'an influential man.' In a social sense factio is 'the circle in which one moves,' 'social standing.' So Aul. 227 factiosum, 'a man of social influence.' Cist. 493 neque nos factione tanta quanta tu sumus. But factio has another meaning Bacch. 843 quae haec factios? = faciendi ratio, and it is perhaps from this use that the plur. factiones gets the meaning 'wealth,' as vv. 467 and 491, and Aul. 167 istas magnas factiones. Nonius attests this use, p. 304, factio significat opulentiam, abundantiam et nobilitatem. But the passages seem to shew that factio = 'social position,' and only the plur. factiones, 'wealth.' cum uostra, 'with the standing of your family,' not 'of you individually,' for uoster never = tuus. So in the next line we have uobis, not tibi.

454. sanus mentis aut animi, the genitives are so-called 'genitives of the part affected,' i.e. locatives. Animi is loc. and mentis is used on the analogy of animi, as in Epid. 138 desipiebam mentis, 'in mind.' The construction is the same as falsus animi, incertus animi, dubius animi, angor animi, discrucior animi, &c., Roby, L. G. 1321.

455. condicionem, 'offer of marriage,' 'match,' as in v. 159.

456. ferentarium, 'to lend you a helping hand.' Ferentarii (pps. from Sanscr. dhvar = lædere) were 'skirmishers,' see Sall. Cat. 60. 2, Tac. Ann. XII. 35. Perhaps because the Latins derived it from ferre sc. auxilium or arma, Varro L. L. VII. 57, the word passes in this passage to the sense 'ready to assist.' Ferentarium, like sedentarii Aul. 512. Stasimus, with the freedom of the Greek Comic slave, first endeavours to induce his master to close with Philto's offer, then by the grossest misrepresentation to dissuade Philto from accepting, as the girl's dowry, the one farm left to Lesbonicus.

457. abi hinc dierecte, 'off with you to the gallows' = 'go away, confound you.' Dierectus is a Plautine word, commonly derived from di and erigere, as of a slave 'stretched out' on the cross, but more likely 'a bastard issue of διαπρήγνυμι,' a word very common in Greek Comedy. See Nettleship, Journ. of Phil. xv. p. 186 ff. Wherever the metre is decisive of the point the word is quadrisyllabic, dîērectus, as Bacch. 579 recède hinc dîērecte, Poen. 347 dîērecte, &c. In this passage only, if we keep the MSS. reading abin hinc dîērecte?, by synizesis it is trisyllabic. Hence it is better with Prof. Palmer (Hermathena x. 66) to read abi hinc dîērecte, or abin dîērecte? The word is used, either in nom. or as here in voc., in this idiom = 'go to the deuce,' e.g. Most. 8 abi rûs, abi dîērecte, Poen. 160 abi dîērectus. See also Sonnenschein's note on Rud. 1170.

si hercle ire occipiam, uotes, 'faith, if I were to begin to go, you would forbid me.' Hercle properly belongs to uotes, but by a kind of hyperbaton the asseveration is often brought forward in the sentence and placed immediately after si, e.g. Epid. 116 si hercle haberem, pollicerer, ibid. 326 and 331, Most. 914, Stich. 610. So after ni Mil.

156, after postquam Pseud. 296 &c. Voto for ueto, like uoster, norrere, &c., words in which e replaced o in the 2nd cent. B.C., though uoster lived on, perhaps on the analogy of noster.

458. respondi tibi, 'I have given you your answer,' i.e. my decision is final, and it is no use prolonging the discussion. Cf. Mil. 184 dixi ego istuc: nisi quid aliud uis.

462. utrumque = ἀμφοτέρων, in aetate, see on v. 24.

463. uerum, 'the truth.' So uerum, 'true,' = uerum est often in answers. See Langen, Beiträge, p. 113 ff.

oculum ecfodiam. Cf. Aul. 53 oculos hercle ego istos, improba, ecfodiam tibi.

464. hercle qui dicam tamen, 'gad, I will say it all the same.' qui, abl. of the indef. quis, is attached enclitically to the hercle, and has the same force as in e.g. atqui, being an emphasising particle. Thus hercle qui, edepol qui, ecastor qui, at pol qui, ut qui and quippe qui, which in some cases cannot be the nom. of the relative. Cf. infr. 637 an id est sapere, ut qui beneficium a te repudies? Bacch. 283 adeon me fuisse fungum, ut qui illi crederem, Capt. 553 eum morbum mi esse, ut qui med opus sit insputarier, Pseud. 473 hercle qui, ut tu praedicas, cauendum est, Rud. 946 at pol qui audies, Truc. 68 quippe qui certo scio, &c.

Tamen = ὅμως, Plautus is fond of keeping the word till the end of the line and sentence.

465. sic, 'as I am,' i.e. with two eyes, in reference to the threat oculum ecfodiam tibi.

466. ita, 'do you really now maintain?'—referring to what Lesbonicus has said, v. 451.

467. uostras factiones atque opes, 'that the wealth and resources of your family are not on a par with ours.' See on v. 452.

468. quid nunc? like quid tu? v. 116, is a question to pave the way for and secure attention for the real question which follows. So Aul. 255 quid nunc? etiam mihi despondes filiam? Asin. 711 quid nunc, amabo?...datisne argentum? Bacch. 1167 quid nunc? etiam redditis nobis filios et seruom?

cenam, qualified v. 470 as cenam popularem = publicam, δειπνον δημοτελές, δημοθουσία, such a public banquet (ἐστίασις) as was common among the Greeks, and among the Romans when tithes were offered to Hercules, and at triumphs and on similar occasions. Such a feast is mentioned Poen. 529.

469. tibi par forte obuenerit, 'chance to be your neighbour.' Par = ὁμόκλινος, 'on the same couch,' according to Greek custom,

'sharing a biclinium with you': the Romans regularly used a triclinium.

470. adposita cena sit, 'suppose a banquet is served up.' Constructio ἀσύνδετος. The force of si is continued as in the sentence vv. 217—220. But the line is suspected and should perhaps be bracketed, as, apart from the fact that it complicates the construction, in aedem v. 468 sufficiently explains the nature of the banquet.

471. si illi, &c. A supposition within a supposition. The first si introduces the general scene—the temple, the public banquet, and the proximity of the rich man. The second si introduces the particular moment at which the great man's dependents have heaped dainties before him.

472. siquid tibi placeat &c., 'supposing anything that had been put before him took your fancy, would you eat it or sit at table with the rich man supperless?' Edis and edim v. 474 are optative forms. See on v. 6.

474. edim, nisi si ille uotet, 'I would eat, unless indeed he forbade me.' On uotet see v. 457. Nisi si = ἐἰ μὴ ἐἰ, and introduces an exception which is less likely than one introduced by nisi, an exception so unlikely that it is worth mentioning, and that is all. Cf. Amph. 825, Capt. 530, Epid. 22.

475. mālīs, 'jaws.' Māla is formed with the suffix -slā, and is for mag-sla. Cf. āla (axla*), mūlus (muc-slo), uēlum (uec-slum), &c. See Müller, Handbuch II². p. 310.

476. potissimum, 'what he liked I would grab in preference to anything else.'

477. de uita mea, commonly taken as 'my victuals,' but better understood as 'of what is life for me,' i.e. the dainties and the enjoyment which make life worth living for Stasimus.

478. uerecundari...cernitur, 'no one ought to be bashful—to have any false shame—at table: for there the distinction is between things divine and things human.' Cernitur = decernitur, κρίνεται, i.e. the only distinction made is between the parts to be offered to the gods, and the parts to be eaten by men; and once a portion is assigned as humanum (and not diuinum), one man has as much right to it as another.

480. rem fabulare = ἀληθῆ λέγεις. So Epid. 288 rem loquere, and stronger Pers. 93 rem loquitur meram.

non tibi dicam dolo. Cf. v. 90.

481. de uia, de semita, 'from the road, from the footpath.' So Curc. 287 quin capite sistat in uia de semita = 'be thrust off the footpath and stood upon his head in the road.' A slave had to make way for a man of free birth in the street.

482. de honore populi, 'a public office,' as if a poor slave like Stasimus were eligible for such, either in Athens or Rome!

483. non hercle hoc longe, 'faith I will withdraw not this much.' Hoc δεικτικῶς, accompanied by an expressive gesture. So tantillum, v. 60.

484. cena hac annonast sine sacris hereditas, 'a supper, when things are so dear, is an inheritance without any drawbacks.' Hac annona, 'with the present high prices,' 'in the present dearth,' the opposite of Mil. 321 tam uili tritico, 'when corn is so cheap.' The sacra domestica or gentilia were expensive to keep up, and the inheritance was seriously diminished if the successor was under obligation to maintain them. Hence sine sacris hereditas became proverbial for an unexpected and unimpaired slice of luck, e.g. Capt. 775 sine sacris hereditatem sum aptus effertissumam.

486. id optumum esse, tute uti sis optumus. Here uti (ut) follows optumum est, as Aul. 582 nunc hoc mihi factust optumum, ut te hinc auferam, and as it does melius est (Rud. 220), and elsewhere par est, iustum est, consentaneum est, &c.

488. condicionem, 'proposal of marriage,' as before.

489. dare, 'to grant,' refers to peto, accipere to fero, so that the arrangement of the words makes a chiasmus.

490. dei diuites sunt, deos decent opulentiae, 'the gods only have gold, with the gods only displays of wealth and means go well.' Dei, deos, scanned as monosyllables by the regular synizesis. Notice the alliteration—see v. 27—and the plur. of the abstract noun opulentia, 'wealth,' used as the plur. of abstract nouns so often is in Plautus, in the sense 'displays of wealth.' See on v. 36.

491. uerum nos homunculi, salillum animae qui quom extemplo emisimus, 'but we poor mortals, as soon as ever we have surrendered up our little span of life.' The antithesis is between dei, who alone are really diuites, and nos homunculi, where the diminutive is pitying and contemptuous, 'poor mortals.' But the sentence is a slight anacolouthon. It ought to continue with the verb in the first pers. plur. censu censemur omnes aequo or the like, in place of which there are new subjects mendicus and opulentissimus, subdivisions of nos homunculi, followed by the verb censetur in the third pers.

492. salillum is the reading of BCD. The word occurs besides only Catull. 23, 19 where it is used literally, 'a salt-cellar.' It is possible that the word may be used here to denote the small amount of life we have, 'little measure,' 'brief span' or the like. Unless we suppose hiatus after salillum, the line is a syllable short. This may be rectified by reading animai, for which form see v. 359. Quom extemplo=ἐπεὶ τάχιστα, see v. 242. There are many suggested corrections of salillum, e.g. sitellum, stalagmium, scintillula, uatillum (= batillum, 'pan'). It is, I think, an objection to these proposals that they stand in apposition to homunculi, 'we poor mortals the urn of life, the pan of life' &c. (i.e. humanity is represented as the casket—or whatever it may be—that contains life), and their adoption involves the change of qui to quam to make an object for emisimus. But by the structure of the sentence homunculi stands in apposition to mendicus and opulentissimus, and the word that precedes animae should be the direct object of emisimus.

493. aequo mendicus...mortuos, 'the beggar and your millionaire are reckoned at the same reckoning, are valued at the same valuation, in the world below after death.' Censu censere is another instance of figura etymologica like dono donare, gaudio gaudere &c. Mortuos is mortuōs nom. sing. masc. agreeing, like the verb censetur, with the nearest subject, viz. opulentissimus. Ad Acheruntem=apud Acheruntem. The first syllable of Acheruntem is scanned long. In words borrowed from Greek by early Latin writers the aspirate was usually lost. Thus Plautus puns upon Charinus, i.e. Carinus, and careo Pseud. 736, and upon Thales, i.e. Tales, and talentum, Capt. 274. But in some cases the vulgar Greek pronunciation of χ as k-kh operated so far as to lengthen by position the preceding vowel of borrowed words in popular use. Such instances are Acheruns as if Ac-cheruns, Achilles, brāchium and trīcae (τρίχες). See Lindsay, L. L. pp. 57, 58.

495. mirum quin tu illo tecum diuitias feras, 'strange that you don't take your wealth thither with you.' Mirum quin foll. by subj. is always ironical, 'strange that not,' 'I wonder you don't...as if you could.' So v. 967 mirum quin ab auo eius aut proauo acciperem, qui sunt mortui, 'strange that I did not receive the money' &c., Amph. 750 mirum quin te aduersus dicat= 'you expect him forsooth to contradict you,' Pers. 433 mirum quin tibi ego crederem &c. But mirum (est) nī, mira (sunt) nī with the indic. is never ironical, 'it is a wonder if...not,' always with an affirmative thought='I am pretty sure so and so is,' e.g. v. 861, Amph. 319, Capt. 824.

496. ubi mortuōs sis, ita sis ut nomen cluet, 'when you are dead, then be what the word implies.' This is taking sis as equal to an imperative. It may also be taken as=ἀν ἐνς in apodosis, 'when you are dead, then you would be' &c. Ita sis ut nomen cluet, 'be in accordance with the true sense of the word.' Cf. v. 309, v. 620, King Lear i. r. 270 'I am most loath to call your faults as they are named.'

497. hic...non esse, 'are not in question,' 'that it is not a question of.' Neglegere = 'slight,' i.e. 'undervalue.'

500. quae res bene uortat, and again v. 572, uortat is intransitive, 'turn out,' and the formula = quod felix faustumque sit, and the like. But v. 502 di bene uortant, 'may heaven bless the union,' the verb is trans.

habeon pactam? 'is it a bargain?' With pactam we may understand either sororem, when pactam means 'betrothed'—cf. v. 1183 haec tibi pactast Callicli filia—or rem, when pactam means 'agreed,' as Poen. 1156, A. tuam mihi maiorem filiam despondeas. H. pactam rem habeto. A. spondesne igitur? H. spondeo, which illustrates also the regular formula for concluding a bargain or betrothal. Cf. Aul. 256 and Curc. 674, infr. v. 1162.

501. pro di immortales, condicionem quouis modi, 'good heavens! what a (splendid) match.' On pro di immortales &c. see v. 160, condicionem is acc. of exclamation, quouis is a monosyllable by synizesis.

502. di bene uortant: spondeo. Cf. Aul. 256. M. sponden ergo? E. spondeo. M. di bene uortant. E. ita di faxint. Just as uortere is neut. v. 500 and trans. v. 502, so it is neut. v. 572 and trans. v. 573. Cf. Pers. 453 si malus aut nequamst, male res uortunt quas agit, Ter. Hec. 196 di uortant bene quod agas.

503. eheu, there is hiatus after the interjection. Cf. v. 3. Spondeo, with reference to v. 427. A betrothal was a stipulatio, and when a contract was made verbally, if it was to be binding, the necessary form was spondesne? spondeo. See on v. 500. Lesbonicus was ready to say spondeo when he went bail for his friend and lost his money, he could not say spondeo now, when he had everything to gain and nothing to lose.

504. nunc hic, quom opus est, non quit dicere, 'now in the present case, when it is wanted, he cannot say it.' The object to dicere is spondeo, easily supplied from the preceding 'spondeo' dicebat: hic adv. = in hac re, as Epid. 302 est lucrum hic tibi amplum, Merc. 307 ludificas nunc tu me hic, Ter. Andr. 637 nil pudent hic, ubi opus est; illi (=illic) ubi nil opust, ibi uerentur.

505. adffinitate uostra...dignum, 'worthy of an alliance with your family.' For the construction habeo magnam gratiam quom, 'I am very grateful that,' cf. gaudeo quom (Epid. 711), ago gratias quom (Capt. 922), uolup est quom (Rud. 1176).

507. haec res grauitus cecidit, 'my property here has been seriously diminished.' Lesbonicus points, as he speaks, to the house now sold to Callicles.

509. diuitiis (scanned dītiis) is Bergk's correction of de stultitiis meis A, de stultitia mea BCD, a reading which came from stultitia two lines above.

510. superfit=superest, 'alone is left remaining.' Superfieri is a Plautine word, the opposite of deferi, as Epid. 346, Mil. 356, Pseud. 456. Rēllicūds is always quadrisyllabic in Plautus, and so is the noun reliquiae. It became trisyllabic by the middle of the first cent. A.D.

511. profecto dotem nil moror, 'I assure you I don't care about a dowry.' See on v. 297. For certumst and certa res (est), 'I am determined,' see v. 270.

513. caue sis feceris, 'pray don't do it.' Cāuē by the 'breuis breuians' becomes cāuē, sis=si uis, for caue feceris see Roby, L. G. 1608 ff. 'Caue with the simple subj. is very common with the 2nd pers., especially in poetry,' e.g. Epid. 400, 437, 439.

514. etiam tu taces? 'will you hold your tongue?' Etiam is used in an impatient question (equivalent to an angry command) with pres. indic. or fut. part. with sum, 'are you going to...' See v. 790 etiam tu taces? Curc. 41 etiam taces? ibid. 189 etiam dispertimini? Most. 938 etiamne aperis? Rud. 469 etiam acceptura's urnam hanc? Roby, L. G. 1613.

516. conminiscor is followed by a pause. We are done for, says Stasimus, unless I can hit upon some plan. Then it strikes him that he can deter Philto from accepting the farm. So he turns to him with Philto, te uolo, 'I want you, Philto.' The word needed to complete the elliptic sentence te uolo is conloqui. So vv. 717, 963, 1059. The phrase is given in full Pseud. 245 em conloqui qui uolunt te, 'see here are the people who want to talk to you,' followed Pseud. 251 by te uolo.

517. siquid uis, 'at your service,' i.e. siquid uis, operam do tibi. The same elliptic colloquialism occurs Asin. 639, but Capt. 978 more fully si quid me uis, impera, Amph. 391 dic si quid uis.

huc concede aliquantum, 'just step a little this way.' For the acc. aliquantum cf. Asin. 925 abscede ergo paululum istuc, Epid. 238 abscessi paulum ab illis, infr. v. 625, Roby, L. G. 1086.

licet (affirmantis), 'very well.' See v. 372.

518. arcano must be taken in the same way here and v. 556. Some editors regard the word as a predicative dat., but it is simpler and safer to take it as an adv. abl. 'secretly,' 'privately,' as Cic. Att. xvi. 3 hunc (librum) lege arcano conuiuiis tuis.

519. crede, 'entrust,' as v. 145.

520. dico does not govern ne siris, the ne clause is not dependent. Siris=siueris perf. subj. of sino, so sirit, siritis, sirint. 'Never allow that farm to become your property or your son's.'

522. ei rei argumenta dicam. Ei and rei are both monosyllables by synizesis, so that rei is entirely elided. The whole phrase occurs Most. 92.

523. olim...quom=illo tempore quom, 'at the time when.' Olim is from the same stem as the old Latin ollus (ille=olle) and means properly 'at that time,' then came to mean 'at any former time,' 'once upon a time,' and finally 'at any time.' In its original meaning olim is used in Plautus as here with quom, e.g. Mil. 2 olim quom sudumst, Truc. 65 olim quom caletur maxume. The term. -im in olim has perhaps not yet been explained. It has been supposed to be an instrumental sing. in olim, interim, altrim (as Pseud. 357 assiste altrim secus), see Müller, Handbuch 11². p. 344, Giles, Manual of Comp. Phil. 326 v.

524. in quincto quoque sulco. The spelling of A, quincto, is retained. Merc. 66 B has quicto for quincto. The c in this word remained long after the time of Plautus. And so in the proper name, 'Quinctus is the spelling of the Republic, Quintus of the Empire.' See Lindsay, L. L. p. 70.

525. apage. See on v. 258. It is best to change the MSS. nostro to uostro, and give the whole line to Philto. Tum at the beginning of the next verse is understood most naturally as a resumption of his story by Stasimus. Acheruntis ostium, because any unhealthy or pestilential spot was thought to be an entrance to the lower world. On the scansion of Acheruns see v. 494.

526. tum uinum, prius quam coctumst, pendet putidum, 'then again the grapes hang rotten (or 'withered') before they have ripened.' Vinum by metonymy for uua, as was noted by Porphyrio on Hor. C. 1. 20. 10 'pro uino uuam posuit (Horatius): μετωνυμία, τρόπος. Huic contrarium Plautus in Trinummo fecit, uinum pro uua dicens.'

527. This line and a half is an aside by Lesbonicus, who is fatuous enough to think that 'Stasimus is strongly advising the fellow' to accept the proffered dowry.

528. at stands emphatically at the beginning of the apodosis, 'although he is a rascal, still &c.' So Capt. 684.

529. postid stands regularly at the beginning of a line, just as postea is almost always at the end. The word is sometimes separated into post id, but as the old Latin form of post is poste (e.g. Asin. 915), it is better taken as postī* with the particle d(e)*. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 588. The word is also used in the phrase postid locorum (e.g. Truc. 661), with which cf. interea loci &c. The form postidea, as Aul. 118, also makes it very unlikely that postid is post id.

530. tribus tantis illi minus, 'when elsewhere there is a very heavy harvest, the yield there is three times less than one sowed.' Tribus tantis, abl. of measure after minus, constructed like Bacch. 1034 sescenta tanta reddam, si uiuo, tibi. Redire, reditus, of the profit, revenue, 'income' yielded by an estate. Illi, 'there'=in eo agro, adv., and so again v. 555. Illic=illi+ce.

532. si...possint interfieri, 'to see whether they can be killed off.' For si cf. v. 763. Interfieri is an archaic passive of interficio, here only in Plautus, used also Lucr. III. 872 interfiat.

534. quin pessume ei res uorterit, 'but that for him things have turned out very badly.' 'Nor has anyone ever owned that farm without things turning out very badly for him.'

quorum is an emendation of quoium B, cuium A, ciuium C. 'Of those whose property it had been' &c. If quoium be retained, it may possibly be gen. plur. of the relative, or may on the analogy of nostrum &c. be gen. plur. of the possessive of the relative quonius -a -um. However, quonius in the previous line and two lines later is gen. sing. of the relative and seems to demand the gen. plur. quorum here. But see Lindsay, L. L., p. 447.

535. exulatum, 'have gone off to live in exile,' supine after the verb of motion abierunt, as Liv. II. 36. 5 in Volscos exulatum abiit. A gives exolatum, and Nonius, p. 123, quotes alii exsolati abierunt. The spelling with o as the older is perhaps more correct here. So consol (cōsol) is the prevailing spelling in Inscriptions till the Third Punic War.

emortui, sc. sunt. The omission of sunt is not nearly so common as the omission of est. Where sunt is omitted it will be found to be generally after a perf. pass. part. as v. 426, or in a relative or temporal clause, as vv. 393 and 1049. The word is omitted, as here, in a lively narrative Asin. 555, Rud. 207.

537. ut ad incitas redactust, 'see how the present owner is reduced to extremities,' or 'driven to his last move.' The phrase is borrowed from a game resembling draughts rather than chess. When the player was driven into a corner, he was said ad incitas (calces) redigi. Ciere=to move the pieces, and in-citas= 'not moved,' i.e. he was checkmated.

Hence ad incitas = ad summam rerum perturbationem desperationemque redigi. Cf. Poen. 907 profecto ad incitas lenonem rediget, si eas (mulieres) abduxerit. For such details of the games as are known see Dict. of Antiq. s.v. Latrunculi.

539. nam fulguritae sunt alternae arbores. Places struck by lightning were deuotae or infelices. The hiatus before arbores has led to various changes. Ritschl wished to read alternas as nom. plur.! Spengel suggests alternis, others insert illi (see v. 530) between alternae and arbores.

540. sues moriuntur angina, 'the pigs die of quinsy.' Angina from ango, as pāgīna from pango. The line ends with acerrume. Acerume mori is a strange expression. If we insert acri with Fleckeisen, angina acri acerrume, 'die of a violent quinsy most violently,' perhaps acerrume may be allowed to stand. Otherwise macerrumae (J. H. Onions), 'the pigs grow very lean and die of quinsy,' is very tempting, the more so as macer refers properly to animals.

541. oues scabrae sunt &c., 'the sheep are mangy, and hairless, see, as this hand of mine.' Haec, as v. 172.

542. tum autem Syrorum &c., 'then again, though the Syrians are the most enduring of men, there is not one of them who has ever lived six months there.' The Syrians were tall, strong and enduring slaves, and were in request to carry the lectica (lecticarii). See Iuv. VI. 352, Mart. IX. 3. 11 and 22. 9. But even they could not, says Stasimus, stand quite a short time (sex menses) on this pestilential farm. For the war between Rome and Antiochus see Mommsen, Bk. III. ch. ix.

544. ita, 'so true is it that,' 'so invariably do they all drop down with sunstroke.' Solstitialis morbus = σεπλιασις, 'sunstroke,' rather than 'midsummer fever.' On the force of ita see v. 29 and Langen, Beiträge p. 231 ff.

545. Campanus genus. Stasimus thinks that in naming the Syrians he has quoted the hardiest of men. Philto replies that he is ready to believe what Stasimus says, but the Campanians are now far harder than the Syrians. The Campanians were effeminate and luxurious. As a punishment for their desertion of Rome in the Third Punic War they were treated very severely, and a large number of them were sold as slaves. They were now so accustomed to slavery that they were far superior to the Syrians in endurance. See for the facts Mommsen, Bk. III. ch. vi. p. 190 ff. 'When writers of comedy jested over the fact that the Campanian serfs had already learnt to survive in that deadly atmosphere where even the hardest race of slaves, the Syrians, pined away; such unfeeling mockeries reflected the scorn of the victors, and re-echoed the cry of distress from the down-trodden nations.'

546. multo Syrorum iam antidit patientia, i.e. iam multo antidit patientia Syrorum genus. Antidit is the archaic form of anteit. Antid is like postid v. 529, and from it are formed antidhac, which Plautus uses when he wants a trisyllable, as ante hac is a dissyllable, and antidea (Liv. XXII. 10. 6). Antidit is used eight times by Plautus, anteit only once, Amph. 649, but Terence always has anteit.

547. sed istest ager profecto, ut te audiui loqui, 'but assuredly that is the land, according to your shewing &c.' Sed breaking off, and changing the subject, as v. 16. Vt te audiui loqui = 'as I understand your words,' i.e. if I understand you rightly—ut in this way generally with audio and uideo, Capt. 569, Most. 993, Pseud. 99.

548. publice = δημοσίᾳ, 'by the state,' 'at the public expense.'

549. fortunatorum insulas, i.e. μακάρων νῆσοι where, after death, ὀλβιοὶ ἥρωες lived a life of the gods. See Hesiod, Works 170 ff., Pind. Ol. II. 128 &c.

551. contra istoc &c., 'so on the other hand it seems right that evil-doers should be packed off thither, if indeed it is as you describe it.' Istoc adv. = in istunc agrum, whence also qui (ager) in the next line. Istoc for later istuc, as hoc for huc, illo, isto &c. 'It is unnatural to regard -uc as anything but a later phonetic development of the earlier -oc.' Lindsay, L. L. p. 569.

552. qui quidem istius sit modi is a sly hint on Philto's part that he is not swallowing all Stasimus says. qui quidem here = si, as Men. 204, where to the remark 'that is the proper spirit of lovers,' Peniculus retorts qui quidem ad mendicitatem se properent detrudere, 'yes, if they are in haste &c.' But qui quidem is causal Bacch. 1132, merito hoc nobis fit, qui quidem huc uenerimus.

553. hospitiumst calamitatis, 'the abode of disaster.' Cf. damni conciliabulum v. 314, and the use of hospitium v. 673.

554. quamuis malam rem quaeras, 'look for any evil you like, you would find it there.' Quaeras = si quaeras. Quamuis is not used in the ordinary Plautine manner as an adv. See on v. 380. Here quamuis = quam lubet, 'any you please.' But Brix takes it = rem quamuis mala sit quaeras, 'look for a thing no matter how bad it is.' It is, I think, against this rendering that mala res = malum and practically one word (see v. 1045), and that its meaning = 'a thrashing' forms the point of the next line.

555. at tu hercle et illi et alibi, sc. malam rem (= malum) quaeras, i.e. you won't have to go there to get the thrashing you deserve. Illi as v. 530.

caue sis dixeris. See on caue sis feceris v. 513.

556. arcano, as v. 518.

557. illum sc. agrum, 'Lesbonicus is anxious to get the ownership of the land transferred from himself,' i.e. to get it conveyed to someone else. Scan hic quidem, which is pronounced and sometimes written hiquidem. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 433.

558. quoi os sublinat, 'if only he could find someone to hood-wink.' Os sublinere, 'to gull,' a common expression in Plautus (Capt. 783, Epid. 429, Mil. 110, Pseud. 719), apparently 'to smear the face of a person who is asleep,' hence 'to bamboozle,' 'to befool.'

The oldest form of the dat. of the relative is quoiei in an epitaph of 130 B.C. (C. I. L. i. 34), but the regular form in inscriptions of the Republic is quoī. Some editors introduce quoīi here and v. 358, cf. Rud. 1193, but the dissyllabic dat. does not occur in Plautus. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 445, Müller, Handbuch 11². p. 349, Giles, Manual 326. ii.

559. meus quidem hercle, as v. 58.

560. This line and the next are spoken aside and not meant for the ears of Philto.

561. nam qui utuamus nil est, si illum amiserit, 'we have no means of living, if Lesbonicus parts with the farm.' Illum = agrum, for nil est qui uiuamus, see v. 14.

562. sodes. See v. 244.

563. quid censes? sc. eum locutum esse. Philto is true to his promise not to reveal what Stasimus has said. Accordingly he turns aside Lesbonicus' question. 'What do you suppose (he said)?' He talked on what was naturally uppermost in his mind, viz. how he could get his freedom.

565. nequiquam uolo, as v. 440.

566. licitumst, si uelles: nunc, quom nil est, non licet, 'you once could have been, if you had chosen: now that you have got nothing, you can't.' quom nil est = in re perdita v. 609. For the use of the imperf. subj. see note on v. 133. From the next words it is clear that Stasimus grumblingly mutters this to himself.

567. quid tecum? sc. loquere, 'what are you muttering to yourself?' Cf. Most. 512 quid tute tecum loquere? ibid. 551 quid tute tecum?

de istoc quod dixti modo, '(I was muttering to myself) about what you said just now,' viz. v. 565. On the form dixi see v. 188.

569. potest, impersonal, 'on the question of the dowry it is impossible to make any arrangement with me.' Philto dismisses the consideration of the dowry and leaves the question to be settled between Lesbonicus and Lysiteles.

571. posco, as v. 384.

572. quae res bene uortat) (di bene uortant v. 573. See on v. 500.

quid nunc? See v. 468.

etiam consuls? 'are you still debating?' 'have you not made up your mind yet?' This is a real question (a different use of etiam from that in v. 514) and etiam = 'still,' as Amph. 381 etiam muttis? Most. 522 etiamne astas? &c.

573. quid istic, 'what there,' istic is the adv. and dicendum est or the like must be supplied to fill up the ellipse. A concessive formula in Comedy by which the speaker gives up the discussion in impatience or despair. Donatus (on Ter. Eun. 388) 'aduerbium est aegre concedentis et ueluti uicti.' Translate 'as you please,' 'have your way then,' &c. Cf. Epid. 141 quid istic? uerba facimus = 'why continue the discussion? we are simply wasting time,' Merc. 1004 quid istic? non resciscet, ne time, Poen. 1225 quid istic? quod faciundumst cur non agimus? Ter. Andr. 572, Haut. 1053 &c.

574. numquam edepol quoiquam tam expectatus filius &c., 'never upon my word did any man so welcome the birth of a son &c.' Expectatus, 'long wished for' and so 'welcome.' The same fulness of expression, tam expectatus filius natus, quam illuc est 'spondeo' natum mihi, Amph. 601 neque lac lactis magis est simile, quam ille 'ego' similis est mei, Bacch. 767 tam frictum ego illum reddam, quam frictum est cicer.

Following Leo, I have assigned the lines to Stasimus, not to Philto. Stasimus, who is most anxious for the match, is the person who may be expected to exhibit the most extravagant joy, and Philto, who is in conversation with Lesbonicus, should say istuc, not illuc. Pius notes 'in quibusdam codicibus hic loquitur Stasimus.'

576. fortunabunt. Nonius p. 109, quoting the sentence, explains fortunare as 'prosperare et omnibus bonis augere.'

577. huc ad Calliclem go together. The girl was in Callicles' house.

578. dic hoc negoti, quo modo actumst, literally 'tell her this business, how it has been arranged,' i.e. hoc negoti is taken out of the relative sentence by antiptosis, and the relative sentence is not strictly dependent (actum est, not actum sit). See note on v. 373 and cf. Capt. 206 scimus nos nostrum officium quod est. In Plautus the paratactic indic. is the ordinary use after familiar colloquial phrases such as uide, uiden? audin? followed by ut, quo modo &c., e.g. Aul. 46 illuc sis uide, ut incedit, Merc. 169 hoc sis uide, ut palpatur, Men. 920 audin tu ut deliramenta loquitur? Pseud. 152 hoc sis uide, ut alias res agunt.

579. gratulator, imperative. The termination is -tōd with the final d changed to r. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 517.

scilicet, 'without fail.' Sci-licet corresponds in sense to scire licet, which Lucretius uses in full, at the same time employing scilicet as its equivalent, e.g. II. 469 scilicet esse globosa. The history of ilicet and uidelicet is the same, and hence their use with acc. and infin., e.g. Curc. 263 item alios deos facturos scilicet, 'you may be sure the other gods will do the same,' Capt. 469 ilicet parasiticae arti maxumam malam cruce, 'the profession of the diner-out may go and hang itself,' Asin. 599 esse negotiosum interdus uidelicet Solonem, 'you can see that by day he is a busy Solon.' See Munro on Lucr. I. 210. The words are formed directly from the verbal noun-stems, just as tenses are formed. Sci-licet, i-licet, uide-licet are precisely analogous to sci-bo, i-bo, uide-bo &c. Another less probable view derives the words from the imperative, sci, licet = 'know, you may.'

580. coram, 'that the day may be fixed for the wedding in person,' i.e. by a personal interview between you and Lysiteles.

581. eadem, 'at the same time,' always in Plautus with the fut. or fut. perf. The phrase is given in full, eadem opera, 'with the same trouble,' Asin. 640, Bacch. 60, Capt. 450, Most. 1039. Similar is una opera, 'just as well, 'you might as well,' Asin. 99, Pseud. 319. But una opera is also used in the same sense as eadem. Roby, L. G. 1237.

582. tu istuc cura quod iussi : ego iam hic ero, 'mind you see to what I told you : I'll be back directly.' This is addressed to Stasimus by Lesbonicus, and refers to his previous orders, vv. 577—579. The line is defective : it may be filled up by curato bene in place of cura, but emendation is not necessary, for, as Leo says, the line has been added to enable the rest of the scene to be omitted.

ego iam hic ero, 'I'll be back here directly,' is regularly used by a person just quitting the stage.

583. quin tu i modo—i modo—abi modo. With Stasimus' haste to get Lesbonicus to go, cf. Merc. 954, 955, where Charinus presses Eutychus with i modo...i modo...quin tu ergo i modo.

584. quid opus sit facto, 'tell him to consider what must be done about the dowry.' This is the regular construction, viz. the part. in the abl. with quid or other neut. pron. (id, quod, &c.). The part. is instrumental abl. after opus (or usus), and quid is either acc. or, perhaps more probably, nom., in apposition to opus facto, which is equivalent to an adj. The person concerned, if expressed, is in the dat. Cf. v. 807, Amph. 505 citius quod non facto est usus fit, quam quod facto est opus, ibid. 628 nam mi istuc primum exquisito est opus, Cist. 129 quod tacito usus est, Merc. 565 quod opust facto facito ut cogites, Cic. Fam. VIII. 8. 5 si quid de ea re ad populum ad plebemue lato opus esset.

585. certumst, vv. 270 and 511.

dare, 'to give her,' i.q. dare nuptum. Dare takes the place of an iambus, i.e. -re is what is known as syllaba anceps, which is allowed under the same conditions as hiatus, viz. where there is a decided pause or a change of speaker.

586. neque enim illi damno umquam esse patiar. The sentence is interrupted by Stasimus' abi modo. Meam negligentiam is acc. before esse, and the order is neque enim umquam patiar meam negligentiam illi damno esse. Damno is predicative dat., as it is Asin. 571, Bacch. 1103, Cist. 50—other examples Roby, L. G. II. p. xlv. To preserve the arrangement translate 'I will assuredly never allow my sister to suffer...from my carelessness.' Enim is an asseverative particle, see note on v. 61.

587. neque enim. Here again the sequence of the sentence is broken by Stasimus with his impatient I modo. Neque enim...opsit is one sentence twice thus interrupted. 'Nor assuredly...does it seem fair that my misdeeds should not...damage myself rather than anyone else.' The end of the line is defective in the MSS., which have O pater, a copyist's mistake from two lines lower down. Neque enim...i modo is Ussing's conjecture, which I prefer to Ritschl's L. nullo modo adopted by most editors. With these interrupted sentences cf. Shaks. Temp., II. i. 143 ff.

590. enumquam, 'shall I ever?' Enumquam is best written as a single word. ēn (Gk. ἤν) is used in Comedy only in rhetorical questions. Cf. Men. 143 dic mi, enumquam tu uidisti tabulam pictam? &c., ibid. 925 dic mihi: enumquam intestina tibi crepant, quod sentias? Rud. 987 and 1117. Exit Lesbonicus, still pursued by Stasimus' i modo.

591. tandem impetraui abiret, 'at last I've got him to go.' Not impetraui ut abiret. Cf. v. 681 dem suades, Asin. 644 istud facias ipse, quod faciamus nobis suades, Amph. 257 uelatis manibus orant ignoscamus peccatum suom, Rud. 681 quae uis uim mi afferam ipsa adigit. On the use of tandem in Plautus see Langen, Beiträge p. 88 ff.

di, nostram fidem, 'great heavens!' Like pro di immortales, v. 501, never a real appeal to the gods for help, but, as Donatus says (Ter. Andr. 716), 'admirantis aduerbium cum exclamatione.' See on v. 160.

592. edepol re gesta pessume gestam probe, i.e. rem gestam probe, 'really a fine success after a horrible mess,' i.e. though Lesbonicus has made ducks and drakes of the property, here is a good match for his sister—if only we can keep the land. On the acc. of exclamation after edepol see v. 128.

594. quid ea re fuat, 'though even now it is very doubtful what is to become of it.' For the construction see v. 157, and on fuat v. 267.

595. sed [id] si alienatur, 'but if the land is conveyed' (to Lysiteles—see v. 557). Editors bracket id or change to is in agreement with ager, v. 593. But, though not needed, id may stand after ea re, cf. Aul. 770 ego te de alia re rescuisse censui, quod ad me attinet.

actumst de collo meo, 'it's all up with my neck,' meaning properly 'with my head,' 'my life,' but also, as appears from the next line, referring to the burdens he must carry if he goes with Lesbonicus to serve as a soldier. Lesbonicus, if he parts with the land, will be penniless. He must turn soldier.

596. peregre, 'to foreign parts' = in Asiam aut in Ciliciam, v. 599. See v. 149.

598. ibit istac aliquo, 'he will go off somewhere in that direction (by that road) to utter perdition, to serve as a soldier, either to Asia or Cilicia.' If istac is sound, it is used δεικτικῶς, pointing to the entrance on the left of the spectators which leads to the harbour.

599. latrocinatum, supine after ibit. Latro = μισθοφόρος, 'a mercenary,' latrocinari = μισθοφορεῖν. Cf. λάτρον, λατρεύειν. So Mil. 74 rex Seleucus me opere orauit maximo, ut sibi latrones cogerem et conscriberem, ibid. 949 ut latrones quos conduxī hinc ad Seleucum duceret, Poen. 663 hic latro in Sparta fuit, &c. The wars are the wars which ensued on the death of Alexander the Great, and raged especially in the dominions of the Seleucidae. In the New Attic Comedy the desperate lover and the broken man are continually 'off to the wars' in Asia Minor.

600. quo mihi imperatumst, sc. ut irem, v. 577.

601. exturbauit nostris aedibus. So v. 805 cunctos exturba aedibus, Aul. 70 extrudit aedibus, Merc. 357 domo extrusit.

Exit Stasimus. The pause between the Acts is filled up with the music of the tibicen. Cf. Pseud. 573—the end of Act I.—tibicen uos interibi hic delectauerit.

ACT III. (602—819). The narrative is now complete. Act I. has explained the position of Callicles. Act II. has unfolded the marriage-proposal. Now in Act III. these two strands are woven together, and we see how the marriage-project affects Callicles' position. Here the complications begin. The expositio is followed by the inuolutio.

The metres of the Act are : Scenes 1 and 2 (602—728), Septenarian Trochaics, Scene 3 (729—819), Iambic Trimeters.

SCENE 1 (602—626). Stasimus has told Callicles that his ward is betrothed to Lysiteles. They come out of the house discussing the engagement.

Scenes are often made to begin, as this does, in the middle of a conversation. Cf. Asin. 851, Men. 889, Poen. 961, Ter. Andr. 301, Eun. 391, Haut. 242.

602. dixti. See on this form v. 188.

nostrum erilem filium = nostrī erī filium, 'our young master,' common in the mouth of slaves. So Rud. Arg. 2 erilis filiae crepundia, Truc. 297 erilis noster filius, Rud. 198 erile scelus me sollicitat, followed κατὰ σύνεσιν, as if erī had preceded, by eius me impietas male habet.

603. despondisse, Donatus makes the distinction 'spondet puellae pater, despondet adulescentis.' But Lesbianicus is here acting for the girl's absent father. However, the distinction must not be pressed. See Ter. Haut. 779.

em, hoc modo, 'there ! that's what I mean.' hoc modo answering the question quo modo, as Amph. 1023, A. quo modo? M. eo modo, &c.

605. in tantas diuitias dabit? Cf. Asin. 574 ad languorem tua duritia dederis octo ualidos lictores, Pseud. 928 in timorem dabo militarem aduenam, Capt. 962 in ruborem te totum dabo.

606. non credibile dicis, 'what you say is past belief.' The mss. reading dices is retained by some editors and defended as meaning hoc si dices, non erit credibile.

nullus creduas. Nullus as a stronger negative is comic and colloquial. Thus nullus sum (Asin. 922) is more emphatic than perii. So Asin. 408 is nullus uenit, 'he never came,' Bacch. 90 nullus tu adfueris, Rud. 143 is qui uocauit, nullus uenit, Ter. Eun. 216 nullus moneas, Hec. 79 nullus dixeris. The idiom is found also in Cicero's Letters (Att. XI. 24. 4 Philotimus nullus uenit) and in Apuleius, an imitator of Plautus. creduas is an archaic a subjunctive (optative) form, for which see on vv. 6 and 436. Hence it is used at the end of the line. So Poen. 747 credulam, Bacch. 476 credulas, Asin. 854 adcredulas, Bacch. 504 credulat.

607. quid ? me nili pendere, C. 'What will you believe?' St. 'that I don't care (whether you believe or not).'

608. quam dudum istuc aut ubi actumst ? 'How long ago or where was the arrangement you speak of made?' Quam dudum as Amph. 692 quam dudum istuc factum est ? Asin. 449 quam dudum tu aduenisti ? always implying that it is a short time only.

ilico, hic ante ostium, 'this minute, here in front of the door.' ilico answers quam dudum, hic ante ostium answers ubi. Illico (*in-sloco) is more common in Plautus in the temporal than in the local sense. The local sense is found only with verbs of rest, as v. 627 sta ilico, 'stand on the spot' = 'stay where you are,' v. 1059 asta ilico, Merc. 912 istic sta ilico, Most. 1064 ilico intra limen isti astate. For the temporal meaning, 'on the spot,' hence 'immediately,' 'at once,' see Merc. 362 nec sacrum nec tam profanum quicquam est, quin ibi ilico adsit, Rud. 266 ilico hinc imus, haud longule ex hoc loco ; uerum longe hinc abest unde aduectae huc sumus, i.e. 'immediately, at the moment, we are coming from here, but the place from which we started, &c.' See Langen, Beiträge p. 155 ff.

609. tam modo, 'so ago,' a provincialism for modo, i.e. modo, 'only a little while ago,' is emphasized by adding tam. The Praenestines are jeered at as being gloriosi (Bacch. 11). Truc. 691 ut Praenestinis conia est ciconia quotes another peculiarity of their dialect. Festus also quotes p. 162 nefrones = nefrendes, and p. 356 tongere = nosse.

610. frugalior, 'has Lesbonicus become so much better a manager, when he has squandered his fortune, than when it was intact?' Frugalior is the regular comparative of the indeclinable frugi. Frugalis is not used, though the adv. frugaliter is in common use.

611. atque equidem. On equidem as a strengthened form of quidem, its use with other persons than the first (here e.g. the third), and its regular employment in atque equidem, quando equidem &c., see on v. 353. In v. 941 atque e medio quidem the words are separated by e medio, so that there is no exception to the rule.

oratum filio, 'to beg for his son,' i.e. to act as orator for Lysiteles, as Ter. Andr. 528 orabo gnato uxorem.

612. flagitium, 'a scandal.'

613. postremo, 'finally,' the consideration which makes further discussion unnecessary, as v. 662, and so = 'in short.' Callicles says 'I see that the question concerns me, touches my honour,' and therefore no more need be said, his course is clear.

614. castigatorem, i.e. Megaronides. See v. 187. Exit Callicles to ask Megaronides' advice what he shall do under the new circumstances of the case. Stasimus is left alone and soliloquises until Lysiteles and Lesbonicus come up.

615. propemodum...subolet mihi. 'I see pretty nearly why Callicles there is in a hurry, and I have an inkling of the truth.' Propemodum is the only form used in the old Drama, propemodo and postmodo are not early forms. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 559. Subolet mihi, as v. 698 and Pseud. 421, only in Comedy and always impersonal.

616. ut agro euortat Lesbonicum, i.e. festinat ut agro euortat Lesbonicum. Euortere is one of the many Plautine synonyms for 'swindle.' Others are circumducere, circumuortere, emungere, interuortere, tangere, tondere. For the abl. cf. v. 601.

617. quom, 'since,' causal, but followed by the indic., as it is in Plautus in all meanings. According to Draeger, in Plautus the indic. follows quom in 229 passages, the subj. in 9. And these exceptions are mostly due to assimilation, and apparent rather than real. The rule in Plautus is to use the indic. after quom whether temporal, explanatory, adversative, causal or concessive. See Müller, Handbuch 11². p. 510 ff. But in the classical period quom causal, adversative, or concessive is used exclusively with the subj. Hence the correction quam ('O my master, how your property is being torn to shreds here in your absence'), however neat, is unnecessary, although the latest and best editor of Plautus, Leo, adopts it.

620. nimum difficilest, 'it is very hard for a friend, in the true sense of the word, to be found.' On ita ut nomen cluet see v. 309.

621. quoi quom credideris = talem ut quom ei credideris.

omni, 'any,' as v. 338.

622. eccillum, 'but there I see our (prospective) son-in-law coming with his (intended) brother-in-law.' generum = Lysiteles who was to marry the daughter of Stasimus' master, adfini (see on v. 331) is Lesbonicus. On ecce see v. 386. Ecce with eum, eam, illum, illam, istum, istam makes eccum, eccam, eccillum &c. (1) If there is a main verb in the sentence as here, the word is interjected without affecting the syntax. (2) If there is no verb, eccum &c. are followed by the acc. (of exclamation). Thus (1) Bacch. 611 Mnesilochus eccum maestus progreditur foras, (2) Most. 560 sed Philolachetis seruom eccum Tranium. (3) In a few cases these constructions are mixed, and eccum puts what should be the subject into the acc., as Mil. 1290 sed eccum Palaestrionem, stat cum milite. Eccum is the original of the Italian ecco, and in Plautus at times comes very near ecce in meaning, as Mil. 25, P. ubi tu es? A. eccum. Eccum applies to persons standing by the speaker's side, eccillum, to persons at some little distance off.

623. nescioquid, 'there is some point or other on which they do not quite agree.' Nescio quid to be taken together as one word 'je ne sais quoi.' Nescioquis scans as a choriambus, nescio as a principal verb is a cretic, e.g. vv. 849, 960.

celeri gradu, a breach of Athenian propriety. Citizens walked at a staid pace, only slaves should run. Cf. Poen. 522 liberos homines per urbem modico magis par est gradu ire, servile esse duco festinantem currere.

624. ille reprehendit hunc priorem pallio, 'Lysiteles seizes Lesbonicus, who is in front of him, by the cloak from behind.' So Epid. 1 quis properantem me reprehendit pallio? Mil. 59 uel illae quae here pallio me reprehenderunt.

625. haud ineuscheme, 'not unbecomingly,' 'quite comme il faut,' standing facing one another as opponents in a picturesque attitude. Ineuscheme is the Gk. εὐσχήμωσ with a Latin negative prefixed and a Latin termination. Cf. Mil. 213 euge, euscheme hercle astitit et dulcè et comœdice, i.e. εὖ γε, εὐσχήμωσ, δουλικῶσ, κωμωδικῶσ.

huc aliquantum apscessero, 'I will at once withdraw a little this way.' Aliquantum as v. 517. The fut. perfect denotes instantaneous action—so vv. 710, 1007—but there is at times so little difference between fut. and fut. perf. that they are co-ordinated, as Capt. 315 bene merenti bene profuerit, male merenti par erit. 'The use of the fut. perf. in the Republican Dramatists in sentences like mox iuero, where it hardly differs from the fut., suggests that in its original use the tense was more of a fut. than of a fut. perf.' Lindsay, L. L. p. 510.

626. est lubido...audire, 'I have a fancy to hear'—est lubido = lubet, hence the infin. Cf. v. 865, Epid. 97 qui lubidost male loqui? ibid. 240 id lubidost scire.

Stasimus retires into the angiportum between the houses and listens to the conversation, unobserved until he shews himself v. 705.

SCENE 2 (627—728). Lysiteles urges Lesbonicus to give him his sister without dowry. Lesbonicus refuses on the ground that to do so would be a disgrace to himself. Stasimus listens unseen to the argument until v. 705, when he declares the victory in argument to lie with Lysiteles. But neither young man will give way, and Stasimus is left lamenting.

The scene is more serious than one would expect in a comedy. Its object is to shew that the question of the dowry has raised a very real difficulty, which Callicles will have to meet somehow.

The metre of the last scene (sept. troch.) is continued.

627. sta ilico, 'stop where you are.' Ilico here is local with a verb of rest. See on v. 608. For the sigmatic aorist optative form occultassis, =perf. subj., see on vv. 60 and 384.

628. potin ut me ire...sinas? 'can't you let me go?' Potin = nonne potis (est) = potest impers. See v. 352.

in rem tuam...gloriae aut famae. Are the latter words gen. or dat.? Are they dependent on in rem tuam or on uideatur esse? On the whole, I think they are genitives dependent on in rem tuam, 'if I thought it were to your interest in fame or even reputation.' But some excellent authorities (Leo; Roby, L. G. p. xxxix. rather hesitatingly, and Ussing) take them as predicative datives dependent on esse uideatur, 'if I thought it were to your interest, thought it glorious or even creditable &c.' For this cf. Poen. 145 si tibi lubido est aut uoluptati, sino, where however tibi is expressed, and the construction has nothing analogous to in rem tuam: for the former view cf. Pers. 342 utrum hercle magis in uentris rem uidebitur. In rem tuam, see v. 238.

The whole sentence si uideatur...sinam, 'if I thought it...I would let you (but I don't and so I won't),' is a Plautine pres. subj. of the unfulfilled condition, as Asin. 188 si ecaster nunc habeas quod des, alia uerba praehibeas, ibid. 393 si sit domi, dicam tibi, ibid. 427 tamquam si claudus sim, cum fustist ambulandum.

630. quid id est? 'what is that?' i.e. 'what does your statement mean? I do not understand you.' Quid id est? as also v. 325, is a request for further enlightenment on a point already introduced, quid est? is used when the speaker does not know anything about it.

631. meumst. See v. 445.

632. ut sic odio esses mihi, 'to be such a bore,' 'so troublesome to me,'—odio predicative dat., a standing expression in this sense.

633. bene quom simulas facere mihi te = quom simulas te bene facere mihi, but bene by being placed first gets emphasis and balances male facis, male consulis.

634. egone? tune, 'what, I?' 'yes, you.' Nē interrogatiua answered by nē confirmatiua, the only case in which nē comes after the pronoun. Cf. Capt. 857, Epid. 575, Mil. 439, Most. 955.

635. tu [mihi] es melior quam egomet mihi? 'are you kinder to me than I am to myself?' = 'do you see my interests better than I can myself?' The line as it stands is too long, and to bracket the first mihi seems the simplest remedy, as the second mihi is common to both members of the sentence. The whole may perhaps better be understood sarcastically, without a note of interrogation, 'of course you understand my business better than I do myself.'

637. an id est sapere, ut qui beneficium a beneuolente repudies? 'do you call it 'sense,' to spurn a kindness from a friend?' Beneficium a beneuolente repudiare = beneficium a beneuolente accipere nolle. Qui is the old abl. of the indef., enclitically attached to ut as it is to hercle v. 464, q.v.

638. quod quoi facias non placet = quod non placet ei quoi facias.

639. officio migrat, 'desert its duty.' On the abl. see v. 265.

640. quin rumori seruiam, 'from caring what people say,' i.e. from acting in such a way as not to get myself talked about.

641. quid ais? 'look here.' Quid ais? is used in its idiomatic sense—see on v. 193—as a question to call a person's attention to another question which follows. Only the real question itan &c. is for the moment postponed by the parenthetical sentence nam... promeres which explains Lysiteles' position.

promeres, 'deserve.' Nonius, p. 475 'promeres pro promereris,' quoting this passage. The word is used in malam partem as here, Amph. 570 quid mali sum promeritus?, but in bonam partem Asin. 128 and elsewhere. Lysiteles is now thoroughly angry. Heretofore Lesbonicus has been only too indifferent what people did say: now all of a sudden he is so scrupulous to avoid offence, that he will reject a kindness from a close friend, lest 'people should talk.'

642. itan tandem...perderes?, 'do you really mean to maintain that your ancestors bequeathed to you the reputation you enjoy (your good name), simply that you might scandalously squander what had been earned by their thrift?' Itane, itane uero, &c. in a surprised and indignant question—ut as often, 'to indicate the sorry end of so much,' e.g. Lucr. 1. 100 exitus ut classi felix faustusque daretur, 'all forsooth to enable the fleet to sail.' Did Lesbonicus' forefathers 'toil and spin' that he might squander 'an unearned increment'? The passage, though it may probably enough have come from Philemon, is entirely Roman in feeling. A distinguished father paved his son's path to office, the son must keep the road open for his descendants.

644. atque honori posterorum tuorum ut uindex fieres, 'and to enable you to assert your children's claim to office, your father and your grandfather have made the road to attain office easy and smooth for you.' There is some doubt about the connexion of this line. The old way was to connect with what precedes and understand uindex to mean 'executioner,' 'hangman,' a forced and unnatural meaning. Various emendations of uindex have been suggested, index, obiex, inlex. But if the mark of interrogation is put after perderes, and this line linked on to what follows, uindex can have its natural meaning. The sense then is: 'Your predecessors smoothed things for you, but their object was that you might do the same for those who come after you. You have broken the sequence and vastly increased your successors' difficulties.' The object is to point the contrast between what his forefathers have done for Lesbonicus and what he is doing for his successors. Lesbonicus is damaging not only himself, but also the generations still unborn.

646. tu fecisti ut difficilis foret, 'you have made it difficult (for your descendants).' Tu stands in emphatic antithesis with the previous line, 'they made it easy for you, you, &c.'

The lines are an instance of the co-ordination of contrasted clauses, 'though your father &c., you.' See on v. 292.

647. tuis ἀπὸ κοινοῦ with culpa and desidia.

648. praeoptauisti = maluisti, and is followed by ut with the subj. It is usually joined with the infin.

649. hoc facto, 'do you believe that you can now by your new line of conduct screen your shortcomings?' Hoc facto is the conduct based upon his determination as announced v. 640.

650. sis, see v. 244.

651. in foro operam amicis da, ne in lecto amicae, 'devote yourself to your friends on the Bourse, not (i.e. don't devote yourself) to your 'friend' in her boudoir.' Amicis and amicae are pointedly contrasted, as Asin. 573 ubi amicae quam amico tuo fueris magis fidelis. For operam dare see Langen, Beiträge, p. 104 ff.

652. ob eam rem enixe expeto, 'I am eagerly desirous...with the express purpose that....' ob eam rem is explained by ut. For enixe some read denixe, from Placidus, p. 452, denixe, enixe.

653. ut tibi sit qui te corrigere possis, 'that you may have the means of setting yourself straight,' 'reforming yourself,' as v. 118. For qui, 'whereby,' see v. 14.

655. dixti, see v. 188.

uel exsignauero, 'if you like I will copy it all out.' Exsignauero, as Liv. 1. 20. 5 pontifici omnia exscripta exsignataque attribuit. Vel, properly the athematic imper. of uolo, like fer, es, &c.—see Lindsay,

L. L. p. 517—is in Plautus intensive rather than disjunctive. See Langen, Beiträge, p. 69 ff. It allows a choice—then a choice between alternatives, and so becomes disjunctive. Other imperatives that have become particles are age, puta, and em if it is from eme.

656. ut rem patriam et gloriam maiorum foedarim meum, 'how I have squandered my patrimony and sullied the fair fame of my forefathers.' Foedarim is strictly applicable only to gloriam, with rem patriam it is used by a zeugma. For the short gen. pl. meum see on v. 241.

657. scibam ut esse me deceret, facere non quibam miser, 'I knew how I ought to behave, alas! I could not put my knowledge into practice.' This is really a co-ordination of contrasted clauses = 'though I knew &c.' The adverb ut=adj. qualem, as regularly in this idiom, see v. 46. Scibam...quibam are fourth conjugation imperfects in -ibam, which are very common in the Dramatists. Lucretius v. 934 writes nec scibat ferro molirier arua, and the Augustan poets use the forms where the ordinary form would not come into the line, as Vergil Aen. vi. 468 lenibat. Ibam, peribam, quibam, nequibam continued to be the classical forms. Cf. fourth conj. futures in -bo, as scibo, which however in the classical period survive only in isolated cases, such as lenibo, Prop. III. 21. 32.

658. ita, 'so completely,' 'so true is it that,' see v. 544. Notice the alliteration with u, perhaps 'bound by the bonds of Beauty.' Cf. Bacch. 180 ita me uadatum amore uinctumque adtines.

aptus, the reading of A, should be kept, explained by Nonius, p. 234, aptum connexum et colligatum significat, 'tied to idleness I fell into loss.' Fraudem=damnum.

659. et tibi nunc, proinde ut merere, summas habeo gratias. The plur. gratias with habeo is not in accordance with the regular idiom, which is grates plur., but gratiam sing. See Langen, Beiträge, p. 12 ff. But this is not an ordinary expression of thanks. It is at least in part sarcastic. 'I know off by heart, says Lesbonicus, all that you have told me. I want to hear no more of it. And yet I do thank you, just so far ('as much' or 'as little') as you deserve it.' For proinde ut see v. 65.

660. at, 'oh! but.' Don't thank me and think to get rid of me—I cannot let you go thus.

661. parum pudere te, 'that you are wanting in proper feeling.' So pudicus, 'a man of proper feeling,' v. 697.

662. postremo, see v. 613. Distinguish the meaning of auscultare with dat. and with acc. Auscultare with dat. = 'hear and obey,' 'listen to a man and take his advice'; auscultare with acc. denotes the mere physical act of hearing. So Asin. 65 omnes qui mi auscultabunt, 'who will listen to my advice,' Mil. 496 ego auscultem tibi? Most. 586 auscultamihī) (Pseud. 523 ted ausculto lubens.

hoc ut dico facis = hoc ita ut dico facis, as Asin. 54 estne hoc ut dico? Merc. 554 hoc ut dico factis persequar.

663. tute pone te latebis, 'you will stand in your own light,' put your worse side in front, so that Honour cannot see the better side concealed behind. Leo prints Honor, which is certainly more nearly abstract than it has been heretofore. There is supposed to be an allusion to the custom of scurrae (v. 202), who put their umbræ or parasites behind so that they were not easily seen, Poen. 612 faciunt scurrae quod consuerunt: pone sese homines locant.

664. maxume clarum, like maxume alienum Capt. 99, magis facete Mil. 539, magis dulce Pers. 764.

665. pernoui...admodum, 'I have a thorough knowledge of.' The adv. is separated from its word as it is Mil. 609 sterilis hinc prospectus usque ad ultimum est plateam probe, Pseud. 433 sed si sint ea uera, ut mos nunc est, maxume. Ingenium ingenuum, 'your natural disposition,' contrasted with what you now profess to be.

667. pectus opscurasse, 'has clouded your understanding'; pectus, as v. 90. teneo, 'I know,' 'I understand.' Lysiteles has displayed his knowledge of love in the Canticum, Act II. Sc. 1.

668. ballista, 'Love is like the ball from an engine.' 'Ballista in Plautus is always the thing thrown, never the engine itself,' Langen, Beiträge, p. 275. And so catapulta. The engine is termed ballistarium Poen. 202, the missile ballista being mentioned in the preceding line.

sic ἀπὸ κοινού, with uolat as well as celerest, 'nor flies so fast.' Cf. the description of the working of Love given Cist. 203—220.

669. atque is mores hominum moros et morosos efficit, 'Love makes the manners of men mad and moody.' But mad is not a good equivalent of moros, 'foolish,' which is the Greek μωρός, used only by Plautus, and often for the sake of the assonance with mores, e.g. Men. 571 maxime more moro molestoque multum.

670. minus placet, magis quod suadetur = quo quid magis suadetur, eo minus placet, 'the more you urge the lover to do a thing, the less he likes it, &c.'

671. quom inopiast, cupias, 'when you can't get a thing you want it, when you can get it you don't care for it.' The second person is 'generalising,' not 'you in particular,' but 'anyone.' cupias...uelis, potential.

672. ille qui aspellit, &c. The line is perfectly Plautine in structure and phraseology. But it must be condemned as a gloss or an imitation of v. 670. Perhaps uetat, not uotat, is a trace of later origin. Aspellere = abs-pellere is a good Plautine word, peculiar to comic diction.

673. insanum malumst hospitio deuorti ad Cupidinem, 'it is a desperately bad thing to turn in and put up at 'the Cupid.' Cupid is compared to an inn (deuersorium, taberna deuersoria), in which it is dangerous to seek shelter. Cupido is a stronger term than amor. Thus Nonius, p. 421 cupido est inconsideratae necessitatis, amor iudicii, Servius on Verg. Aen. VI. 194 cupidinem ueteres immoderatum amorem dicebant. Insanum is used as an adverb, as it is Bacch. 761 insanum magnum molior negotium, Most. 908 porticum insanum bonam, 'awfully good,' Mil. 24 estur insanum bene, 'is awfully good eating.' Plautus does not use the regular adv. insane.

675. si istuc conare ut facis indicium, 'if you attempt your plan, as you declare you will, you will have your family in a blaze.' The reading is doubtful, and the text given is a transposition of the MSS. si istuc ut conare facis indicium. The last word very possibly is not right, but the emendation often accepted incendio incendes genus, is not satisfactory if only because tuom is badly wanted, and Bergk's improvement igni tuom incendes genus loses all the point of incendio incendes, and does not account for the MSS. reading, unless it be igni—incendio—indicium, a not very likely process. The general sense is clear enough. Your plan will set fire to your family, then you will shout for water and probably put the house out altogether, i.e. if you part with the land, you will be in great danger of utter want, then lover-like, you will fly to a desperate remedy and enlist; the end will be the extinction of your line. We may suppose that Philemon had oikos, not γένος, when the figure of first fire and then water becomes much more natural. But the fire is first destructive, v. 675, then necessary for the maintenance of the house or family, v. 678. The water is meant to save, v. 676, but it destroys, v. 678. However, perhaps this is due to the excessive use. Lover-like, Lesbonicus flies from extreme to extreme, and never thinks of the happy mean, the ideal of Greek philosophy. See for a discussion of the passage Langen, Plaut. Stud., p. 82.

676. tum igitur and igitur tum are apparently used indifferently by Plautus, like Homer's δὴ τότε for τότε δὴ. E.g. Most. 689 igitur tum accedam, and so igitur demum Amph. 301, but demum igitur Merc. 552. The position of igitur differs in different authors. Cicero in his speeches, Caesar, and Terence except in his earliest plays, avoid placing it first.

677. proinde ut corde amantes sunt cati, 'with the cleverness of lovers,' sarcastically, for lovers never remembered μηδὲν ἀγαν.

679. facilest inuentu, sc. id qui (=quo) genus congliscat meum. 'That is easily got: fire is always given, although one asks it from a foe.' Datur is habitually given, for it was a common duty pati ab igne ignem capere, si qui uelit. Cf. Rud. 438 cur tu aquam grauare, amabo, quam hostis hosti commodat?

681. dem suades. See on v. 591.

682. abusus, followed by acc. See on v. 1.

porro in ditiis esse, 'should be further in wealth,' 'should continue to be wealthy.' See on v. 162. Ditiis, the contracted form, and ditiior in Plautus only at the end of the line, but in Terence the contracted form is the common form, and Adelph. 770 he writes dis for diues, an anomaly, for contraction usually appears only in the comparative, as iuiuenis, iunior.

684. alienis grauis, qui suis se concinnat leuem, 'he will never be a man of weight to outsiders, who shews himself a man of no weight to his own relatives.' Grauis=alicuius momenti) (leuem=nullius momenti. Concinnare, 'to work up' anything, here=reddere in colloquial language, as Capt. 601 me insanum uerbis concinnat suis, 'works me up to madness'='renders me mad,' Stich. 286 tranquillam concinna uiam.

685. nolo te iactari diutius, 'I don't wish you to be troubled further,' a polite but firm way of asking Lysiteles to leave him alone.

686. tanto meliust, a sarcastic question—'is it so much better (than that I should be troubled further) that you' &c. Egestatem exsequi=egestatem perpeti, see on v. 282.

687. tua qui (abl.) toleres moenia, 'to enable you to discharge your duties.'

689. sed ut inops infamis ne sim. Quam, which should answer tam, is replaced by sed because we pass from negative to positive, from nolo to uolo, to be supplied after sed. 'I don't wish you so much to consider how to lighten my poverty, but I do wish you to consider how, though I lose my money, I may not lose my good name.' Inops concessive with infamis.

differant. See on v. 186.

690. concubinatus was objectionable as implying the social inferiority of the wife. It would be assumed that she was not good enough for the higher position.

692. haec famigeratio te honestet, me conlutulentet. Cf. famigerator, vv. 215 and 219. The clauses are contrasted = μέν...δέ, 'though it might bring you credit, would cover me with shame.' See on v. 292 where lutitant also occurs. Conlutulentare is formed from an adj. in -lentus, like opulentare, turbulentare.

694. tibi sit emolumentum honoris: mihi quod obiectent siet, 'you would get the increase in honour, people would have a handle against me.' Lesbonicus uses honor in an abstract sense = 'reputation,' 'estimation.' See v. 663.

695. te dictatorem censes fore? 'If, Lesbonicus has said, you marry my sister without a dowry, i.e. refuse to take the land, the increase in honour will be yours.' Lysiteles replies—as if Lesbonicus meant honor in the sense of 'office'—'You think that, if I don't take the land, I shall get promotion: do you think if I do take the land, that you will rise to the top of the tree?' Dictatorem = fastigium honoris.

697. is est honos homini pudico, 'it is an 'honour' to a man of honour.' Pudicus = a man who has a proper feeling. This is a reference to v. 661, where Lysiteles says 'he is sorry Lesbonicus is wanting in proper feeling (parum pudere).' Lesbonicus is here shewing that he is not deficient. Is for id by the regular attraction to the gender of the word following, hic labor, hoc opus est; haec quidem uis est, ea sapientia est; haec mea culpa non est &c. Honos nom. sing. is a survival of a declension -ōs, -ōsis, older than -or, -ōris. Cf. the adj. honestus, angor and angustus, arbor and arbustum (arbustus adj.?). The r in the nom. came from the oblique cases, and s was retained in flos, ros &c.

698. scio equidem te animatus ut sis. For the anaptosis of te see on v. 373. Scio equidem v. 353, subolet v. 615.

699. id agis ut, 'your object is that.' Effugias and deseras are the verbs after ut.

700. qui uitam colas, 'and have here no means of supporting life.' See on v. 14.

701. inanis = κενός, 'empty-handed,' 'penniless.' Notice the chiasmus, verb noun adj., adj. noun verb. Cf. vv. 431 and 1129.

702. adfinitem = adfines. Lysiteles in his enumeration begins with Lesbonicus' nearest and dearest, and ends with ordinary friends. Cognatos means especially his sister, adfines Lysiteles and Philto, amicos is a general and comprehensive term.

703. mea opera, 'all through me.'

704. id me commissurum...induxeris, i.e. ne animum induxeris me commissurum ut patiar id fieri. Ne animum induxeris=ne credideris, so animum aduerto=animaduerto, and κατὰ σύνεσιν is constructed accordingly. For the emphatic position of id, see on v. 20.

705. non enim possum quin exclamem...πάλι, 'I really can't help shouting out, "bravo, bravo, Lysiteles, encore".' Stasimus has been listening all this time. He now shews himself. He is naturally most anxious that Lesbonicus should not part with the land, for, if the land goes, exile is assured for him. Stepping forward, he compares the discussion between the two friends to a dramatic contest (ἀγών) and, constituting himself judge, awards the prize to Lysiteles and punishment to Lesbonicus.

The passage raises the question whether there were poetical contests and prizes at Rome. Passages like the Prologues to the Amph. and Poen. (Amph. 64 ff., Poen. 36 ff.) are slender evidence to go upon. On the whole, Mommsen is quite justified in arguing that, from the silence of Prologues and Didascalie, we must infer that there were no such contests. The allusion then belongs to the Greek original, and probably had no counterpart at Rome. This view is strengthened by v. 708, q. v.

non enim, 'really not,' 'indeed not,' enim is an asseverative particle as in at enim (v. 919), quia enim, nil enim, numquam enim, certe enim, immo enim, uerum enim, and enim uero (vv. 958, 987, 989). See on v. 61.

non possum quin. The impersonal non potest and potin ut=nonne potis est ut, v. 628, are used without fieri, hence non possum (nequeo) without facere. Eugē (εὐγε) and πάλι and Martial's sophōs (σοφῶς), like most exclamations used at entertainments, are borrowed from Greek, just as we borrow bravo, da capo, encore from Italian and French, and all our musical terms from Italian. On Greek words in Plautus, see v. 187.

706. hic uictust, 'Lesbonicus is beaten'—but in the next line hic is Lysiteles. In this line Lysiteles is directly addressed in the second person, and the change is rather abrupt, but, as with hic...hic Stasimus points to or touches the person meant, it would be clear enough on the stage.

707. agit, the composer and the actor are identified. In the early history of the Greek Drama the poet always played the leading part. ex argumento=ut argumento (ὡςπρόθεσει) conuenit, 'more in character.'

708. etiam ob stultitiam tuam te iuris multabo mina. Stasimus is addressing Lesbonicus. He has been so stupid to get such a beating that Stasimus, as κριτής, will fine him. But the reading is uncertain. B has curis, CD turis. Merula corrects etiam ob stultitiam tuam te tueris? multabo mina, 'do you actually defend yourself for your stupidity? I will fine you a mina,' tuëris being from tuor, the third conjug. form of tueor. But te is the object of multabo, any rebellion on Lesbonicus' part against the award of Stasimus has been confined to look or gesture, and the simple verb tueris is not very probable; contuor, intuor, obtuor are the compounds in use. Niemeyer suggests ted auri multabo mina, which gives good sense, but keeping closer to the MSS. reading, I propose te iuris multabo mina, 'I will fine you the legal penalty of a mina,' iuris mina = ἡ τῶν νόμων μνᾶ. Ladewig and Ritschl reject vv. 707, 708, but objection to them vanishes if the allusion is to some Greek system of fining bad actors. Roman actors were not fined till a later period (Tac. A. I. 17). In Plautus' time, as slaves, they were beaten if they acted badly, see v. 990 and the close of the Cistellaria, v. 784, ornamenta ponent ('take off their costumes'). postidea loci, qui deliquit uapulabit, qui non deliquit bibet. And so the close of the Asinaria, v. 946 nunc si uoltis deprecari huic seni (i.e. the actor who has played the old man's part) ne uapulet &c.

709. quid tibi interpellatio aut in consilium huc accessiost? Lesbonicus is angry at the intervention of Stasimus, all the more so as he has gone against his master. So he testily asks him 'what business he has to interfere?' By quid Lesbonicus means cur. But the imper-turbable Stasimus answers as if he had meant quo modo. Perhaps we may say, 'how came you to interfere' &c.

Quid tibi interpellatio est? is a well-known Plautine idiom by which, in this question *quid tibi (uobis)...*est only, the verbal substantive governs the same case as the verb itself, e.g. Amph. 519 quid tibi hanc curatiost rem aut muttitio? Asin. 920 quid tibi hunc receptio ad test meum uirum? Aul. 744 quid tibi ergo meam me inuito tactiost? Men. 1016 quid me uobis tactiost? Poen. 1308 quid tibi hanc digito tactiost? Rud. 502 quid mihi scelesto tibi erat auscultatio? Truc. 259 quid tibi ad hasce accessio aedis est prope aut pultatio?

710. eodem pacto quo huc accessi apscessero. As if Lesbonicus wanted to know how, not why, he interfered, Stasimus pertly answers, 'I will retire in the same way as I approached.' The logical answer would be, 'I came in the same way as I will go,' but the form is altered because Stasimus withdraws a few steps as he speaks. Eodem pacto = pedibus.

713. aequom censeo. See vv. 392 and 448.

714. neque tu hinc abituru's, 'and you don't intend to go into exile.' Cf. v. 701.

quod meum erit id erit tuom, 'all that is mine shall be thine,' the tense of the second erit, the principal verb, has affected the tense in the relative sentence by a kind of attraction.

715. bene quod agas eueniat tibi, 'may whatever you do end happily for you.' Quod agas, 'whatever you do,' indefinite, the wish for good-luck is perfectly general, whereas quod agis would refer to a definite line of action. Cf. Ter. Phorm. 552 di bene uortant quod agas: pede-temptim tamen. If this view is correct, it is unnecessary to explain agas as an attraction to the mood of eueniat.

Lysiteles wishes Lesbonicus well. But he can never be his friend save on the terms named. On that he is quite resolved (sic sententiast). It is his final verdict. The youths are both equally determined. They separate and go off, first Lesbonicus and then Lysiteles, in opposite directions. Stasimus is left alone.

717. abiit illequidem, 'Lesbonicus has gone.' The regular phrase is illic hinc abiit, here abiit must be purposely placed in the emphatic position.

ecquid audis? = 'listen to me.' Cf. Pers. 488, Amph. 577 &c. Ecquid in Plautus sinks to a mere conjunction, as Most. 906 ecquid placent? TH. ecquid placeant me rogas? Ego te uolo, 'I want you,' see on v. 516.

719. sarcinam constringam et clipeum ad dorsum accommodem, 'tie up a knapsack and fit a shield to my back,' for convenience in travelling.

720. fulmentas, properly 'supports,' here 'thick soles,' so as to turn his comic actor's shoes (socci) (cothurni of tragedy) into thick military boots, caligae. Cf. Bacch. 332 quine auro habeat soccis sup-pactum solum? 'do you mean the man who has a sole of gold fastened under his shoes?'

non sisti potest, 'it can't be stopped,' an impersonal expression common in Livy. It may have a double point here, and refer (1) to Stasimus' position, (2) to his shoes, which he shews. Translate 'things are past mending.'

721. uideo caculam militarem me futurum haud longius, 'I foresee that I shall soon be a soldier's servant.' haud longius, 'at no very distant date,' a litotes for breui. Cacula is explained by Festus, p. 45, as seruos militis. The word occurs Pseud. Arg. 4 uenientem caculam interuortit symbolo, where the first syllable is long. It is not likely to be short here cācūlam, more likely cac'lam, 'for cācula represents an earlier cacla, not cacola.' See Lindsay in Class. Rev. VI. 3, p. 89.

722. ut=ubi, at B, aut CD.

coniexit, fut. perf.—sigmatic aorist form coniec-sit. See on v. 60. The editors who give coniexit take it as perf. subj., i.e. as the optative, not the subj. of the sigmatic aorist. Leo reads ad aliquem regem in saginam erus sese coniciet meus. But if we read ut, 'when,' and take coniexit as fut. perf., i.e. take it as 3rd pers. from coniexo, like faxo, capso, accepso &c., not coniexim, the structure corresponds exactly with quom...sumpsero below.

in saginam, 'to be fattened,' for only poverty drove him to enlist.

723. fugitorem fore. The whole point of the line depends on the παρὰ προσδοκῶν ending. And so lines 724 and 726. 'I believe that compared with the mightiest warriors he will be first-rate—in flight'—fugitorem παρὰ προσδοκῶν for pugnatores, 'in flight' for 'in fight.' Not only Aristophanes and Plautus, but also Hood, Dickens and others depend largely on these unexpected turns for their effects. E.g. 'Twas there he left his second leg, And the Forty Second Foot.' 'Like an ardent warrior, Mr Pickwick sprang from his tent—bedstead.' There is an excellent example 'Love's Labour's Lost,' I. i. 230 ff. For other unexpected endings cf. v. 992, Asin. 42, 625, 886, Aul. 672, Bacch. 505, Curc. 562, Most. 253 and 1007, Truc. 348. ad, 'in comparison with,' as Capt. 275 (Thales) ad sapientiam huius nimius nugator fuit.

724. et capturum...uenerit, 'and will win spoils there—the man who confronts my master will.' Āduorsus as interpellatio v. 709, tabernaculo v. 726, sagittas v. 725.

726. dormibo placide in tabernaculo, 'when I have fully armed myself—I will sleep peacefully in my tent.' quom extemplo v. 242. Unless hiatus is allowed after placide, the line is a syllable short. Perhaps Ritschl's placidule should be read.

727. nudius sextus, 'now the sixth day' = 'five days ago.' Nudius is nū (vū) + dius, Ind.-Eur. d(i)yēus*, 'the sky,' 'day.' So nudius tertius, 'the day before yesterday,' nudius quartus, 'three days ago' &c.

728. reposcam, 'I will demand repayment from the man to whom, five days ago, I gave a friendly loan of a talent,' reposcam sc. eum, quoi &c. Dare mutuom, 'to give as a friendly loan,')(dare faenore, 'to lend at usury.'

uiaticum, ἐφόδια, 'travelling money.' All this is a bit of bounce.

Stasimus poses as a moneyed gentleman who can lend a friend a large sum—yet the land they are in danger of losing is all that keeps him and his master from starvation.

Exit Stasimus to the Forum, i.e. to the right.

SCENE 3 (729—819). The previous scene has shewn how great the difficulty about the dowry is. Now we are shewn how Callicles tries to surmount it. He has gone (v. 614) to consult Megaronides. They enter in conversation; Megaronides finally suggests getting a man to pretend he has come from Charmides, and thereby secretly conveying part of the hidden treasure as the girl's dowry. But this plan when put into execution (Act IV.) only complicates matters.

Metre—Iambic Trimeters.

730. prosus is to be taken with nullo modo. So Ter. Haut. 894 nihil prorsus, Cic. nat. deor. III. 8. 21 nullo modo prorsus assentior. On prosus for prorsus (pro-uorsus) see v. 182. Potest is scanned potēst, and fieri is not omitted as it is e.g. v. 628.

731. namque, 'no! for.' Namque is elliptic, '(you are right) for'—see on v. 61. Cf. v. 747.

733. quom is here followed by the subj., but it will be noticed that it follows another subj. See on v. 617. Cf. Bacch. 908 ut castigem, quom faciat, Mil. 1342 nequeo quin fleam, quom abs te abeam.

eius rem, 'property belonging to her,' viz. the treasure.

Ritschl assumes a gap here, containing lines spoken by Callicles to the effect—'What I don't know is whether to let the marriage go forward now or wait until Charmides returns.' But if we suppose that Megaronides continues almost without listening to what Callicles says, perhaps no gap need be assumed. And this is Leo's view.

735. nuptum conlocet, 'settle her in marriage,' like nuptum dare, &c. expectare ut, as Cic. Cat. II. 27, Rosc. Am. 82, Liv. XXIII. 31. 7, and manere ut, Stich. 58.

736. dare te ei dicas, 'tell him that you will give.' Dare=datum esse, see on v. 5.

739. te in crimen populo ponat, 'expose you to popular slander.'

740. non temere...benignum go together, 'they would say that you were not generous to the girl for nothing,' 'that you had good reason for your generosity.' Non temere, non forte, non frustra=ὀκ ἐτός, 'not for nothing.'

743. columem te sistere illi, 'that you did not pay her the dowry in full, as it was given you.' Columis, old Latin=incolumis.

detraхе, sigmatic aorist form=perf. infin. See on v. 188. Other corresponding forms are aduexe, illexe, despexe, circumspexe, adduxe, produxe (Ter. Ad. 561), surrexe (Hor. S. 1. 9. 73). et, where sed might be expected, after the negative neque, as Amph. 573 uerum haumentior, resque uti facta dico, 'but I am telling you, &c.'

744. Charmidi, gen. of the Greek name Charmides, the regular form in Plautus. So Achilli (Bacch. 938), Euripidi (Rud. 86), Herculi (Rud. 822), Philocrati (Capt. 528).

746. atque ea condicio huic uel primariast, 'and yet this is quite a first-rate match for her.' Atque, 'and yet,' as v. 910. Vel as a simple intensive is not common in Plautus.

747. nam, like namque v. 731.

748. utibile magis atque in rem, 'more expedient and advantageous.' For in rem see v. 238. Hoc is explained by ut in the next line, viz. 'that I should go, &c.'

750. sed nunc ego. This is the reading of A, and seems to be perfectly satisfactory. 'But am I now to disclose the existence of the treasure?' Nunc, at this time of day, when I have kept the secret from him so long. Callicles suggests a plan, only to dismiss it. Megaronides has done the same v. 738.

752. minume, minume hercle uero, 'certainly not, certainly not indeed.' But Spengel and Ussing are very likely right in dividing these words—ME. minume. CA. minume hercle uero, &c. Minume, more common than minumum, though there are superl. advs. in -um, as potissimum, and many positive advs., commodum, insanum, &c.

753. locum...comederit, a humorous exaggeration like v. 424.

754. quem, i.e. locum ubi thesaurus situs est. Fodere locum like fodere hortum Poen. 1020.

755. neu=et ne. Cf. Pseud. 322 ne illam uendas neu me perdas hominem amantem, where as here the second result is contingent on the first. The whole sentence is dependent on the 'if' clause. 'If I have told him that I will give a dowry his suspicions will be roused. I am afraid to dig the ground, lest he should overhear the sound, and so, being put upon the right track, should discover the treasure itself.' Neu co-ordinates the second clause with the first, when it ought strictly to be subordinated. If Lesbonicus discovered the treasure in his father's absence, he could legally demand it. See v. 1146.

dotem dare si dixerim. See on vv. 5 and 736.

756. quo pacto ergo igitur clam dos depromi potest? 'how then can a dowry be secretly taken from the treasure?' It appears that to give a dowry out of the treasure openly is impossible. Yet a dowry must be given. It must then be done secretly—the only question left is ‘how?’ Depromi, ‘unhoarded,’ taken out of the hiding-place. Cf. vv. 81 and 803.

ergo igitur is a comic pleonasm, found again Most. 847, like etiam quoque, tum postea, v. 770, and itaque ergo, ergo propterea in Terence. Apuleius, a regular imitator of Plautus, copies ergo igitur from him.

758. mutuom argentum rogem, ‘I could beg the money as a friendly loan.’ Mutuom as v. 727. Rogem potential, δανειζόμεν ἄν.

759. potin est ? = potestne ? See vv. 352 and 628.

760. gerrae, ‘stuff and nonsense’: gerrae (γέρρα), properly ‘things made of wattles,’ used as a synonym for what is worthless, Epid. 233 gerrae maxumae, Poen. 137 gerrae germanae, edepol λῆροι λῆροι meri. In the same sense nugae, logi (λόγοι), fabulae, somnia.

nē tu illud uerbum actutum inueneris, ‘you will certainly get at once (not the money, but) the speech.’ By telling Callicles the answer he will get if he applies to a friend, Megaronides very neatly lets him know that application to him is useless. And Callicles quite understands his meaning, v. 762.

761. mihi quidem hercle non est, &c., ‘I, I assure you, &c.’ The difficulty of getting a loan from one’s best friends who plead inability is often touched upon in Comedy, e.g. Pers. 5 fio miser quaerendo argento mutuo, nec quicquam nisi ‘non est’ sciunt mihi respondere quos rogo.

762. malim hercle ut uerum dicas, &c., ‘I would rather have you tell the truth than let me have the loan.’ Megaronides has quoted the reply Callicles is sure to get if he applies for a loan. Callicles replies in character as if to a friend who had refused him, ‘I see through your flimsy “non est”—it is not true.’

763. sed, breaking off, as v. 16. The conversation is becoming too personal. Megaronides goes back to the safer subject of his plan.

764. scitum, ‘neat,’ ‘clever.’ quid est ? See on v. 630.

765. quantum potest, ‘as soon as possible.’ Quantum potest in Plautus always refers to time, never to extent. Thus Asin. 157 quantum poteris, ‘as fast as you can,’ ibid. 607 quantum potest, Men. 435, &c.

766. quasi sit peregrinus, &c. A post-Plautine line, intended to be substituted for the four following lines.

768. ignota facie, quae hic non uisitata sit, ‘a man whose appearance is not known, because it has not been seen about here.’ Facies, ‘outward appearance’ generally, as v. 852. Cf. Pseud. 727 qui hic non uisitatus saepe sit, whence hic was restored here.

769. mendaciloquom aliquem oportet hominem deligi, 'some fellow with a lying tongue must be picked for the purpose.' Mendaciloquom, see v. 200. The line is given in A only, and by confusion on a scribe's part with the interpolated line v. 766 he has written in here also, after mendaciloquom aliquem, CA. quid is scit facere postea? Whatever these words have ousted, there must have been a word like oportet to be followed by an infin. and the accs. mendaciloquom, &c. Oportet may be regarded as certain. Oportet hominem deligi is the supplement suggested by Leo. Ritschl suggested—to much the same purport—esse hominem oportet de foro. For de foro cf. v. 815.

770. confidentem, 'an impudent fellow.' See on confidentiloquius, v. 201.

(767) is homo exornetur graphice in peregrinum modum, 'let this fellow be got up perfectly in foreign fashion.' With the transposition of this line from 767 to this place the passage runs smoothly. First the man's appearance is described v. 768, then his character v. 769. Next, the person being chosen, he is to be dressed for his part and instructed what he is to do. Exornare is the technical word used of dressing up actors for their part.

graphice, a pseudo-Greek adv., with a Latin termination like those quoted on v. 625, from graphicus (γραφικός). Graphicus means as like as a picture is like its original. So v. 936 graphicum nugatorem, 'a perfect picture of a humbug,' 'the beau idéal of a humbug,' v. 1024 graphicum furem, 'a living picture of a thief,' v. 1139 pergraphicus sycophanta, Epid. 410 seruom graphicum, 'an ideal slave,' Stich. 570 graphicum mortalem, 'a picture of a man.' The adv. graphice, Pers. 306 nunc ego huic graphice facetus fiam. So here graphice is dressed precisely as a foreigner ought to be dressed, so as to make him a living picture of a foreigner; perhaps tout-à-fait will render the adverb.

771. ex Seleucia, see v. 112.

772. uerbis patris, 'in his father's name,' 'from his father.'

773. illum bene gerere rem, &c. Oratio obliqua after nuntiet. 'Tell him that his father is doing well, &c.' Illum here and eum in the next line both refer to the same person. Thus the pronoun is repeated in a different form, vv. 741, 742, ei...illi both referring to uirgini, Asin. 527 illos qui dant, eos derides, Epid. 51 quid istanc quam emit? quanti eam emit?

776. illi = Lesbonico. Hiatus at the caesura is legitimate, and it is unnecessary to change illi to illic.

777. perge porro dicere. See on v. 162.

780. tenes? in the same sense as teneo v. 667.

propemodum. The MSS., except F, give propemodo. But this later form is not used by Plautus. See on v. 615.

781. tum igitur, see v. 676. demum dabis, ubi, 'you will at last give, when' = 'you will only give when.' The old form demus is not needed here, as hiatus is permissible after tu, see Introduction, p. xxii.

783. scite, as scitum v. 764. hoc, abl. 'thereby,' 'by doing this.'

784. suspicionem ab adolescente amoueris, 'you will remove suspicion from the young fellow,' i.e. prevent Lesbonicus from becoming suspicious.

787. hoc aetatis, 'although at my age I am ashamed to act the sharper,' 'to play the part of a sycophant,' by so deceiving Lesbonicus. hoc is adv. acc. of limitation and aetatis partitive gen. Cf. id aetatis (Asin. 71), illuc aetatis (Mil. 659), istuc aetatis (Mil. 618), quid tibi ego aetatis uideor? (Merc. 290), scio ego quid sim aetatis (Pers. 276), nemo id auctoritatis aderat (Tac. Ann. XII. 18). So hoc noctis, id temporis, &c.

788 b. A manifest dittographia of 788 a.

789. nonne arbitraris eum adolescentem anuli paterni signum nosse? The connexion with what precedes is loose. The sentence begins, 'but when the hired fellow shall bring the letters signed and sealed.' It should continue, 'how is he to convince Lesbonicus that they are genuine?' or 'he will be unable to prove their genuineness.' Instead of this there is a direct question addressed to Megaronides, 'don't you think Lesbonicus knows the seal (the impress) of his father's ring?' Nonne is unusual in Plautus, it is used for non, like anne for an, only before vowels. Spengel would write non in all places. Nonne for non, arbitraris instead of the common arbitrare, nosse in place of the more usual nouisse, though each separately is defensible, are all three together rather curious.

790. etiam tu taces? 'will you hold your tongue?' See on v. 514. Megaronides is impatient with Callicles for raising a difficulty which can so easily be overcome.

791. sescentae, 'any number of excuses can be got together to meet that difficulty.' Sescenti -ae -a, declined as a plur. adj. as dūcenti, trēcenti, is for se(c)s-centi* like disco for di(c)s-co*, see Lindsay, L. L. p. 310. Sescenti is regularly used in Latin for an indefinitely large number, Aul. 320 sescenta sunt quae memorem, si sit otium, Bacch. 1034 sescenta tanta reddam, si uiuo, tibi, Pseud. 632 quasi mihi non sescenta tanta soli soleant credier. Less often trecenti is used in this sense, as v. 964, Mil. 250, Pers. 410 and 668, or ducenti, as Truc. 341. 'Three' is commonly used for a very small number, as v. 963 te tribus uerbis uolo, 'just a word with you.'

792. illum quem habuit perdidit, alium post fecit nouom. This is intended as a specimen of the excuses that might be invented. 'He lost the ring he had, he got another, a new one, made afterwards.' But as it stands it is a 'monstrous' line. If with Niemeyer we substitute periit for perdidit, so that illum quem habuit periit is an attraction like v. 985, a better line is got. But probably someone has been shewing his ingenuity by inventing specimen excuses, and the line should be cut out. Iam in v. 793 then has its proper force and place.

793. iam, 'further.' Iam carries the argument a step forward. There is no difficulty about the seal, the letters need not be sealed.

794. apud portitores, 'that his letters have been opened (unsealed) and examined in the Customs.' Portitores is Valla's correction to make this verse accord with v. 810. The portitores were what we should call Custom-House officers who collected the portorium, 'harbour duty,' v. 1107, from all arrivals. They could examine goods and open letters. The officers in the original were the πεντηκοστολόγοι, so called because they levied a duty of 2 p.c. i.e. $\frac{2}{100}$ on all imported goods.

sibi, ethic dat.—here dat. incommodi—not ei because the Sycophant may be regarded as the logical subject of dici hoc potest.

796. segnitie merast, 'a mere doing nothing,' 'a pure waste of time.' Cf. Capt. 396 quae memini, mora merast monerier.

797. quamuis sermones possunt longi texier, 'a tissue of talk can be woven as long as you please.' Quamuis with longi, see on v. 380. With texier cf. μύθους ὑφαλπειν, Hom. Il. III. 212.

798. confestim, an acc. sing. adv. from the root festi*, of which the verb festino indicates a by-form. Lindsay, L. L. p. 556. Clanculum is apparently a diminutive of clam. The form is comic, and Terence uses it as a preposition (Ad. 52 clanculum patres) governing the acc., as clam always does in Plautus and Terence. It is doubtful whether clam ever governs the abl. See Langen, Beiträge p. 229. Clam is originally an acc. sing. fem. adj. like coram, palam, perperam, promiscam.

799. ancillas, 'maid-servants,' 'handmaidens,' is commonly used as the fem. of seruos.

800. eampse=ipsam. So vv. 950 eumpse, 974 eapse. Ipse is is-pse* and occasionally both elements of the compound are declined according to the MSS. of Plautus. Thus Cas. 602 eapsa A, Pseud. 833 caepsae A, Truc. 114 eum ipsum A, umsum BCD i.e. eumpsum. The first element only is declined in the forms here, and also eumpse Pers. 603, eampse Poen. 272 &c. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 441.

802. quin tu hinc amoues et te moues? 'why don't you move and remove yourself from here?' Comedy is fond of giving emphasis by repetition, e.g. v. 130. But there does not seem to be much point in the repetition here. Perhaps moues was a gloss on amoues or vice versa. Leo suggests quin tu hinc abis et thesaurum moues? That would give inde an antecedent which otherwise is some way off. Mouere=κινεῖν is appropriate for 'disturbing' a hoarded treasure, e.g. Hor. C. III. 21. 6.

803. auri ad hanc rem quod sat est, i.e. quod auri sat est ad hanc rem. Deprome as v. 756. The gold is to be taken out that it may be in readiness when the Sycophant has accomplished his errand with the letters.

806. at enim, see on v. 705.

807. diem conficimus, quom iam properatost opus, 'we are wasting the whole day, when we ought to get to work at once.' Quom is probably a true correction for quod. The sense is not 'we are spending the whole day on a matter where we want haste,' but 'at a time when we want haste.' On the construction of opus see v. 584.

808. me uide, 'trust me.' A phrase regularly used to reassure, whereas specta me is used in bragging and threatening. Cf. Rud. 680 me uide, and see Langen, Beiträge, p. 276.

809. dicere, infin. in apposition to illa causa.

810. portitores, v. 794.

811. quid illum putas? an elliptic colloquial question in which dicere or facere, here facere, must be supplied according to the context. So Bacch. 208 ut eam credis? Curc. 59 ut illam censes? Merc. 352 quemadmodum existimet me?

813. quiduis probare poterit, 'he will be able to make Lesbonicus believe anything.' The subject to poterit &c. is Sycophanta, named in the next line hic, and suggested by dicere v. 809.

815. de foro, the haunt of loafers waiting for a job.

816. Bracketed by Ritschl and not wanted. It is easily made up from v. 775 and v. 788.

817. meditatum probe, 'well-drilled in his part.' Meditatum, pass. as Epid. 375 eam permeditatum meis dolis...mittam, Mil. 903 probe mediatam utramque duco.

819. actum reddam nugacissume, 'I'll do the job and fool him utterly.' Nugacissume=cum maximis nugis. Actum reddam like reddere transactum, perfectum, effectum, inuentum, inpetratum &c., and the same construction with dare and facere. Exeunt, Callicles to his house, Megaronides to the Forum.

ACT IV. (820—1114). Callicles' position has been made much more difficult by the proposal for his ward's hand, and the question how to provide a dowry for her without revealing the existence of the treasure—first complication. To obviate this difficulty a Sycophant is hired to say that he comes from Charmides with letters and money. But Charmides returns unexpectedly at this moment, and encounters the Sycophant, who does not know him, outside his own house, when a ludicrous scene takes place. Thus the mission of the Sycophant makes things worse—second complication. Even Charmides is now uneasy about the action of Callicles, and his suspicions are pointed by a chance meeting with Stasimus. Only at the end of the Act does he see Callicles and the disentanglement (euolutio) begin.

SCENE I (820—842). Charmides returns from abroad by the entrance from the harbour (left). He is dressed in travelling costume (χλαμύς and πέρασος) and returns thanks to Neptune for his safety. These thanksgivings on safe return are a burlesque of the tragic use. Compare with this the thanksgivings Capt. 922, Mil. 411, Most. 431, Pers. 753, Rud. 906, Stich. 402.

Metre: Anapaestic Tetrameters—the last four half-lines Anapaestic Dimeters.

820. salsipotentī et multipotentī, 'to Neptune mighty lord of the salt sea.' Buecheler followed by Leo changes multipotentī to multisipotentī (cf. Rud. 588, Pseud. 739). This is tempting, but as Plautus uses the word multipotens elsewhere, e.g. Bacch. 652, the change is at least not necessary. Cf. uiripotens Pers. 252, caelipotens Pers. 755.

aetherei. Scaliger's correction of et Nerei. Iuppiter aetherius=Homer's Ζεὺς αἰθέρι valwv.

821. laetus lubens laudes ago et grates, 'joyous and joyful I render praises and thanks.' The pleonastic redundancy is meant to express the heartiness of Charmides' thankfulness, for which no words are sufficient. Laetus lubens, asyndeton as vv. 243, 302, and there is also triple alliteration with l and double with g. Grates, commonly of thanks to the gods, gratias to men. Cf. Mil. 411 Ephesiae Dianae laeta laudes gratesque agam.

gratiasque habeo et fluctibus salsis, 'and I feel gratitude also to the salt waves.' Et unites the waves with Neptune, salsis corresponds with salsipotenti, 'to the salt waves as well as to the lord of the salt sea.' gratias is a dissyllable by synizesis. So gloriam v. 828, otio v. 838, filio v. 839. Gratias habeo, not the usual gratiam (see v. 659) in such thanksgivings, and the plur. here is perhaps partly due to the plur. laudes, grates. Cf. Asin. 545 Perfidiae laudes gratiasque habemus merito magnas.

822. quos penes mei fuit summa potestas, 'who had in their hands complete power over me.' Quos refers to Neptuno as well as fluctibus. Quos penes, anastrophe of preposition as v. 1146, which is most usual with dissyllabic prepositions erga, inter, penes and especially propter.

quid foret, 'what was to become of.' For the two possible constructions, dat. and abl., see v. 157. The whole clause is epexegetic of mei summa potestas.

823. quom in an expression of thanks has both temporal and causal force, it explains both the time and the reason for the thankfulness. Cf. Most. 431 habeo, Neptune, gratiam magnam tibi, quom med amisisti abs te, Rud. 906 Neptuno has ago gratias meo patrono, ... quom me ex suis locis pulchre ornatum expedit, which also illustrates suis ex locis here.

After patriam the MSS. give urbis cumam (B cumam): urbem sic columem is conjectural, 'because they now bring me back thus safe to the city of my fathers.' For columem see v. 743. Other conjectures are in patriam urbem incolumem and Leo's in patriam suauissimam.

824. atque, 'and indeed,' ante=praeter, 'beyond,' here and Asin. 858 scito illum ante omnes minumi mortalem preti.

825. audis moribus, because the sea swallows all it can.

826. spurcificum, 'filthy in thy ways,' ἀπαξ εἰρημένον on the analogy of spurcificus.

ego contra operā expertus, sc. sum (see on v. 535), 'I have found you by experience just the opposite.' So Bacch. 387 id opera expertus sum esse ita. Contrā (properly contrā abl. fem. of an A-stem) is an adv., not a prep., in Plautus and Terence.

827. placido te et clementi meo usque modo, ut uolui, usus sum in alto, 'I on the deep found you ever mild and merciful, just as I would have you be.' Others for meo read eo modo ut uolui=eo modo quo uolui, like Capt. 778 eodem pacto ut comici serui solent. Utor followed by the abl. See on v. 1.

828. atque &c., 'and yet with my ears this was the report of you I had before heard—'tis well known among men.' The last clause is parenthetical, gloriam is explained by v. 829. Auribus is not otiose but points the contrast opera expertus (auribus acceperam).

829. diuites damnare atque domare, as a judge passing sentence on them and humbling their pride. Charmides was returning rich, therefore if Neptune had been true to his reputation he could not hope for mercy. But he found the reputation was not true, and therefore praises Neptune.

The fragment that follows v. 830 has no place here, for Charmides is not poor or a beggar, 'mendicis cur se adnumeret nulla causa.'

830. abi, laudo, 'get along, I praise you.' Abi is usually an expression of dissatisfaction and blame, as Mil. 291 abi, non uerisimile dicis, 'come! come! what you say is improbable,' ibid. 324 abi, ludis me, 'come! come! you're making fun of me.' But in places abi is 'uerbum cum laudatione blandientis,' as Asin. 704 em sic: abi, laudo, Ter. Ad. 564 laudo, Ctesipho, patrissas: abi, uirum te iudico, where Donatus explains, quasi dicat, 'non est cur te morer.'

ordine, ut aequomst, 'you know how to treat people according to their station, as is right.' That is to say, you do not diuites damnas atque domas, but treat each with the respect that is his due. Scis tractare, like Pers. 762 beneficium scit accipere et reddere nescit.

832. fidus fuisti: infidum esse iterant. These are contrasted clauses,—see on v. 292—'you have been faithful (to me), though people declare that you are faithless.'

apsque foret te, 'had it not been for you.' Absque is used by Plautus and Terence so as to imply a conditional clause = si sine te, and the verb esset or foret is impersonal, so that absque te foret = si tu non esses. So Bacch. 412, Capt. 754, Men. 1022, Pers. 836 &c. Absque is revived by Silver-age writers and used without a verb, so that absque me = sine me.

833. disque tulissent = distulissentque, the prep. is separated from its verb by tmesis, as in ob uos sacro = obsecro uos. This is a feature of the older stage of every language. See Lindsay, L. L. p. 573, who quotes 'sub uos placo,' the archaic phrase for supplico retained in Latin prayers; transque dato and endoque plorato, legal archaisms for traditoque and imploratoque.

satellites. Neptune's 'myrmidons' or 'ministering spirits' are the winds and storms. Satëllitēs, the first shortening like sagittas v. 725, the second like turbinēs v. 835.

835. quasi canes, haud secus, comic pleonasm, as Amph. 1078 nec secus, quasi si &c.

turbines uenti. Cf. Curc. 647 exoritur uentus turbo.

836. mālum, note the quantity.

837. ruere, trans. 'make fall.' The word is transitive in poetry, e.g. in Lucretius and Vergil, but the only other place in Comedy where it is transitive appears to be Ter. Ad. 319 ceteros ruerem.

antennas from ἀνταίω, 'yard-arms': mn in Latin mainly in these 'participial' forms, Auctumnus, Vertumnus, alumnus, aerumna, damnum &c.

The period is a long one. It begins with an 'if' clause, absque foret te=si sine te foret, then follows the apodosis distraxissent &c. The reason for the statement is given in ita &c. (which might be replaced by a nam clause), and ita is followed first by descriptive imperf., then by hist. infin. Finally, to couple the whole period more closely together, the original protasis is repeated in a different and fuller form—ni tua pax propitia foret praesto is absque foret te 'writ large.' Cf. the period Pers. 836—840.

838. apage v. 258, certumst v. 270. Dehinc monosyllabic by synizesis, as always in Plautus. But the synizesis in filio otio and other licenses of this Canticum would not be permitted in ordinary Iambic or Trochaic lines.

839. quibus aerumnis deluctaui, i.e. satis partum habeo eis aerumnis quibus deluctaui, the demonstrative being omitted before the relative as Pers. 182 eius auris, quae mandata sunt, onerabo=onerabo eius auris eis, quae mandata sunt.

840. sed quis hic est? Charmides here catches sight of the Sycophant coming from the Forum (right) into the street in front of his house 'with strange get-up and appearance.' simul, 'at the same time as I do'—the two enter the space in front of the house together.

841. domi cupio=οἴκου ἐπιθυμῶ, cupio constructed like cupiens sum, 'I am desirous of.' So Mil. 964 quae cupiunt tui.

The Sycophant does not see Charmides, who watches him, till v. 871.

SCENE 2 (843—997). Enter the Sycophant, disguised as a foreigner. Charmides watches the Sycophant, then v. 871 he shews himself, draws from the fellow his absurd story, and finally reveals himself. This is the most strictly comic scene in the play.

Metre: Septenarian Trochaics.

843. huic ego die nomen Trinummo facio, 'I name this day Three Florins,' as if he kept a calendar where he would enter it so. Die dat., see on v. 117; on the construction nomen Trinummo facio see on v. 8.

Nummus in Plautus when it is used without an adj. (aureus, Philippus), where it refers to a definite coin, is certainly a didrachmon, a two-drachm piece. See Truc. 562 where quinque nummi = $\frac{1}{10}$ of a mina, i.e. 10 drachmae, whence nummus = 2 drachmae. And this is certainly the regular meaning of nummus in Plautus—in Terence it is used for 'a drachma.' But there are passages where the word appears to be used simply in the sense of 'a coin.' Thus Capt. 331 eum si reddis mihi, praeterea unum nummum ne duis, Epid. 330 (amicis) nummum nullum habes, Pseud. 1323 hinc numquam eris nummo ditior, in all of which we should say 'a brass farthing' or 'a cent.' The as and the denarius are mentioned neither in Plautus nor Terence, and we must think only of Greek coins. Brix and others argue that three two-drachm pieces is an incredibly large sum for the Sycophant to have received for so easy a task as delivering two forged letters. They compare Most. 357 ubi sunt ... isti qui hosticas trium nummum causa subeunt sub falas? which depreciates the sum whatever it is. But the task, if easy, was confidential, and the Sycophant had to be paid for his silence. He is evidently hugely delighted with his luck. He speaks contemptuously of the sum of course, 'tribus nummis' 'a piece or two'—see on v. 791. But in view of the necessity of purchasing his silence and his evident delight, I do not think six drachmae an incredible sum, and would give nummus its ordinary Plautine meaning. Ussing argues from the singular Trinummo that a single coin is meant equivalent in value to the tribus nummis of the next line. He thinks an Attic tetradrachmon, which weighed almost as much as three staters, may be meant. If Ussing is right, as I think he is, in his idea that Trinummus is one piece of money equivalent to the très nummi of the next line, there are great difficulties in the way of translating 'three cents' or the like. And in any case the contemptuous depreciation lies in tribus, not in nummis. The Sycophant 'has hired out his services to lie and swindle 'for just one or two pieces,' 'mere three, only three pieces,' not for 'three paltry pieces.' The nummi may be valuable coin, only it is a pity he has not got more of them.

844. nugatorias, A naugatorias i.e. naugatorias, see on v. 396.

845. ex Seleucia, this he had been told, see on v. 112—the other places he gives de suo, arranged anyhow, like 'Jerusalem and Madagascar, And North and South Amerikee' in 'Little Billee.'

846. neque oculis neque pedibus umquam usurpauī meis, 'I never set eyes or foot upon.' Cf. Pers. 736 pol istuc quidem omen iam ego usurpabo domi, Lucr. I. 301 nec frigora quimus usurpare oculis.

847. egestas quid negoti dat homini misero mali, i.e. quid mali negoti egestas dat homini misero. So Most. 531 quid ego hodie negoti confeci mali!

850. neque, natus necne is fuerit, id solide scio=neque solide scio (utrum) is natus fuerit necne, 'nor am I thoroughly aware whether he exists or not.' Notice the alliteration with n. Solide, as v. 892. Id, used to sum up the contents of the preceding clause, as very often.

851. Pol hicquidem fungino generest, 'is of the mushroom order,' in allusion to his broad Macedonian travelling hat (causia). See Mil. 1178 where it is used like our 'sou'-wester.' Hence he is said 'to cover his whole person with his head' (i.e. his hat).

852. Hilurica facies uidetur hominis, 'the outward appearance of the fellow seems to be Illyrian,' i.e. 'outwardly he looks like an Illyrian.' Facies as v. 768. Hilurica, the aspirate and the first syllable short as Men. 235 where Histros is also aspirated. For h in Latin see Lindsay, L. L. p. 53 ff.

eo ornatu=Hilurico ornatu, 'he comes dressed as one.'

854. praemonstrauit, as v. 342.

855. quo modo quidque agerem, as Pseud. 675 quo modo quidque agerem...cuncta in ordine...certa deformata habebam. nunc adeo, see on v. 141.

856. eo conductor melius de me nugas concillauerit, 'my hirer will have purchased my swindling so much (eo) the more cheaply from me.' The more I swindle, the better bargain he has. If I throw in the making off with the costume, I shall be giving him so much more than he stipulated for, and he will get so much more for his money. Conciliare=emere, bene emere='to buy cheap,' male emere, 'to buy dear.' Hence Epid. 472 concilianisti pulchre=bene emisti, 'you've got her cheap,' Pers. 538 ut tibi recte conciliandi primo facerem copiam, 'of purchasing cheaply.'

857. argentum hoc facit, 'money is responsible for this,' i.e. for my being dressed out as I am, all trium nummum causa.

858. ornamenta a chorago, 'he got this costume from the costumier, the stage-property man, at his own risk.' The Roman choragus was quite distinct from the Greek χορηγός. He kept theatrical costumes (ornamenta) and properties, and hired them out to individuals, or to the aediles for the scenic ludi. Thus Pseud. 1184 ff. chlamydem hanc commemoram quanti conductast?—quid meret machaera?='earn for its owner'—quid mercedis petasus hodie domino demeret? Pers. 159, S. πῶθεν ornamenta? T. abs chorago sumito; dare debet: praebenda aediles locauerunt, Curc. 464 where a choragus is afraid he will never recover the ornamenta lent to a nugator. So choragium Capt. 61 is 'stage-properties,' 'wardrobe.' suo periculo, so that he will have to replace the costume if the Sycophant fails to return it.

859. circumducere, 'to swindle.' So v. 959; see on v. 616. All the verbs there mentioned are synonyms of spoliare aliquem aliquo, and take the same construction.

860. dabo operam...sentiat, 'I shall be doing my best to make him see that I by myself really am a sycophant,' me ipsum, 'in and by myself,' without any instructions from him (v. 854) how to play the part.

861. quam magis specto, minus placet=quo magis specto, eo minus placet. Cf. Asin. 158 quam magis...tam, Bacch. 1076 quam magis...magis, Men. 95 quam magis...tanto. Plautus does not use quo—eo.

mira sunt ni and mirum est ni with indic. and not ironical, see on v. 495, 'it is a wonder...if not'='I am pretty sure...is.'

862. dormitator here and v. 984 is taken to mean 'thief,' a man who sleeps by day that he may wake by night. Cf. Hesiod, Works 605 μή ποτε σ' ἡμερόκοιτος ἀνὴρ ἀπὸ χρήμαθ' ἔλοιτο.

sector zonarius, βαλαντιοτόμος, 'cut-purse'; 'qui zonas nummorum plenas secat.' Zonarius should be spelt sonarius (see on v. 425), as z was not in use in Plautus' day. But the MSS. often reflect the spelling of a later date, as in trapezitae v. 425, Syrorum v. 542 &c.

863. contemplat, non-deponent, see on v. 422: circumspectat se v. 146. Noscitat, 'is taking stock of.'

864. quo mox furatum ueniat, 'he is reconnoitring the locality, that he may come to steal later on.' Cf. Rud. 111 an quo furatum uenias, uestigas loca?, ibid. 417 accipiam hospitio, si mox uenies uesperis.

865. magis, sc. quam antea, see v. 841. lubidost=lubet as v. 626.

866. regiones, 'quarter.'

868. habet rectam uiam, 'he is making straight for.' So Mil. 491, Pseud. 1136.

869. agitandumst uigilias, 'on my arrival at home I shall have to keep watch to-night.' This gerund construction is usual in early and some very late writers. Similarly Lucretius' aeternas quoniam poenas in morte timendumst, and even with verbs which do not take an acc. as imperandum est seruis. In the classical period the gerundive is preferred when the verb governs an acc., e.g. Caesar and Cicero would say agitandae sunt uigiliae, but if the verb does not take an acc. imperandum est seruis &c. as in the early period. See Roby, L. G. II. p. lxi. ff., Madvig, L. G. 421. 2^b.

870. aperite hoc, 'open here.' With hoc supply ostium, as v. 1174, Pseud. 1139 ecquis hoc aperit? Rud. 413 ecquis hoc recludit? &c.

tutelam gerit? So Truc. 255 ecquis huic tutelam gerit ianuae? and more simply Men. 673 heus, ecquis hic est ianitor? When the Sycophant knocks at the door, Charmides shews himself and questions him.

871. istas, sc. fores from foribus above.

872. census quom sum, iuratori recte rationem dedi, 'when I was assessed, I made a correct return to the assessor.' The Sycophant is annoyed at the questions suddenly sprung upon him. He says in effect that he is a free citizen and he has answered all questions to those who were entitled to ask them. Nevertheless he does explain his business. Iuratores, assistants of the censor in taking the census of citizens. Cf. Poen. Prol. 55 ff. nunc rationes ceteras | accipite: nam argumentum hoc hic censebitur...uos iuratores estis.

873. hic belongs rather to in his regionibus ubi habitat than to quaero. Cf. Mil. 1258 nescio ubi hic prope adest, 'somewhere or other here,' and ubi hic 'whereabouts here,' frequently.

874. ad istanc capitis albitudinem, 'approximating to your whiteness of head,' 'about as white-headed as you are.' Ad = 'approximating to' as Merc. 427 (ancillam) ad istam faciem, hence its use like παρά and πρός in the sense 'in comparison with,' as v. 723, and in statements of number, amount &c. as v. 152.

878. hisce, as nom. plur., a form expressly attested by Priscian, is like the nom. plur. eis due to the addition of the plur. suffix s to the already formed plur. hei, hi, i.e. these plurals were formed on the analogy of I-stems. The form occurs before vowels Mil. 374 and 1334, Pers. 856, Pseud. 539, Rud. 294 &c., and in a number of inscriptions from Capua (C. I. L. I. 565—569) which give heisce magistrei and heisce magistréis as nom. plur. See Müller, Handbuch II². p. 333 and cf. the dat. plur. hibus (Curc. 506) and ibus (Mil. 74).

pater is a respectful address of an old man by a young one, as mater of an old woman by a young woman. Hence Hor. Epist. I. 6. 54 frater, pater adde.

880. expediam, 'explain.'

881. unum quidquid = unum quidque, for quidquid is common in old Latin, and found occasionally up to Cicero's time without relative force. See Madvig on Cic. de Fin. v. 9. 24.

882. faxo scias, see on v. 60.

884. magnum facinus incipissis petere, 'a superhuman task,' 'something of exceeding difficulty,' more grandiloquent than the usual magna res. Cf. Mil. 228 magnum illic homo rem incipissit.

885. si ante lucem ire hercle occipias a meo primo nomine, 'I assure you that if you were to start before dawn on your journey from the beginning of my name &c.' There is gap with space for six letters before ire in B. I have provisionally inserted Ritschl's hercle after ire, which is at least idiomatic, for the asseveration gets into the si clause, see on v. 457, but usually comes immediately after si. Niemeyer writes biti in place of ire, but common as are perbitere, interbitere, adbitere, abitere, rebitere, we want evidence for a deponent form bitor. Prof. Palmer suggests ire itere, 'to go on a journey.' A meo primo nomine, 'from the beginning of,' like prima uespera Curc. 4, primulo diluculo Amph. 737, prima uia Mil. 253, digitulis primoribus Poen. 566 &c. And so ad postremum, 'to the end of it.'

concubium sit noctis, 'the dead of night.' Varro, L. L. VII. 78 concubium a concubitu dormiendi causa dictum.

887. opus factost uiatico, 'one must get travelling-money for your name.' Charmides enters into the Sycophant's humour. But facto is probably not right: opus est uiatico is the regular idiom, and if anything is added it should be an adj. with the meaning of magno, as Wagner suggests, such as firmiter, forti, or a participial adj. like parto.

888. iuxillum B, uixillum CD, uasculum FZ. The latter is often adopted, where uasculum uinariū means 'a little wine-glass,' uinariū being an adj. Another reading is uesculum uinariū, where uesculum is ἄπαξ εἰρημένον, a diminutive of uescus 'thin,' and uinariū is used as a noun, as it is Poen. 838, 'a thin wine-jug.' But these readings do not account for the reading of the better mss. The best suggestion is Ussing's, who proposes uexillum uinariū, 'a wine-label' or 'ticket.' The notae put on the casks might very well have had the shape of a uexillum, and so get the name. And they would only contain a few letters to indicate the wine contained in the cask, like the sillybi of books and our decanter-labels with their S. W., I. W. and so on. These abbreviated descriptions would stand to the full title in the same relation as the Sycophant's short name to his full name. Leo's note is fortasse cogitari potest de 'uix' quasi nomine deminuto ('nagelprobe'), which is perhaps right.

889. quid est tibi nomen? 'what is your name?' We should expect quid id (istuc) est nomen? without tibi, 'what is that name, the name you are speaking about?'; but the answer id est nomen mihi shews that Charmides asks simply quid est tibi nomen? If mihi stands in the reply there is no reason for doubting tibi in the question. But possibly Leo is right in thinking that this verse was framed as a substitute for vv. 883—888.

Pax, id est nomen mihi. Pax is 'particula silentium imponentis,' as Ter. Haut. 717 unus est dies, dum argentum eripio: pax: nil amplius, 'say no more,' 'enough,' 'basta,' and so Mil. 808 Pax, abi, 'basta, off with you.' The interjection is Greek, and is explained by Hesychius $\pi\acute{\alpha}\xi=\tau\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omicron\varsigma \ \xi\chi\epsilon\iota$. As Leo says it is 'aptum nomen quod in utraque lingua abrumpendo sermoni adhibeatur.' The name seems to be intended to shew that its owner will not stop to argue or listen to reason, and so Charmides calls it 'a swindling name.' Perhaps we may translate 'Basta,'—'that is my name.' Niemeyer gives Prax from Pseud. 1279.

891. quasi dicas, siquid crediderim tibi, pax—perlisce ilico, 'as if you were to say, supposing I had entrusted anything to you, 'basta'—that it had vanished forthwith.' Quasi dicas, a regular formula used to introduce a comment or explanation of a former speaker's words, as Curc. 78, Pseud. 609 and 634, Rud. 99. Illico, temporal, see on v. 608.

892. hic homo solide sycophantast, an aside. Solide, 'thoroughly,' 'an out and out,' as vv. 850 and 860.

quid ais tu? the regular formula to attract a person's attention—a preliminary question to call attention to the main question which follows. See on v. 193, where just as here the intended question is postponed for the moment by the counter-question quid est?

893. isti tibi quid homines debent? 'what claim have you on those people?' 'what business have you with those people?' So Mil. 421 quid tibi in istis aedibus debetur? Pseud. 1139 heus chlamydate, quid istic debetur tibi? Rud. 117, Truc. 262.

895. manifestarium = manifestum = ἐπ' αὐτοφώρῳ. Manifestus is the early, manifestus the classical spelling.

897. ita ut occepi, si animum aduortas, dicam. A gap is commonly marked before this line, on the assumption that a question of Charmides must precede si animum aduortas, dicam, as a question precedes si animum aduortes, eloquar, v. 939. But it seems necessary to assume no gap. Charmides is delivering his 'aside' for the benefit of the audience, Stasimus sees that he is not attending to him, and wakes him up with 'as I began (which he did, v. 894), if you would attend, I would tell you.' Ita ut occipi is a standing formula for resumption after a break or interruption, and Charmides' aside is such an interruption here.

901. ubi ipse erat? 'Cf. v. 928. qui uersum inseruit, hoc eo consilio fecisse uidetur, ut deinde vv. 928—949 omitti possent. Cf. Teuffelius, Mus. Rhen. 30. 632.' Leo.

903. sesquipede quidamst quam tu longior, 'he is a man a foot and a half taller than you are.' Sesquē, 'one and a half,' is sēmī*-que, with the same syncope as in sestertius for semis-tertius, 'two and a half.'

904. haeret haec res, 'here's a puzzler.' So Amph. 814 and Pseud. 985, of something that does not square with the facts, and therefore does not admit of an explanation.

905. quicum. MSS. quocum, but quicum is Plautus' invariable usage. Quicum is relative and interrogative, masc. and fem., sing. and plur. Thus v. 15 it is rel. fem. sing., v. 953 as here, rel. masc. sing. It is interrogative masc. Men. 369; fem. Epid. 218 and 241. It is relative plur. Capt. 1003 aut anites aut coturnices dantur, quicum lusitent. Other abl. forms in -i are aliqui for aliquo Epid. 332, ququam Pers. 477. The old proverb, prouerbum uetustate contritum, quoted of the honest man, Cic. de Off. III. 19. 77, is dignus est quicum in tenebris mices. Terence has both quicum and quocum. For further particulars see the note in Brix's Kritischer Anhang, p. 142.

906. quod edepol homini probo, 'it is an honest man's name,' an evasive answer given in the hope that the question will not be further pressed.

907. illi edepol—illi—illi, 'his name is—his name is—his name is.' The Sycophant hesitates and stammers in doubt what to say. So Merc. 722, when the old gentleman is pressed by his wife to say to whom the girl belongs, uin dicam quoiast? illa—illa edepol—uae mihi! nescio quid dicam.

908. deuorauī nomen inprudens modo, 'I've just swallowed the name unintentionally.'

909. intra dentes conclusos, 'imprisoned behind his teeth.' A like comic exaggeration, Curc. 606, where the girl asks the parasite to restore the ring which reveals her parentage, quid ego? sub gemmane apstrusos habeo tuam matrem et patrem?

910. atque etiam modo uorsabatur mihi in labris primoribus, 'and yet just a minute ago it was on the tip of my tongue.' Atque as in v. 746, in labris primoribus like a meo primo nomine v. 885, and Catull. 2. 3.

911. Each part of the line is said 'aside' by the speaker. Charmides thinks that it is worse than humbug, that he has arrived just in time to stop some villainy; the Sycophant feels that he is in a hopeless mess.

temperi always, not tempori, a remnant of the old declension of neuter nouns in -us (genus, genes-is, gener-is = γένος, γένε(σ)-ος). Tempus departs from the rule in the oblique cases; the normal gen. is temporis, not temperis, but traces of the old declension survive in temperi and tempestiuus.

912. recommentatu's, 'thought of the name again,' 'recollected it,' like recommiscar v. 915, a very unusual meaning. Roby, L. G. 2102.

913. uide modo ut hominem noueris, 'just consider how you do know the man,' i.e. perhaps after all you don't know him much.

tam quam me = tam noui quam me ipsum, 'I know him as well as I know myself.' Cf. Mil. 984 quae te tam quam oculos amet, Pers. 581 S. esne tu huic amicus? T. tam quam di omnes qui caelum colunt.

914. id desideres, 'it is a common occurrence that what one has in one's hand, and sees with one's eyes, is the thing one may miss,' i.e. 'the thing one may forget.' The second person is generalising.

915. C est principium nomini, 'the name begins with C.' Then Charmides suggests a number of Athenian names which 'begin with C.'

917. Callimarchus appears to be Καλλίμαχος, and is supported by Alcesimarchus = Ἀλκησιμαχος in the Cistellaria.

nil agis, 'it's no good.'

918. neque adeo, 'and moreover I do not care a straw.' For neque adeo see on v. 141.

quando egomet memini mihi, 'inasmuch as I remember it for myself,'—I can't get hold of the name or say it to you—but I do remember it—for myself. Mihi marks it as the Sycophant's personal affair, with which Charmides has no concern. Cf. Mil. 282 tute scias soli tibi, ibid. 331 mihi ego uideo, mihi ego sapio, <mihi> ego credo plurimum, Pseud. 241 ego mihi cesso.

919. at enim, see on vv. 61 and 705.

921. quod ad exemplumst? 'according to what pattern is it?' i.e. 'what is it like?' See on v. 873.

coniectura si reperire possumus, '(to see) whether we can find it by guessing.' Si is used with the same force as in vv. 532 and 959.

922. ad hoc exemplumst,—'it is like this,'—then before the Sycophant can supply a name, Charmides cuts in with 'is it "Chares," is it "Charmides"?' To which the Sycophant replies 'yes! Charmides.'

923. em, istic erit: qui istum di perdant, 'there! that will be the man, and may the gods confound him.' Em, see v. 3. Istic erit, the future of probability, 'you will find that that is the man,' is highly ludicrous here. In his relief that the name has been discovered the Sycophant reveals his ignorance of the man himself. For this use of the fut. cf. Asin. 734 hic inerunt uiginti minae, Pers. 645 haec erit bono genere nata, Pseud. 677 sed profecto hoc sic erit. Qui (abl.) is used in curses and the like in the sense of utinam. So v. 997. Roby, L. G. 1592.

dixi ego iam dudum tibi, 'I told you just now.'—iam dudum, 'a short while ago,' see v. 608. Charmides has not told him so, but is that a sufficient reason for marking a gap? Charmides is enjoying his confusion, and the more inconsistencies he can convict the Sycophant of, whether fairly or not, the better his end is attained.

925. satin inter labra atque dentes latuit uir minumi preti? 'did he not hide between my lips and my teeth, the worthless fellow?' Satin=nonne. 'He hid between my lips and my teeth,' when though his name was in labris primoribus v. 910, it would not come out.

926. quid ergo ille ignauissimus mihi latitabat? 'why then did the good-for-nothing try to hide from me?' mihi, ethic dat. (incommodi).

927. si appellasses, respondisset nomini. This sounds to the Sycophant as a joke. He does not know that it is the bare truth. He knows that Charmides is the name of the man who is supposed to have sent him, but he has no notion that Charmides is the man before him.

928. sed ipse ubist? In v. 901 the Sycophant had said that Charmides was in Seleucia, now he is at Rhadamas. It is impossible to fix the locality. The Sycophant may either mean that they travelled homewards thus far together, or more probably he is purposely made to contradict himself, as the whole of his pretended narrative is a tissue of absurdities.

ad Rhadamantem in Cercopia. The MSS. give ad Rhadamantem (B adihadamante) in Cecropia insula. It is better to cut out insula as a gloss than to assume a short form Rhadamam, reading ad Rhadamam in Cercopum insula. The Κέρκωπες figure in Greek mythology, as in the story of Hercules. They are described as cunning thieves, and appear as such in Attic Comedy. There were several plays called Κέρκωπες (Koch, Com. Att. frag. III. p. 698), and there is supposed to have been an ἀγορὰ Κερκώπων, where stolen goods were sold. The name Κέρκωπες, as if from κέρκος, has given rise to the story that the Cercopians were turned into 'apes' and banished to the 'Monkey Islands,' Harpocration, p. 110, Ou. Met. XIV. 90.

930. sed nil disconducit huic rei, 'still it serves my turn very well.' Disconducit ἀπαξ ελπημένον = obest, huic rei is explained v. 900 mihi quoque edepol, quom hic nugatur, contra nugari lubet. And in pursuance of his purpose Charmides proceeds to extract from the Sycophant an account of his imaginary adventures. The Sycophant in his story says 'we,' i.e. 'Charmides and I'; Charmides in his questions and comments always says 'you,' 2nd pers. sing., i.e. the Sycophant only.

quid ais? See v. 193.

931. nimum mirimodis mirabiles, 'places wondrous in very wondrous wise,' 'places very marvellously marvellous.' Mirimodis = niris modis, and is like multimodis and omnimodis, which last is probably formed on the analogy of the other two. Mirimodis and multimodis are regular in Plautus, though multis modis occurs Rud. 837, and omnibus modis often, as Aul. 462, Merc. 920, Pseud. 1074. For the use of the plural (modis not modo) see Langen, Beiträge, p. 111 f. Lucretius is fond of these forms, see Munro on Lucr. I. 683. Nimum, as v. 28.

933. in Pontum aduecti Arabiam terram sumus, i.e. in Pontum uecti Arabiam terram aduecti sumus, 'on our voyage to the Pontus we touched at the land of Arabia.'

934. eho, an? 'hallo! is Arabia actually,' 'hallo! do you mean to say that &c.' See on v. 55 Eho an, continually at the beginning of the line, as Bacch. 200, Epid. 506, Mil. 821, Pseud. 968, &c.

935. apsinthium...atque cunila gallinacea, 'but the place where the wormwood and the henbane is grown.' These came from the Pontus. Pliny (N. H. XXVII. 45) praises absinthium Ponticum, and cunila is a species of origanum which is specially connected (N. H. XX. 169) with Heraclea Pontica. Cunila is the Greek κορίλη. Ritschl and others, despite the quantity in Greek, would accentuate dtque cínŭla. On this, and the accentuation of Greek loan-words generally, see Lindsay, L. L. p. 155.

936. nimum graphicum hunc nugatorem. See on v. 769 and cf. v. 1024. The whole is acc. of exclamation, as v. 128.

Ritschl objects to sed ego sum insipientior &c. as a dittographia of v. 929. But the phrase occurs again v. 1057, and the reflection is quite in place here. If repetition and redundancy are always to be cut out, Plautus will not be Plautus. See Langen, Plaut. Stud. p. 80.

937. quae. Brix is probably right in saying that 'quae is not for quod, but means "places which".' Egomet goes with unde redeam, as with ubi sim, v. 929.

The MSS. give here the three lines 889—891, which were restored to their place by Meier.

938. nisi quia, 'only that I have a fancy for finding out where he will end at last.' I am foolish for questioning him, (and I should not question him) except because &c., i.e. I ought not to question him any more, still I will see where he gets to in the end. See Langen, Beiträge, p. 58, and on v. 233.

939. porro, 'farther,' see on v. 162.

si animum aduortes, eloquar. The fut. here, pres. subj. v. 897. But either construction is admissible.

940. qui de caelo exoritur sub solio Iouis, a literal way of taking such an epithet as the Homeric δυπηρής applied to a river, as Od. IV. 477.

942. immo horiola aduecti sumus, 'no! we sailed there in a bit of a smack.' Horiola is a small fishing-boat, a rare diminutive of horia, Rud. 910.

943. usque aqua aduorsa per amnem, 'by river all the way against the stream,' i.e. 'up stream.'

944. alii di isse ad uillam aiebant seruis depromptum cibum, 'the other gods told us he had gone to his country seat to serve out rations to the slaves.' Jupiter is represented as a landed proprietor who goes to his property on the first of the month, to distribute to his slaves their monthly allowance (demensum, demensus cibum). Cf. Stich. 60 (a master addressing his slaves) uos meministis quot kalendis petere demensum cibum. Alii=ceteri in popular language.

945. Charmides is getting tired of the Sycophant's absurd lies, and cuts him short.

946. The letters printed in italics are Leo's conjectures. They keep the MSS. distribution of the text between the speakers, fit in all that is left in the MSS., and are to my mind far superior to anything proposed.

sed, 'but' remonstrates the Sycophant. Charmides will not listen to him, 'I assure you I'm off, if you annoy me.' He is tired of the pretended journey and will no more of it.

nam pudicum neminem, Pax, referre oportet, qui aps terra ad caelum peruenerit, 'for, Pax, no man of modesty ought to tell how he passed from earth to heaven.' Pudicum, 'a man of proper feeling,' as v. 697. But there is a double meaning here, (1) no one who was not lost to all sense of shame would tell such a frightful lie, (2) no man, if he wishes to save his reputation for personal chastity, would talk about a journey to heaven, in allusion to the story of Ganymede. 'No man not lost to modesty,' will sufficiently cover both meanings.

948. faciam. The MSS. have ...m only, faciam is Spengel's certain restoration. Pers. 662 faciam ita ut te uelle uideo.

sed monstra, breaking off the absurd narrative, and going back to the request which he made at the beginning of the interview, v. 878.

950. eumpse. See on v. 800.

952. ne tu me edepol arbitrare beluam, 'truly you think me a stupid, a ninny.' Nē confirmatiua; belua = 'a brainless being,' rather than 'a beast,' as we use the word, Most. 569 and 607, Rud. 543, Ter. Phorm. 601.

953. quiquidem, 'if indeed I &c.' See on v. 552. But Brix, perhaps rightly, takes quiquidem to be causal here as in the passage quoted v. 552, 'since (as you seem to suppose) I cannot recognise.'

954. qui mihi mille nummum crederet Philippum, 'as to trust me with a thousand Philippes d'or.' Mille as a substantive, hence illo mille v. 959, see on v. 425. On the nummi Philippi, see v. 152, and on the short gen. plur. v. 241.

956. aiebat mandasse with se omitted, as is common after verbs of saying and perceiving, when the infin. and principal verb have the same subject, as vv. 5, 755.

957. adprobe, 'right well,' here only in Plautus. Cf. adprime v. 373.

958. enim uero, see on v. 61 and cf. vv. 987 and 989.

sycophantae huic sycophantari uolo, 'to play the cheat to this cheat,' 'to humbug this humbug,' like v. 900 mihi quoque edepol, quom hic nugatur, contra nugari lubet, and v. 972 nugari nugatori.

959. si, 'to see whether,' as v. 921.

960. quod, 'swindle him out of that thousand of Philippes d'or, which sum he said that I had given him.' For quod, id &c. of a large sum of money, see on v. 405.

quem. See on v. 373.

962. quoi, si capitis res sit, nummum numquam credam plumbeum, 'a fellow to whom, even if it were a matter of life and death, I would not entrust a leaden counter.' Nummus plumbeus, not a current coin but a 'counter' or 'token,' like our stage-money. Most. 892 tace sis, faber, qui cudere soles plumbeos nummos.

si = etiam si, 'even if'; and so often in Plautus, as Asin. 164, 405, 414.

963. heus, Pax, te tribus uerbis uolo. The rest of the speech has been 'thinking aloud' on Charmides' part. Now he turns to the Sycophant with 'I want just a word with you.' For the elliptic construction te uolo, see on v. 516, on tria as an indefinitely small, and trecenta as an indefinitely large number, see on v. 791.

965. atque etiam Philippum, 'yes and a thousand (of) Philippes d'or.' Philippum and numeratum belong to nummum, which is short gen. plur. after mille, as v. 959.

numeratum, 'paid down by him in person at the Bank.' Numerare, 'to count out,' 'to pay down in cash,' Asin. 193, Epid. 305, Ou. her. XII. 199 dos ubi sit quaeris? Campo numerauimus illo &c. Numerare, 'to pay in cash') (perscribere, 'to pay by draft.' The Sycophant boasts that he has cash, and not a draft. This is untrue, and he soon has to eat his words, v. 982.

966. nempe, as v. 196.

967. mirum quin...acciperem, 'strange that I did not receive it &c.' mirum quin with subj. always ironical. See on v. 495.

968. cedodum, 'just hand that money to me.' Cedō (plur. cette for ce-dīte*), 'here give' = 'give me' or 'tell me,' is composed of the pronominal element kē*, prefixed as a prep. to the athematic imperative dō* (cf. δλ-δω). The final vowel is properly long, but is invariably shortened by the 'breuis breuians' law after the short cē. On the use of -dum, see v. 98.

971. auro huic quidem, 'for this money at least,' 'at any rate so far as this money is concerned.' Quidem limits and corrects, and is especially so used after demonstratives, e.g. vv. 58 dumquidem, 'provided at least,' 363 sapiens quidem, 419, Capt. 335 pol is quidem, ibid. 336 hoc quidem, ibid. 564, 573, 657, 668, 750, 974. See Brix on Capt. 357. As here, quidem limits the general statement, 'you never shall be Charmides,' to the restricted meaning, 'for this money,' so v. 982 scriptum quidem corrects and limits his statement that Charmides had given him the money. 'At any rate (if he had not given the cash) he had given an order for it.' In fact quidem = γε in all its senses.

972. abi, see on v. 830, 'come, come! please, swindler, you expect to swindle a swindler.' Nugari nugatori, as v. 958. Postulas, v. 237. The Sycophant makes no bones about admitting what he is, but objects to another man trenching on his privileges.

974. nimis argute obrepisti in eapse occasiuncula, 'you stole in very cleverly just when I gave you a bit of an opening.' Like a boxer who seizes his opportunity, when for a second his adversary is off his guard. The Sycophant gave Charmides only the least possible opening, Charmides had seized it cleverly, and the Sycophant has a professional admiration for his adroitness. The hiatus may stand, and it is a difficult question whether me should be inserted or not. Supr. v. 61, the verb has a direct object, but Pseud. 686 ut mors obrepat interim, it is absolute.

975. postquam...post, as v. 417.

977. proin tu te, itidem ut charmidatus es, rursum recharmida, 'therefore do you, just as you Charmidised yourself, un-Charmidise yourself.' You made yourself Charmides, now unmake yourself. Te recharmida, where re has the same force as in sero, resero; claudio, recludo; probo, reprobo &c. Some editors maintaining that on analogy, as re is compounded with a noun, recharmida ought to mean 're-Charmidise,' write decharmida. But re can have the force required, viz. 'un-,' and that is quite enough for a comic writer.

979. mea causa=per me=ἐμοῦ γε ἕνεκα, 'for all I care.' So Epid. 679 quaeras mea causa vel medio in mari, Rud. 139 mea quidem hercle causa saluos sis licet, Pseud. 123 de istac re in oculum utrumuis conquiescito, 'so far as that goes,' τοῦτου γε ἕνεκα.

980. qui tum—non eras. The Sycophant pauses an instant before the παρὰ προσδοκίαν ending non eras.

981. age siquid agis, 'act, if you're going to act,' i.e. 'act at once,' 'if you mean business, now's your time.' So Epid. 196, Mil. 215, Pers. 146 hoc, si facturu's, face, Poen. 1237 ite si itis, Stich. 710 bibe si bibis.

dormitas, 'you're dreaming,' i.e. 'talking nonsense.' Dormitare in Plautus is generally either 'to act as if one were asleep,' i.e. to sit idle and dreaming, as Asin. 253, Epid. 162, or 'to talk as if one were asleep,' not to know what one is saying.

982. scriptum quidem, 'at any rate he gave me an order for it.' He had said, v. 965, that it was numeratum, now he admits that it was only scriptum. See on vv. 965 and 971. So Asin. 440 scribit nummos.

983. For properas an non properas others read properas an non propere, when properas propere is figura etymologica, and the two practically identical adverbs propere and actutum are paralleled by such lines as Cas. II. 4. 13 actutum uxorem huc euoca ante aedis cito.

984. dormitator, as v. 862.

985. illum quem ementitus es, 'the man whom you pretended to know,' illum by attraction to the case of quem, as often happens when the demonstrative is first, and its verb does not come till after the relative sentence. See on v. 137, and add Amph. 1009 Naucratem quem convenire uolui, in naui non erat, Bacch. 420 sed tu qui pro tam corrupto dicis causam filio, eademne erat haec disciplina tibi? The speaker places the name or pronoun emphatically first, and, as it were, without determining beforehand the structure of the whole sentence, attaches it to the nearest verb, which is that of the relative sentence.

986. eho, quaesio an. See on v. 55.

987. ain tu tandem? 'do you really mean it?' Ain (aisne), ain tu, ain uero, ain tandem, ain tu tandem, always at the beginning of a speech, either interrupting another speaker, or expressing surprise and astonishment at what the other speaker has said. See Langen, Beiträge p. 119.

988. ipsissimus, 'his veriest self,' ipse has failed to carry conviction, a stronger word is wanted, and so the comic superlative ipsissimus is coined, like αὐρότατος, Ar. Plut. 83. The form ipsima or ipsuma seems to have been actually used colloquially in the Imperial period, as Petronius, 69 p. 46. 16 B, 75 p. 51. 23 B. See on v. 397.

989. enim uero serio, 'truly indeed, in sober earnest.' The three words are found in combination Poen. 435, and in Amph. 964 an id ioco dixisti? equidem serio ac uero ratus, serio is the antithesis of ioco. This is its force here. 'Now that I am convinced you are Char-mides in all sober seriousness, seeing that you are back home again'—then after professing to speak serio he continues ioco with a παρὰ προσδοκίαν ending.

990. uapulabis meo arbitrato et nouorum aedilium, 'you shall be flogged at the discretion of myself and the new aediles.' After quoniam aduenis we expect a promise of the cena aduenticia or uiatica with which a safe arrival was always celebrated, as Bacch. 94 and 537, Epid. 7, Stich. 471, Truc. 127, and Curc. 562, where the promise of a dinner takes an unexpected turn. But παρὰ προσδοκίαν, the promise of a dinner is replaced by the promise of a flogging. The Sycophant treats Char-mides as a slave who has acted badly, and is to be flogged for it. See v. 708. He coolly associates himself with the aediles in determining the amount of the punishment. The line is important as shewing that the play was probably acted at the Megalensia, and could not have been earlier than the year 194 B.C. See Introduction, p. xxxv.

992. di te perdant, si te flocci facio an pertisses prius. A second time the Sycophant begins as if he were going to offer congratulations and a dinner, but again he ends παρὰ προσδοκίαν, 'may the gods confound you, if I care a straw whether you had perished before you came here.' An, used in a simple indirect question, as Curc. 396, Merc. 145, Poen. 557. Si te flocci facio, antiptosis, as v. 373.

993. te macto infortunio, 'I devote you to disaster,' as Amph. 1034, Bacch. 364, Curc. 537.

994. floccum non interdum, 'matters to me not one straw,' lit. 'I would not give a straw between,' the one alternative is as indifferent to me as the other. So Rud. 580 eluas tu an exungare, ciccum non interdum. For the form interdum, see on vv. 6 and 436.

995. ibo, ad illum renuntiabo. Cf. Stich. 598 iuben domi cenam coqui atque ad illum renuntiari?

996. male uiue et uale, 'bad life and bad luck to you,' a parody of the usual bene. Male belongs to both words.

997. qui=utinam, v. 923, peregre, 'from abroad,' v. 149. Exit the Sycophant, back to the Forum (right).

SCENE 3 (998—1007). This is not really a new scene. Charmides, seriously alarmed at what has passed, soliloquises in Iambic Trimeters.

998. postquam...post, vv. 417 and 975. Illic hinc abiit is a regular formula, usually to begin the line, in which illic is a pyrrhic; ille is only used in the forms in which quidem occurs, as Truc. 884 ille quidem hinc abiit. Cf. Capt. 751, Epid. 81, Pers. 200, Poen. 917 &c.

1000. iam dudum, vv. 608 and 923, 'for some little time.' Ille refers to what is coming, viz. the next line.

1002. epistula illa. There were two letters, v. 894. But it is pedantic simply on that account to correct, as Meier does, epistulae illae... concenturiant.

concenturiat, 'marshals.' So Mil. 815 si centuriati bene sunt maniples mei, Pseud. 572 dum concenturio in corde sycophantias, one of Plautus' numerous military metaphors.

1003. et illud mille nummum, sc. concenturiat metum, 'and so do the thousand pieces.' For mille nummum see on v. 425. Sycophanta is the subj. to agat.

1004. numquam edepol temere tinnit tintinnabulum, 'a bell never rings (a tinkler never tinkles) for nothing.' Tinnio, tintinno and tintinnio are onomatopoeic words: numquam temere, 'never for nothing,' i.e. without some reason, as v. 740. The whole line is probably a version of a popular proverb.

1005. nisi qui=nisi quis, 'unless someone.' See vv. 257 and 439.

1006. sed quis hic est, &c. Charmides catches sight of Stasimus hurrying up, and retires into the angiportum to watch him. Sed quis hic est qui, a regular formula to announce the entrance of a fresh character, vv. 840 and 1151, and so estne hic...qui, v. 432.

1007. concessero. Cf. v. 625. Charmides withdraws, listens to Stasimus, and comments on what he says. He does not shew himself till v. 1059.

SCENE 4 (1008—1092). Stasimus rushes on in a great hurry. He has been to have a drink, and is hurrying to make up for lost time. He finds he has left a ring behind him in the tavern, and does not know whether to go back for it or to hasten on. Charmides listens to him and comments on what he says up to v. 1059, when, having recognised him as his own slave, he accosts him.

A slave hurrying across the stage, shouting and clearing people out of the way, was a favourite subject in Comedy. The length of the Roman stage enabled a man running to be kept in sight for some time. Compare the scenes Amph. 984, Capt. 790, Curc. 280, Stich. 274.

Metre: Septenarian Trochaics.

1008. propere celerem, the use of a cognate adv. to intensify the meaning of the adj., an extension of the figura etymologica. Cf. v. 931 mirimodis mirabiles, Aul. 188 perspicue palam, Rud. 1323 propere celeriter.

dominum, he means of course Lesbonicus, not Charmides, whom he has no expectation of seeing.

1009. metus exoriat scapulis, 'lest apprehension arise for your shoulder-blades,' i.e. lest you come into danger of a flogging. The fear is not differentiated from the thing feared, and so Capt. 519 neque adeo spes, quae hunc mi aspellat metum, where subjective and objective are not distinguished: scapulis as Asin. 547 scapularum confidentia.

1010. iam dudum factumst quom, 'it is now some little time since,' Asin. 251 iam diu factum quom, Pers. 822 iam diu factumst postquam, &c.

1011. ne bubuli in te cottabi crebri crepent, 'lest cowhide cracks constantly crackle on your back.' The word cottabi is clearly taken from the original, where the allusion was to the Greek game κβρταβος. In the game wine was skilfully jerked out of a glass so as to make a sharp, ringing sound on a suspended metal-vessel. Stasimus means that the ringing sound will be produced on his back, and made not with wine but with oxhide whips. Slaves in Comedy delight in dwelling upon their punishments, but they describe them in bold figurative or allusive terms. E.g. Asin. 35, where flogging is described as 'an assault of dead bulls on living men'—uiuos homines mortui incursant boues.

1012. si aberis ab eri quaestione, 'if you are not forthcoming when your master wants you.' Esse in quaestione alicui, 'to be to seek,' Capt. 253, Pers. 51, Pseud. 663, abesse ab alicuius quaestione, 'not to be in the way when someone wants you.' Cf. v. 278, Roby, L. G. 1393.

1013. ecce hominem te, Stasime, nili, 'there! Stasimus, you are a worthless fellow.' He has just missed the ring. On ecce see v. 386; nili (loc. of nil) is used as an indeclinable adj. Asin. 472 impure, nili, non uides irasci? Mil. 180 propter nihili bestiam, Pseud. 239 O Pseudole mi, sine sim nihili.

satin in thermipolio condalium es oblitus? 'have you not forgotten your ring in the tavern?' Thermipolium was a low tavern where cooked food and calidum or caldum, a mixture of wine and hot water, were provided. Curc. 292, Rud. 529. Thermipolium (B termipolio, CD thermopolio) = θερμopώλιον, the short o becoming i in Latin, as ī is the usual short connecting vowel, and any short vowel may become ī in Latin. So tragicomoedia, Patricoles, &c. 'Condalium,' anulus, Festus p. 38. A play ascribed to Plautus was so named.

1014. thermopotasti gutturem, 'warmed your throat with hot drink.' Thermopotare cannot be from the Greek θερμopοτάζειν, which would make thermopotasso in Latin, besides which thermopotare is a transitive verb. Plautus must have coined the word from θερμopοτον, θερμopοτρης with a Latin affix, the word being made to echo thermipolio. Guttur is apparently always masc. in Plautus, Aul. 304, Mil. 835. He has also as masc. collus, dorsus, papauer v. 410, tris corios Poen. 139, otherwise hoc corium, and conversely nasum neut.

1015. recurre petere re recenti, a loose use of the infin., instead of the supine, after a verb of motion, which is not uncommon in Comedy, Roby, L. G. 1362, Bacch. 354 ibit aurum arcessere, ibid. 631 petere nenerat, ibid. 900 abiit aedem uisere, Curc. 207 missi petere, Poen. 1175 uisere uenit, Rud. 94 uenio uisere. See vv. 76 and 162. The alliteration with re is unusual.

1016. gurgulios exercitor, is hunc hominem cursuram docet, 'his throat (or 'swallow') is his trainer, it is giving him a lesson in running,' i.e. the man must be drunk or he would not run about as he is doing. Exercitor=the taskmaster that keeps him at it, as v. 226.

1017. tribusne te poteris memoriam esse oblitum? 'what!

three cups make you forget your memory?' Plautus joins oblivisci with the acc. only as v. 1014. potērium (ποτήριον), also Stich. 694.

1018. an uero, quia, &c., 'do you mean to say that because you drank there with a set of decent fellows, men who would have no difficulty in keeping their hands off what was not theirs—.' The lines are a piece of self-address in conversational style. Frugi and facile cohiberent are manifestly ironical. The sentence begins an uero quia, which should be answered by eo postulas. But after the two parenthetical lines describing his companions, the question is put directly without the answering eo, the description being merely summarised in inter eos.

1020. The names are Greek, and meant to express the thievishness of their owners. But some of them are very difficult and doubtful. They have been discussed by Ritschl (Opusc. III.) and Spengel (praef. p. vii.) with very different results. Leo makes some excellent suggestions in his critical footnote.

Truchus. The choice seems to lie between (1) Spengel's Trochus (τροχός), which if adopted is more naturally referred to the speed with which the thief makes off than to the torture-wheel, and (2) Leo's Struthus (στρουθός); 'Sparrow' is a likely enough name for a thief, the more so if, as seems to be the case, some of the other names imply the snatching up of crumbs or fragments, thieving on a small scale.

Cerconicus, read Circonicus (Leo), Κυρκώνυχος, 'Hawklaw,' cf. Pseud. 852 miluini aut aquilini ungulis. Crinnus is referred by Spengel to a kind of torture. There are many suggestions: (1) Crinus, Hermann (κρίνον), which is variously taken as 'poor,' or 'a kind of cake (μάζα), both on the authority of Hesychius, Suidas, and others. Better suggestions seem to be (2) Crinnus (Scaliger), 'Crumb,' for which Leo compares Herondas VI. 5 τᾶλφιτ' ἦν μετρῇ, τὰ κρίμν' ἀμυθρεῖς, (3) Crius, 'κρίος quasi τοιχωρύχος.'

Cercobulus, (1) Ritschl suggests Cricolabus = ὁ λαμβάνων κρίκον, i.e. condalium, 'Ring-grabber,' (2) Spengel, Cerdobulus = κέρδος, qui lucrum spectat, 'Gain-greedy,' (3) Leo, Cercnobulus (κέρχνη, Hesych. κέρκνος: λέπαξ).

Collabus, about the form there is no doubt. The meaning is variously taken to be (1) from κόλλαβος = μικρὸς ἀρτίσκος, 'a roll,' a thin starveling creature, 'Loaflet,' (2) a hybrid word, 'μειζοβάρβαρον, quasi συλλαβών,' 'Snatcher.'

1021. oculicrepidae, cruricrepidae, ferriteri mastigiae, 'sons of the crackling-eyed and clanking-legged line, iron-wearing jail-birds.' Oculicrepidae is read on the strength of Schoell's quotation (exc. Vales.

14, 87, p. 303 G.), 'tortus ita ut oculi eius creparent.' The more common reading, Becker's collicrepidae, agrees well with cruricrepidae, 'with clanking irons on neck and leg,' cf. Capt. 357 collus collari caret. Loewe suggests cruristrepidae from the crurifragium, often mentioned as a punishment of slaves, Asin. 474, Mil. 156, Poen. 886, Pseud. 130, Rud. 816. In any case both words are made to look like Greek patronymics, as if the ruffians were the scions of honoured houses.

ferriteri (ferrum, tero), because they wear out irons, as Capt. 888, or possibly 'iron-filers,' from their filing through their irons to escape, like compedium tritor Pers. 420. But probably both that phrase and ferriteri here only mean 'fetter-wearers,' not 'filers,' cf. Most. 356 plagipatidae, ferritribaces uiri. Mastigia (μαστιγας), any 'jail or gallows bird.'

1022. inter eosne homines condallium te redipisci postulas? 'among a set of fellows like that do you expect to get back a ring?' The question is resumed in a slightly different form after the parenthesis. It began an uero, quia..., it should continue eo, &c., but the quia is not answered, the simple question is picked up again.

1023. eorum quiuis surrupuit currenti cursori solum, 'any one of them has been known to snatch the shoe off a runner as he ran.' The line is meant to shew how lightning-swift their movements were. Solum is 'the shoe-sole,' as Bacch. 332, Curc. 297. The MSS. give at the beginning of the line quorum eorum unus. Leo retains quorum eorum, and can produce authority for doing so. But to the ordinary eye it seems to be, as Ussing says, 'ditto-graphia aperta.' Unus cannot well be taken = ἄλλος, 'many of them have been known to snatch'—if unus is retained it must mean that 'one of them has done it,' and it is quoted as a great feat. But we want a description that will apply to all, they are all finished thieves, and therefore I follow Ussing in eorum quiuis.

1024. ita me di ament, graphicum furem, 'as I hope to be saved, a droll knave,' 'a chef d'œuvre of knavery.' On ita me di ament see v. 447, on graphicum v. 769.

1025. epithecā = ἐπιθήκην, 'unless I am going in addition to loss to throw in trouble (i.e. petendi laborem) as well' (pour faire comble). Cf. Ar. Vesp. 1391 κάξέβαλεν ἐντευθενὶ ἄρτους δέκ' ὀβολῶν κάπιθήκην τέτταρας. The Latin is auctarium.

1026. quin tu quod periit peritisse ducis? 'why don't you consider that what is lost is lost?' Cf. Catull. 8. 2 et quod nides perisse, perditum ducas.

cape uorsoriam, 'bout ship,' 'bring her round.' Cf. Merc. 875 ff.

The meaning is explained by the next words, recipe te ad erum. Give up your useless search and go back.

1027. fugitiuos, 'no runaway,' δραπέτης. domi, gen. and not loc. as v. 841. 'Domus is declined only according to the second declension in Plautus and till Sulla.' Commeminit domi, cf. Ter. Eun. 815 domi focique fac uicissim ut memineris.

1028. Stasimus having been, as he considers, robbed, waxes eloquent on the degeneracy of the times.

ueteres parsimoniae, 'the old economies,' parsimoniae 'acts of thriftiness.' The sing. is abstract thrift, the plur. is thrift put into practice, 'thrifty habits.' See on vv. 36 and 490.

1029. potius is not entirely otiose, 'would that the old economies were in more honour here, rather than wicked ways': potius can be dispensed with, but its presence accords with the fulness of comic style.

1030. basilica facinora, 'deeds worthy of a king,' 'right royal themes.' He speaks as if he were βασιλεύς, not δοῦλος. Plautus uses both the adj. basilicus (βασιλικός) and the adv. basilice, Capt. 811, Pers. 31, Epid. 56.

1031. more maiorum, 'as his fathers did before him,' ironical, as a slave in Roman law was nullo patre.

1032. nisi quod lubet, 'unless it pleases them.' Nisi elliptic, 'they care nothing for what is lawful, only (they care for) what pleases them.' See vv. 233, 439.

1033. ambitio iam more sanctast, 'self-seeking ('canvassing') nowadays is sanctioned by custom.' He does not say there were no leges de ambitu, there were such before Plautus' time (see Amph. Prol. 74), but the laws did not stop the practice. And probably these lines are more applicable to the Athens of Philemon than to the Rome of Plautus. Cf. v. 28 ff.

1034. scuta iacere fugereque hostis more habent licentiam, 'by custom men have full freedom to fling away their shields and run from the foe.' The infinitives iacere, fugere are objects after habent licentiam. Petere and praeterire in the next lines are subject infinitives. The persons alluded to are the ψάσπιδες of Ar. Nub. 353, Pax 1186. It is much more likely that some well-known persons, who had received undeserved promotion, are meant, than that the allusion is a literary allusion to Archilochus and his abandoned shield (Bergk, frag. 6). Cf. the passage Epid. 33—36, which Schmieder thinks may refer to C. Terentius Varro, who brought about the disaster of Cannae.

1035. petere honorem pro flagitio more fit, 'to sue for office as the reward of shameful conduct is by custom a common thing.' Cf. Epid. 30 (my master has lost his arms), 'they deserted to the enemy.' At iam ante alii fecerunt idem, erit illi illa res honori.

1036. strenuosos praeterire, 'to pass over (in the choice for promotion) men of energy.' Strenuosos Loewe, strenuosus beside strenuos, like iniurius, iniuriosus; obnoxius, obnoxiosus. Leo conjectures *strenuiore*s from Epid. 446 nam strenuiori deterior si praedicat &c.

nequam quidem, sc. morem, an acc. of exclamation like morem improbum in the previous line.

1037. magisque is sunt obnoxiosae quam parentes liberis, 'and the laws are more at the mercy of customs than—parents are at their children's.' Is dat. plur.=moribus: parentes liberis παρὰ προσδοκᾶν for liberi parentibus, but in these topsy-turvy days 'the parents are in the children's power,' not uice uersa as it should be.

1039. eae miserae etiam ad parietem sunt fixae clavis ferreis, 'the laws, poor things, are actually fastened to a wall with clamps of iron.' The laws were graven on tablets of brass or wood and fastened up in a conspicuous place. Stasimus alludes to this as if the laws were unhappy persons wrongfully suffering punishment.

1040. nimio with aequius. Cf. vv. 28 and 387.

1041. Cf. Aul. 523 ff.

1043. neque istis quicquam lege sanctumst, 'for such people nothing is settled by a law.' Sanctum, 'settled that they are not to do it,' 'made penal,' cf. sancire legem. The whole line is practically a repetition of v. 1037. Ritschl condemns vv. 1043—1045, and very possibly the passage is interpolated, e.g. v. 1033. But it is arbitrary to bracket lines in a passage like this on purely subjective grounds.

1044. qua sacrum qua publicum, 'alike the property of the gods and the property of the state.' Cf. v. 286 sacrum profanum, publicum priuatum habent. qua...qua=et...et, Asin. 96 qua me, qua uxorem... circumduce, Mil. 1113 consecrare qua maris qua feminas, ibid. 1392 eum oderunt qua uiri qua mulieres, Men. 666 qua uirum qua uxorem di uos perdant. The use is colloquial until Livy's time. He has it often, e.g. IX. 8. 3 reum qua infelicis belli qua ignominiosae pacis. Cicero has it in the Letters only.

1045. malam rem magnam, 'a good thrashing.' Malum or mala res is a euphemism for the punishment of a slave by flogging, and is naturally used here by a slave for 'a severe punishment.' Hence malam rem mereri, quaerere, reperire &c., and the execration abi in malam rem.

Brix quotes an excellent example of the meaning of malum and mala res from Livy IV. 49. 11. Postumius Regillensis threatens 'malum quidem militibus meis nisi quieverint,' whereupon a tribune comments, auditis, Quirites, sic ut servis malum minitantem militibus. Malam rem = malum and therefore can take the epithet magnam.

1046. non hoc publice animum aduerti, 'and to think that the state does not interfere.' Hoc, object after animum aduerti = animaduerti. publice as in v. 548.

1047. uniuersis...omni, 'that class of men (= istis v. 1043) is prejudicial to the world at large and does harm to any people.' Omni as v. 338.

1048. fidem...fidem, the first means 'faith,' the second 'credit,' 'by not keeping faith they destroy the credit of people who have done no wrong.' quoque...etiam not a mere pleonasm, for quoque compares, etiam intensifies. The words in the order quoque etiam may come together, but in the reverse order they are always separated. Thus Asin. 502 etiam tu quoque, Epid. 234 quoque etiam.

1049. quippe eorum ex ingenio ingenium horum probant, 'for people judge the character of the innocent from the character of the guilty.' Eorum = qui male fidem servant; horum i.e. qui nil meriti sunt. Probant, as Pers. 213 tuo ex ingenio mores alienos probas, in the sense of aestimant. There is also a change of subject, for the subject to abrogant is isti implied in id genus hominum, the subject to probant is the indefinite 'they,' i.e. people generally. Cf. for the change of subject v. 813, Men. 454 qui (i.e. homines otiosi from previous line) nisi adsint quom citentur, census capiant (sc. censores) ilico, Capt. 266 nunc senex est in tonstrina: nunc iam cultros adinet (Philocrates), Pseud. 58, Pers. 616 &c., always where there is no fear of mistake from the change.

1050. hoc qui in mentem uenerit mihi? 'do you ask how this came into my head?' The question is indirect and quaeris is felt if not expressed. Similar indirect questions are Bacch. 75 utrum ego istuc iocum adsimulem an serio? Epid. 215 id adeo qui maxime animum aduorterim? Ter. Andr. 191 hoc quid sit? where Donatus notes 'ἐλλειψις, deest enim quaeris.'

re ipsa, 'I have just been reminded of it by actual experience,' sc. in losing the ring.

1051. pro proprio, 'if you have given a man a friendly loan, instead of being your property it is lost,' 'it is no longer good money but gone.' Mutuom, see on v. 728.

1053, 1054. The two lines are bracketed by Bergk. They seem to be introduced as an expansion and explanation of v. 1052.

mage for magis like pote, potis, v. 352, 'if you begin to press harder for payment.' Magis, which is the adv. corresponding to the compar. maior, is properly ma(h)is* and takes its g from agnus, as figura (fighura*) from finco. The suffix -is is a weak grade of the compar. suffix -ios, but this -is was confused by the Romans with the nom. sing. of facilis, potis &c., so that from magis, regarded as nom. sing. m. and f., was formed a neuter mage, as pote from potis. By a similar confusion satis, a noun meaning 'sufficiency,' developed a neuter sate*, curtailed to sat. Lindsay, L. L. p. 588.

1055. meus est hicquidem Stasimus seruos. Charmides coming nearer, or looking at him more closely, recognises the speaker as his own slave.

1056. talentum. This is the same piece of 'bounce' as he uttered v. 727. A talent would be an enormous sum for a slave to have to lend, and Stasimus talks about the transaction in quite a cool way as if he often did the like. Vv. 1053, 1054, if they are allowed to stand, very greatly impair the force of this sentence.

1057. insipientior &c., v. 936.

rebus curem publicis, 'meddle with affairs of state.' Curo in old Latin takes the dat., like consulo rei alicui, as often as the acc., Rud. 146 tritico curat Ceres, Truc. 137 tuo uestimento et cibo alienis rebus curas.

1058. potius quam, id quod proximumst, meo tergo tutelam geram, 'rather than, the point that touches me most closely, take care of my back.' Tutelam gerere as v. 870, i.e. save it from a thrashing, v. 1009.

1059. On hearing Stasimus' intention of returning home, Charmides comes forward and calls to him. Leo divides the words differently. CH. Heus tu, asta ilico, audi. ST. heus tu, non sto, where Stasimus' heus tu is a mocking echo of Charmides'.

asta ilico, vv. 608 and 627: te uolo, v. 516, 'I want you.' But Stasimus replies, 'What if I don't want you to want me?'

1060. nimium saeuiter, sc. dicis or agis. Saeuiter is one of the many second declension adverbs formed with -ter. Plautus is fond of these forms in -ter and uses them alongside of the forms in -e. Thus saene and saeuiter, auare and auariter, blande and blanditer, firme and firmiter &c. Saeuiter, Pseud. 1290, Poen. 335.

1061. emere meliust quoi imperes, 'you'd better buy some one to order about,' i.e. I'm not your slave, don't order me. Stasimus has not yet faced or recognised Charmides. Cf. Theocr. xv. 90 πασάμενος ἐπίτασσε, Pers. 273 emere oportet, quem tibi oboedire uelis, Rud. 98 SC. qui nominat me? D. qui pro te argentum dedit.

emi atque argentum dedi, 'I did buy one and paid my money' is the full expression, as v. 115.

1062. dicto audiens, 'obedient,' Asin. 544 audientem dicto, mater, produxisti filiam, Men. 444 dicto me emit audientem, haud imperatorem sibi.

quid ago? The deliberative pres. indic. is more lively and colloquial than the subj. quid agam? It is specially common in this phrase, but cf. Men. 320 obsono amplius? Most. 774 uoco huc hominem? &c., and Roby, L. G. 1609. Magnum malum, v. 1045.

1063. nisi quidem es obnoxius, 'unless indeed you are under an obligation to him.' Charmides has just said that he will take Stasimus' advice and thrash the slave. Stasimus has now recognised his master, and as he sees that he has been endangering his back tries to clear himself by suggesting that Charmides is indebted to him and must spare him. So Asin. 284 (we can do our masters such a service) ut aetatem ambo ambobus nobis sint obnoxii, nostro deuincti beneficio.

1064. si bonus es. Charmides drops all pretences and addresses Stasimus as a master speaking to his slave. secus, an adv. noun 'otherwise' (v. 130), a euphemism for malus, and Stasimus in his reply replaces it by malus. He still pretends not to recognise his master.

1066. partem alteram = quod malist; illam alteram is defined by the epexegetic quod bonist; apponito 'set down to my credit.'

1070. mare, terra, caelum, apostrophizing the three parts into which from the oldest times ('made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is') men were wont to divide the visible world: our idiom is rather 'heaven and earth,' or 'earth and sky.' On di nostram fidem see v. 160.

1071. satin ego oculis plane uideo? Join satis and plane, 'do I see aright?' Cf. Epid. 5 Epidicumne ego conspicio? EP. satis recte oculis uteris, ibid. 634 satin ego oculis utilitatem optineo sincere an parum? ipsus = αὐτός, 'master,' as ipsima, quoted on v. 988, = domina.

1073. saluom te, sc. aduenisse gaudeo as v. 1097, the regular form of welcome, but often cut short by the impatience of the person welcomed, as Epid. 128 EP. saluom huc aduenisse—ST. tam tibi istuc credo quam mihi. There is a full exchange of courtesies v. 435 ff.

1075. filium atque filiam should be nom. in apposition to liberi, but are attracted into the case of the nearer relative.

1076. nempe, as v. 196.

saluom et seruatum, emphasis by the use of two practically synonymous words. See on v. 199.

1077. otiose, B ociosse, see on v. 37.

1078. quo tu te agis? 'whither farest thou?' 'where are you off to?' So Mil. 863 quo te agis? but Bacch. 1106 unde agis? without te.

1080. quid iam? 'why do you say 'now'?' 'what do you mean by 'now'?' The word or words that occasion surprise are repeated by the person perplexed, just as they were spoken, with quid? prefixed. Thus Amph. 1021 M. quis ad fores est? A. ego sum. M. quid 'ego sum'? what do you mean by 'It's I'? Bacch. 147 omitte, Lyde, ac caue malo. L. quid 'caue malo'? Capt. 1006 salueto, exoptate gnate mi. T. hem! quid 'gnate mi'? Rud. 736 numqui minus hasce esse oportet liberas? L. quid 'liberas'? Charmides, ignorant that Lesbonicus has sold the house, is amazed to learn that they don't live there, and in perplexity repeats iam, the word with which Stasimus, probably slowly and hesitatingly, had commenced an explanation.

1081. praesentariis argenti minis numeratis, a continuation of the previous sentence interrupted by perii, 'for money paid down in cash.' Numeratis as v. 965, praesentariis 'in ready money,' a Plautine word, Most. 361 and 913.

1083. rem, 'property' as v. 114, = bona v. 1095.

1085. posticulo, as v. 194. But all through Lesbonicus seems to be living in the house itself. In v. 390 Lysiteles tells his father that he lives there, v. 401 Lesbonicus comes out of the house with his slave, v. 1174 they go to the door of the house to summon Lesbonicus. See Langen, Plaut. Stud. p. 222. The explanation is, I take it, that the stage arrangements could not shew the posticulum, and stage exigencies required the street-door of the house to be the access to the posticulum.

1087. miserrumis periclis, MSS. miserum meis periculis, and miserumis is nearer than miser summis and other proposals that have been made. Periculum is the normal form of the word in Plautus, periculum occurs only at the end of the line, as Capt. 740 periculum uitae meae tuo stat periculo.

1088. capitali periclo per praedones plurumos. This line does not do much more than substitute the pirates for the seas on which they plundered, and though per can be explained with its present construction, it looks like a repetition of per in the previous verse. Leo makes two lines, ego miserrumis periclis quom per maria maxuma | me seruauī, saluos redīī, nunc hic disperīī miser. But to my mind quom spoils the construction, which is a coordination of contrasted clauses, see v. 292. The sense is 'though I have survived all perils abroad, I am utterly ruined here at home.' Therefore, if the two lines are to be cut down to one, following Wagner's lead, I think it should be ego miserrumis periclis per praedones plurimos. The repetition periclis...periculo does not in itself count for much against this line, see the instances quoted by Brix and Niemeyer. It is perhaps in favour of Wagner's single line that it heightens the intentional alliteration with p. Cf. Men. 252 potuit paucis plura plane proloqui.

1090. hac aetate exercitus, 'driven about the world at my time of life.' Exercitus seems to refer to his voyage rather than his worries, though that is the meaning Epid. 529 aerumna exercitam med habet, 'keeps me harassed and worried.'

1091. adimit animam, 'my vexation (at finding all my labour lost) takes away my breath'—animo male est or animo male fit is the regular term for 'I feel faint.' But he throws himself on Stasimus for support, and Stasimus offers to get him water. Even if there were a phrase animum adimere, it would be impossible to change animam to animum in view of animam in the next line.

uisne aquam tibi petam? 'shall I get you water?' Amph. 1058 animo malest, aquam uelim, Mil. 1332 animo male factum est huic repente miserae. Curre intro atque ecfero aquam. But water is a reviver even where there is no faintness, as (metaphorically) Epid. 554 guttula pectus ardens mi aspersisti. Charmides is, as we say, 'sick' at the seeming frustration of his hopes, but not faint. uisne Merc. 486, Most. 322, elsewhere always uin.

1092. res quom animam agebat, tum esse offusam oportuit, '(it is too late for water now—) water should have been sprinkled (not on me, but) on my property when it was gasping for breath, or 'at its last gasp.' Help is too late now: I don't want help now, my property wanted it then.

Charmides and Stasimus go and knock at the door of the house purchased by Callicles from Lesbonicus.

The inuolutio is now complete. Callicles' equivocal position, which had already exposed him to misrepresentation, was rendered more difficult by the marriage-proposal. How could he provide a dowry without disclosing the existence of the treasure? The sending of the Sycophant was intended to obviate this difficulty. But the unexpected return of Charmides upsets the plan, and the appearance of the Sycophant has seriously alarmed Charmides. His alarm is excited to the highest point by his interview with Stasimus, who of course does not know the facts. This completes the complication. Megaronides, who alone has been told the truth, alone understands what Callicles' position really is.

At this point the euolutio begins.

SCENE 5 (1093—1114). Callicles in pursuance of Megaronides' advice (v. 798 ff.) had gone into the house to dig up enough treasure to serve as a dowry when the Sycophant had discharged his part. He is disturbed at his work by the loud summons of Charmides and Stasimus at the door.

Metre: Iambic Trimeters.

1093. quid hoc hic clamoris audio ante aedis meas? hoc goes with clamoris and hic (adv.) with audio, so that the whole is equivalent to quid est hoc clamoris, quod hic audio? Hor. Ep. III. 5 quid hoc ueneni saeuin in praecordiis? Shaks. J. C. I. 2. 79 'What means this shouting? I do fear, the people &c.'

1094. The threefold repetition of the name is reproachful.

1095. qualine? The enclitic -ne is often thus appended, as Pers. 310 ecquid, quod mandauit tibi, estne in te speculae? Hor. Sat. II. 2. 107 uterne, 3. 295 quone, 3. 317 quantane. Cf. its use in positive sentences as v. 186.

1096. probo et fideli et fido et cum magna fide. The four practically synonymous terms are intended by emphatic repetition emphatically to repudiate the charge implied by Charmides. See on vv. 199, 1076.

1097. After this line a gap is often marked. Leo thinks the scene as we have it may be a shortened form inserted in an acting-edition in place of the full Plautine scene. But, as Ussing notes, Plautus hurries at the end of his plays and does not willingly repeat what the audience have already heard. Cf. Poen. 550 omnia istaec scimus iam nos, si hi spectatores sciunt, Pseud. 720 &c. The scene itself apologises for its shortness v. 1101 sed intus narrabo tibi et hoc et alia, and v. 1137 tells us that the promised explanation has been given.

1098. credo, omnia istaec si ita sunt ut praedicas, 'I believe you, if your conduct is all as you declare.' Credo, sc. te gaudere. If you have been upright and loyal and so forth, I can believe that you are glad to see me back.

1099. sed quis istest tuos ornatus? 'but what is the meaning of that get-up of yours?' i.e. the déshabillé in which Callicles had been digging.

1100. thensaurum...dotem, filiae tuae quae daretur. We should expect thensaurum, qui (or by attraction quae) dos filiae tuae daretur, cf. v. 1143: but by antiptosis (v. 373) dos is anticipated out of the relative sentence and becomes acc. in apposition to thensaurum.

1102. em, 'there' = 'see I am here.' As Callicles has spoken of the treasure, Charmides wishes to get Stasimus out of the way, so he sends him off to the harbour. But Stasimus has already heard enough to give him the clue to the mystery. The MSS. give hem, an interjection of terror, grief &c., which is continually written in place of em, as Asin. 335 and 431. Only the best MSS. like A and the Bembine of Terence preserve em.

1103. unum curriculum face, 'make one heat of it,' i.e. run on without stopping till you get there. Curriculum, lit. 'a running' as here, is generally used as a modal abl. with currere, uenire, adferre &c. = 'at full speed,' as Epid. 14 nam ut apud portum te conspexi, curriculo ocepi sequi. The mention of the Piraeus here is the only definite proof in the play itself that Athens was the scene of the original. But it is a well-known rule that Athens is always the scene unless the reverse is expressly stated in the Prologue, as Amph. 97, Rud. 32.

1105. Sagarionem. Sagario is the slave in charge on the ship. Stasimus is to order him to see that the goods are duly landed as directed, and he is to go with him (simul).

1107. portorium, see on v. 794.

1108. cito ambula, 'go quickly.' Ambula is used of quite short distances, so that sometimes it is little more than abi. Bene ambula = 'bon voyage,' as Asin. 108 i, bene ambula, Capt. 900 bene ambula et redambula, and when a person returns bene ambulasti? or bene ambulatumst? The MSS. give BC moracii, D moratii: morae cito is Ritschl's, Taubmann suggests i, i ambula like uise specta &c., but cf. Pseud. 920 ambula ergo cito.

1109. illic sum atque hic sum, 'I am there and lo! I am here again,' i.e. I shall be back in no time, cf. Amph. 969 iam hic ero, quom illic censebis esse me, Pers. 190 sed ita nolo te ire, ut domi sis, quom ego te esse illi censeam.

Charmides follows Callicles into the house.

1110. hic, pointing to Callicles' retreating figure. Stasimus has heard enough to divine the truth.

1112, 1113. These two lines are disordered and incomplete in the MSS. The arrangement in the text with the conjectural supplement of v. 1113 comes from Hermann and Ritschl. The lines as given afford the required sense and may be taken as substantially what Plautus wrote.

1114. But before this line something must be lost. Stasimus has just said that Callicles has never swerved from his loyalty, although he has incurred many a hardship on account of the property and children of the absent Charmides. He might then conclude 'But still in spite of all he keeps faith.' The line we have means more than this. Unus cannot be thus accounted for. Leo gives the kind of line that must have preceded this line, atque omnes homines esse dixi perfidos, then v. 1114 is in place; 'and yet I said that all men were faithless, but Callicles, I fancy, if no one else, keeps faith.' Omnes perfidos gives the required antithesis for hic unus servat fidem.

Exit Stasimus to the Harbour (left).

Some little time is supposed to intervene between this scene and the next. The news of Charmides' return has become known, the promised explanation has been given by Callicles (v. 1137).

The interval is filled up by the tibicen. See on v. 601.

ACT V. SCENE I (1115—1124). Enter Lysiteles in great delight at the news of Charmides' return, and his own certainty of obtaining his daughter's hand in marriage.

Metres: vv. 1115—1119 Anapaestic Dimeters, a suitable vehicle for Lysiteles' joy and excitement,—then to the end of the play Septenarian Trochaics.

1115. hic homo, pointing to himself, ὁδε ἀνὴρ. praecipuos is equivalent to a superlative and, as if it were a superlative, is followed by the gen. 'Yours truly is the foremost of all men.' Some editors transpose the order of the words omnium hominum, but Brix shews (Kritischer Anhang) that (except at the conclusion of one verse Men. 1053), omnes homines, omnes mortales is the invariable order. Omnium is dissyllabic by synizesis, as gaudium v. 1116, gaudiis and gaudium v. 1119.

1116. antepotens, a grand-sounding word = potens ante alios, as if he were a king, 'most mighty.'

1117. ita commoda quae cupio eueniunt = ita quae cupio eueniunt commoda, for commoda is part of the predicate, 'so completely does all I wish fall out as I would have it.'

1118. quod ago adsequitur, subest, subsequitur. The line has been impugned as a gloss on the previous line, and as wrongly separating the two lines ita...ita. But it is too good for a gloss, and Leo's note makes its point quite clear, 'uocatum accurrit, prope est, pedibus adhaeret (quasi canis).' 'The object of my aims follows at my call, comes to my hand and follows at my heels.' The assonance adsequitur, subest, subsequitur is quite more Plautino, as Pers. 331 supersit, suppetat, superstitet.

1119. suppeditat = suppetit, 'is supplied to,' 'is heaped upon.' Cf. v. 57 and Asin. 423 non queo labori suppeditare.

1121. peregre. See on v. 149.

1122. ut quae cum eius filio egi, ei rei fundus pater sit potior, lit. 'in order that, as to the things I have arranged with his son, for that matter the father may be a better guarantor,' i.e. 'that I may have the fuller authorisation of the father for the arrangement I made with the son.' quae, the neut. relative, followed by ei rei, as Mil. 765 id quod agitur, huic rei primum praeuorti decet, Pers. 393 si hoc adcurassis lepide, quoi rei operam damus, Poen. 815 quando id, quoi rei operam dedimus, impetrauimus. fundus = auctor, 'guarantor,' as populus legis fundus, so Cic. pro Balb. 19, where see Dr Reid's note.

eo <quantum potest>, the supplement is Leo's. quantum potest, 'as fast as possible,' as v. 765. Niemeyer suggests eo <intro nunciam>.

SCENE 2 (1125—1189). The two old gentlemen come out of the house in conversation. Callicles has given an account of his stewardship, and Charmides has approved of all that he has done. Lysiteles listens to what they say, then v. 1150 presents himself to them. Lesbonicus is pardoned, and all is arranged.

Metre: Septenarian Trochaics continued.

1125. in terra, in Plautus always; in terris appears first in Cicero.

1126. quoi fides fidelitasque amicum erga aequiperet tuam, 'whose loyalty and leanness to a friend can rival yours.' Quoi is not dat., but gen. (perhaps properly loc.), as it is in quoiquoimodi, cuicuiusmodi, like illi modi, isti modi (Truc. 930). See Buecheler, Lat. Decl. p. 39; Luchs, Genetivbildung, p. 29. Erga, anastrophe of prep., as v. 822, and again v. 1128.

1127. exaedificauisset = ex aedibus eiecisset, sc. Lesbonicus (not in its ordinary sense, as in v. 132). The word is chosen here for the sake of the word-play exaedificauisset...ex aedibus, 'dishoused me from this house.'

apsque te foret, 'had it not been for you.' See on v. 832.

1128. bene feci. There is a double chiasmus in these lines: (1) benefeci...consului fideliter, (2) uideor meruisse laudem, culpa caruisse arbitror. Cf. vv. 431 and 701.

1130. nam beneficium homini proprium quod datur, pro suo sumpserit, 'a benefit which is given a man for himself (proprium), you will find he will spend as his own property.' MSS. prosumpserit, pro suo sumpserit Ussing; sumpserit, 'spend,' as v. 414. Boxhorn's conjecture, prosum or prorsum perit, is generally adopted, but 'quis sanus dixit beneficium, quod datur, prorsum perire?'

1131. quod datur utendum, id repetundi copias, quando uelis, 'what is only lent, one can ask back, when desired.' Callicles says 'the treasure was not given me, therefore I had no right to spend it; it was only lent me, therefore I deserve no particular credit for restoring it on demand from the rightful owner.' Strictly speaking, the trust of the treasure was a deposit, not a loan, but under the head of a loan it is distinguished from a free gift. Dono dare = proprium dare, 'to give')(dare utendum, 'to lend,' as Men. 657 sed ego illam non condonavi, sed sic utendam dedi. Leo rejects the couplet, I think on inadequate grounds.

1133. eum sororem despondisse suam in tam fortem familiam, 'that Lesbonicus has betrothed his sister into so wealthy a household.' Nonius, p. 306, explains fortem as diuitem et copiosam. Despondisse in, see v. 605.

1134. enim, 'indeed,' 'why to be sure.' See v. 705.

1135. occupauit, 'he has secured,' 'gained a footing in.' Nonius, p. 355, occupare est etiam inuenire, tenere uel possidere.

1136. sed maneam etiam, opinor, 'but let me wait still, I think' = 'but I think I had better wait a little longer.' Maneam is coniunctiuus adhortatiuus, 1st pers. sing., according to the Greek use, as Most. 849 mane sis uideam, Pers. 542 uideam modo, Ter. Phorm. 140 adeam, credo.

commodum, as v. 400.

1137. uah, 'bah' or 'bother,' an exclamation of vexation at his forgetfulness.

dudum, 'just now.' See v. 608.

1138. occessit obuiam, as Pseud. 250 occedamus hac obuiam.

1139. nimis pergraphicus. See on vv. 28 and 769.

mille nummum aureum, 'a thousand of gold pieces'; see on vv. 152 and 425.

1141. quem...eum, 'whom I did not know, nor have I ever seen him.' Both Greek and Latin dislike keeping up a succession of relatives, and when they have commenced with a relative, lapse in the next clause into the demonstrative, as Capt. 555 quibus insputari saluti fuit atque is profuit.

1145. neu qui rem ipsam posset intellegere, 'and might not in any way be enabled to understand the true state of the case, viz. that your treasure was in my possession.' Qui is abl. of the indefinite, as it is in siqui and numqui.

1146. me esse penes, anastrophe, as v. 822, and separated from its case, as Aul. 654 neque tui me quicquam inuenisti penes.

eum me lege populi patrum posceret, 'legally demand the treasure from me as being his father's property.' Eum = thensaurum, MSS. a me, but posco takes a double acc. and is never constructed by Plautus with a me and the like.

1147. scite edepol, sc. factum, see v. 127, accus. of exclamation, 'cleverly planned indeed!'

hoc, with commentust, 'hit upon this device.' Beneuolens, as v. 46.

1148. quin, 'nay, I,' like v. 932 quin discupio dicere, 'nay, I'm bursting to tell you.'

1152. di dent tibi, Lysiteles, quae uelis, cf. v. 436.

1153. non ego sum dignus salutis? 'don't I deserve a greeting?' Callicles claims a greeting as having been the girl's guardian and consponsor in the betrothal, and he is included as a member of the family by Lysiteles in v. 1163. Nonius, p. 497, quotes the line in the form dignus salutis, 'genetiuis positus pro ablatiuo.' The genitive is perhaps a Graecism and colloquial, but many adjectives that in later Latin take abl. only, in Plautus take gen. or abl., e.g. plenus, as Poen. 255 uenustatis plenum, and in the next line, Poen. 256 dignum Veneri pol (MSS.) should perhaps be dignum Veneris. Cf. Cic. ad Att. VIII. 15 A. 1 suscipe curam et cogitationem dignissimam tuae uirtutis. But Leo retains the MSS. salute dignus.

1154. tunica propior palliost. 'Ut tunica corpori propior quam pallium est, ita socerum ceteris amicis propiorem uideri dicit.' Ussing. A similar proverb is quoted from Theocr. XVI. 18 ἀπωτέρω ἢ γόνυ κνέμα, 'the calf is further off than the knee,' in the sense 'charity begins at home.'

1155. uortere, trans., as v. 502.

1156. nisi tu neuis, 'unless you have some objection.' Neuis for nonuis, v. 328, Curc. 82, Merc. 150, and often, ne being used as the old direct negative in a compound, as it is in nescio, neuter, nequaquam, &c. Cf. on v. 282.

1158. mille auri Philippum dotis, lit. 'a thousand of Philips of gold of a dowry' = 'a thousand Philippes d'or as a dowry.' Philippum is short gen. plur. after the substantivised mille, as v. 425 &c.; auri is descript. gen. after Philippum, 'Philips of gold,' = 'gold Philips,' and dotis is gen. after the whole expression mille Philippum auri, 'of dowry' = 'by way of dowry,' as Pers. 394 dabuntur dotis tibi inde sescenti logi, Ter. Haut. 838 porro haec (minae) talenta dotis adposcunt duo, 'two talents of dowry'; but for this gen. a predic. dat. is substituted, Ter. Haut. 942 me mea omnia bona doti dixisse illi, Roby, L. G. 1162.

dotem nil moror, as v. 297.

1159. si illa tibi placet, placenda dos quoquest quam dat tibi, 'if you like the girl, you must also like the dowry she brings you.' On the use of placenda see v. 264, Roby, L. G. II. lxxviii.

1160. quod uis non duces, nisi illud quod non uis feres, 'you shall not take home what you want, unless you carry with her what you don't want': quod uis = uxorem, quod non uis = dotem; ducere is technical, 'to lead home a wife,' and ducere refers to living persons, ferre to inanimate objects, like ἀγείν (φέρειν).

1161. ius hic orat, 'his suit is fair,' substituted for aequom orat, i.e. dicit, for the sake of the legal colour of ius which introduces impe-trabit te aduocato atque arbitro, 'he shall win his suit, with you to back and support him.' Aduocatus = 'witness'; it gets the sense of patronus only in much later Latin: arbiter, see v. 146. Lysiteles answers as if he were praetor, and the whole two sentences are a playful allusion to the praetor's court, as Epid. 25, TH. ius dicis (= (1) aequom oras, (2) administer justice). EP. me decet. TH., taking ius dicis in second sense, iam tu autem nobis praeturam geris? For the use of orare, a common meaning in old Latin, cf. Amph. prol. 34 nam iusta ab iustis iustus sum orator datus, Capt. 333 optimum atque aequissimum oras. Cf. also Stich. 726 bonum ius dicis: impetrare oportet qui aequom postulat.

1162. istac lege, 'on that condition,' 'on the terms you mention,' i.e. ut dotem accipiam. Sponden...spondeo...spondeo, see on v. 500, Curc. 674, Capt. 179.

1163. adfinēs, Callicles being included with Charmides; see v. 1153.

1164. atque edepol, 'and yet indeed'; the sense is adversative, and the two words are used together to pass to a new subject, as Curc. 571, Men. 385, Pers. 451 and 697, Pseud. 784, 1023 and 1050.

quas propter, see on v. 822. tamen = ὁμως, 'all the same,' i.e. 'although I let them pass and confirm the betrothal.'

suscensui, the genuine Latin form, sus- is for subs, as in sus-tineo, susque, deque &c.

1165. meum corrumpi quia perpressu's filium, 'because you allowed &c.' The construction follows Charmides' own word suscensui and is not affected by Lysiteles' quid ego feci?

1166. si id mea uoluntate factumst &c., 'if that was done with my consent, you have grounds for being angry with me.' A gap is marked after this line, the lost verses being supposed to contain Lysiteles' explanation. But this single line implies sufficiently his innocence, which we need not suppose him to be at pains to prove. The spectators are aware of the facts, they know that with the best will in the world Lysiteles could not have restrained Lesbonicus, and it is in accordance with Plautus' custom to cut short such explanations at the end of the play. See on v. 1097. Lysiteles feels quite easy about himself, he is anxious to plead for his friend and does so at once. The marks of the persons are disordered in the MSS. But there cannot be any reason for making Callicles speak with Charmides. Their explanation is over and done with. The interlocutor here must be Lysiteles. Ussing and Goetz and Schoell make the speaker Callicles, but Niemeyer and Leo are, I think, certainly right in assigning the dialogue on from v. 1163 to Lysiteles.

1167. sed sine me hoc aps te impetrare quod uolo = sed sine me impetrare abs te hoc quod uolo.

1168. ut ea missa facias omnia, i.e. uolo ut ea omnia missa facias, 'I want you to forgive it all.' MSS. missam, variously corrected missa and missum.

1169. quid quassas caput? a sign of violent emotion, whether anger or, as here, sorrow. Cf. Asin. 403, Merc. 600. Charmides is greatly moved, he does not 'shake his head' as we use the phrase, i.e. in the sense of refusing, as the next words shew.

1170. quom ille itast ut esse nolo, cf. vv. 46 and 307. In accordance with v. 307 Ritschl inserts eum before esse. On quom see v. 617.

1171. leuiorem, 'have little weight,' 'have not much influence with me.' Cf. v. 684.

1173. miserumst male promerita, ut merita sunt, si ulcisci non licet, 'it is a wretched thing if one cannot punish ill deserts, as they deserve.'

1174. Lysiteles goes up to the door of the house and knocks. Lesbonicus is in his posticulum, to which access from the stage is supposed to be through the street-door of the house. See on v. 1085. But being in the posticulum he knows nothing of his father's arrival or subsequent events.

aperite hoc, as v. 870.

1175. ita subitumst, propere quod eum conuentum uolo, 'it is such pressing business, on which I wish to see him at once.' Subitumst or res subitast, 'it is a pressing emergency,' as Curc. 302 ita res subitast: celeriter mi hoc homine conuentost opus, Aul. 272 subitumst nimis, Mil. 225 hanc rem age: res subitariast, Pers. 585 si tibi subiti nil est, tantumdemst mihi.

1176. Lesbonicus comes out in answer to the summons. Some editors begin a new scene with his appearance, but the MSS. join what follows with the foregoing scene, and B gives the name of Lesbonicus with the other speakers v. 1125.

subito is rightly bracketed by Guietus.

1177. satine salue? 'is all well with you?' As the terminations e and ae are hardly distinguished in the MSS. it is easy to read here satine saluae? sc. res, 'is all well?' a form of polite enquiry that occurs Liv. I. 58. 7, III. 26, X. 18; but in the other passages of Plautus, Men. 776, Stich. 10, clearly the adv. is used, as also Ter. Eun. 978. And the adv. goes better with the answer recte. Satine salue? then = satine salue agitur? to which the reply is recte (agitur) 'it's all right,' recte being applied to health as v. 50, but also doubtless retaining its usual force as an evasive answer, intended to prevent any further enquiries. So Ter. Haut. 518 quid tu istic (sc. agis)? Recte equidem, 'I'm all right,' Ad. 652 Mi. quid est? AE. nil: recte: perge. So Lysiteles goes on at once to his news.

1181. si quid tibi, pater, laboris— The sentence is cut short by Charmides' eagerness to relieve his son's fears. It would be in full si quid tibi laboris euenit, nollem (factum), 'if any trouble has befallen you, I'm sorry for it,' as Ter. Haut. 82 si quid laboris, nollem. Nollem is a polite expression of regret, implying that the speaker would gladly put things straight if only he could.

1182. 'All's well that ends well.' Charmides has come back safe and prosperous, and is well satisfied to let his troubles rest—all he wants now is his son's reformation.

Ritschl marks a gap here and supplies a couple of lines to shew what he thinks is here required. But the arrangement that Lesbonicus shall be married to Callicles' daughter has been concluded between the fathers indoors. Charmides merely announces it.

1183. haec tibi pactast Callicli filia. This is a syllable short. We may correct by using another form of the gen. Calliclai, like Charmidai v. 359, or Callicletis on the analogy of Pericletis and Strato- cletis, forms attested by Charisius, p. 132. But as Callicli is the regular Plautine gen. (v. 744) it is simplest with Hermann to insert huius after Callicli. Haec and huius are then both used δεικτικῶς, haec pointing to the house where the girl is, huius to Callicles, who stands by Charmides' side.

1184. iubebis, sc. ducere.

1185. una goes with miseria, 'one affliction is quite enough for one man.' This does not sound complimentary to Mrs Charmides, who is not mentioned in the play, perhaps because her husband has had no chance to jest about her, as Callicles and Megaronides had done about their wives v. 51 ff.

adfatis is ad and the acc. of an old noun fatīs, 'weariness,' like satis, 'abundance,' forming an adv. like ad-modum. See Poen. 534 ubi bibas, edas de alieno quantum uelis usque ad fatim; in Men. 457 adfatis hominum, 'there are plenty of men,' the noun-force of fatim is also clearly seen.

1186. parumst, 'it is too little.' We say 'it would be too little,' but the Latin idiom is est, as longum est, inscitia est, luxuria est &c.

1187. temperabo, sc. mihi.

dicis, si facies modo. The old contrast between promise and performance, λόγῳ...ἔργῳ: si modo or modo si, 'if only,' almost = utinam, as Capt. 996 quod male feci crucior: modo si infectum fieri possiet.

1188. optumumst, see v. 52. Licet 'assentientis' is apparently a gloss on optumumst incorporated into the text. Optumumst, 'capital,' gives Charmides' assent to the marriage of Lysiteles.

1189. tu, turning to Lesbonicus, '(Lysiteles is to be married to-morrow:) do you be ready to take home your bride the next day.' 'Peren-die, 'the day after to-morrow,' is connected with the Oscan perum, 'without' (originally 'beyond,' cf. Gk. πέρα), of the phrase perum dolom mallom = sine dolo malo, and means literally 'on the beyond day.' Lindsay, L. L. p. 560.

Ω. The play like all the Plautine plays ends with a request for applause. That request is made in the single word plaudite here, Mil. and Poen.; in Rud. plausum date; in Curc. spectatores, plaudite; in Amph., Pers., Men., Most., Stich., Truc. a whole line; in Asin., Bacch., Capt., Epid., Pseud. &c. several lines. Terence has Plaudite or uos ualete et plaudite. The belief that there was a special Cantor who made this request is based upon Horace's lines A. P. 154 si plausoris eges aulaea manentis et usque | sessuri donec cantor 'uos plaudite' dicat, with Bentley's theory that Ω which is found in the MSS. of Terence and the Trinummus

—in B only—was a corruption of CA, i.e. cantor. But the mark is a character mark and means the last speaker. The characters are named in the order in which they appear. In this play A = Megaronides, B = Callicles, Γ = Lysiteles, Δ = Philto, E = Lesbonicus, H = Stasimus, Θ = Charmides and X = Sycophanta. In all probability the last word or words were delivered, not by a special Cantor, but by one of the actors then on the stage in the name of the rest. Probably one actor spoke in the name of the rest, even when, as in Asin., Capt., Epid., the closing lines are assigned to the whole troupe (grex or caterua).

It is characteristic of Plautus that the play is quickly hurried to its conclusion. The expositio and the inuolutio are full and careful, the euolutio is very rapid. It begins only v. 1093, and less than one hundred lines serve to end the play.

INDEX TO NOTES.

The numbers refer to the lines of the play commented on in the notes.

- ā in nom. of 1st decl., 251
- a meo primo nomine, 885
- ab re, 238
- abhibendus atque abstandus, 264
- abi, 830
- absque, 832
- abstract nouns in plur., 36, 490
- acc. adv., 35, 67, 787
- acc. anticipatory, 118
- acc. double, 96
- acc. exclamatory, 128, 138, 501, 592, 936, 1013, 1147
- acc. plur. in -is, 29
- Acheruns, 493
- ad, 723, 874, 921
- adeo, 141, 181
- adesurire, 169
- adfatis, 1185
- adfinis, 331
- ad frugem, 118
- ad incitas, 537
- adjective and adverb, 268
- admodum, 366
- aduorsum quam, 176
- age siquid agis, 981
- agitandumst uigilias, 869
- ain tandem? 987
- alii = ceteri, 944
- aliquantum, 517, 625
- Alliteration, 27, 57, 237, 365, 658, 669, 821, 850, 1088
- ambula, 1108
- Anastrophe, 822, 1126, 1146
- angina, 540
- animi causa, 334
- antidit, 546
- Antimeria, 171
- Antiptosis, 373, 698, 1100
- antiquus, 72, 381
- Aorist forms, 41, 60, 188, 221, 384, 627, 722, 743
- apage, 258
- aperite hoc, 870
- apparere, comparere, 414, 418
- arbitr, 146
- arcano, 518
- Argumentum, Arg. 1, 16
- aspellere, 672
- Asyndeton, 210, 242, 285, 302, 317, 821
- atque, 746, 828, 910
- atque equidem, 611
- attraction, 8, 18, 20, 137, 714, 985
- auctor, 107
- aufer ridicularia, 66
- aurum, 252
- auscultare with dat. and acc., 662
- ballista, 668
- barbare, 19
- basilicus, 1030
- belua, 952
- bene est, 52
- bene facis &c., 384
- beneuolens, 46
- bono publico, 220
- bonus, 272
- cacula, 721
- Campans, 545
- canes, 170
- cantare, 287
- cantrices, 253
- cēdō, 968
- Cercopia, 928
- cernitur, 478
- certa res est, certum est, 270
- Chiasmus, 431, 489, 701, 1129
- choragus, 858
- circumducere, 859
- circumspicere trans., 146
- cistellatrices, 253
- cluere, 309, 496
- columen, 85
- columis, 743
- comedis, 102
- comest, 248
- commodum, 400

- concenturiare, 1002
 conciliare, 856
 concinnare, 684 conclaue, 151
 condicio, 159
 confidens, 201
 conlocare, 159, 735
 conlutulentare, 692
 contra, 826
 co-ordination of contrasted clauses, 292, 368, 646, 657, 692, 832
 copia, 135
 coquo, 225
 cottabus, 1011
 credere, 61, 115
 creduam, 606
 cruricrepidae, 1021
 cunila, 935
 cupio with gen., 842
 cuppes, 239
 curare with dat., 1057
 curriculum, 1103

 damnum, 219
 dare in, 605
 dare uerba, 60 dare utendum, 1131
 dative, 918
 dative in ē, 117
 dative for gen., 81, 177, 204
 dative predicative, 320, 356, 421, 586, 628, 632
 dative of relative, 558
 de, 215
 debere, 893
 dehibere, 426
 deiuuare, 344
 demonstrative attracted, 137, 985 dependere, 427
 depromere, 756, 944
 dicta docta &c., 77, 380
 directus, 457
 dignus salutis, 1153
 disconducit, 930
 disque tulissent, 833
 ditiae, 682
 dolo, 90
 domi, 842, 1027
 dormire, dormitator, 862, 984 double protasis, 218, 471, 837 dramatic contests at Rome, 705 ducere, 251, 1160

 dudum, 608
 duim &c., 436
 dum, 98, 146, 166
 durare, 290

 eadem, 581
 eampse, 800
 ecbibere, 248
 ecce, eccere, 386
 eccillum &c., 622
 edim, 474
 eho an, 55, 934
 Ellipsis, 116, 233, 628, 705
 em, 3, 185, 923
 emere meliust quoi imperes, 1061
 enim, 61, 705
 enumquam, 590
 epithecā, 1025
 equidem, 353, 611
 ergo igitur, 756
 erilis filius, 602
 est &c. omitted, 127, 209, 535
 etiam? 514
 euge, 705
 euortere, 616
 ex re and in rem, 238, 628
 exaedificare, 132, 1127
 exercitor, 226
 expectatus, 574
 expedire, 236
 exsequi, 282
 exsignare, 655

 fac, 174
 facere with dat. and abl., 157, 405, 822 factio, 452
 factius, 397
 familia, 251
 faxim, 221
 faxo, 60
 ferentarius, 456
 ferriteri, 1021
 fide (dat.), 117
 fides, 1048
 figura etymologica, 77, 302, 984, 1008
 fortis, 1133

- fourth-conjug. imperf. and fut., 657
 frugalior, 610
 frugi, 320
 fuas, fuat &c., 267
 fugitiuus, 1027
 fulmentae, 720
 fundus, 1122
 fungi, 1
 fut. perf., 60, 625, 655, 722

 gen. in -ai, 359
 gen. 4th decl. in -i, 250
 gen. plur. short, 241
 gerrae, 760
 gerund and gerundive, 264, 869, 1159 graphice, graphicus, 767, 1024 gratiam and grates habere &c., 659, 821
 gratiam facere, 293
 Greek words, 187, 258, 418, 625, 669, 705, 767, 1025 guttur, 1014

 habere=habitare, 193 haec=hae, 390
 harpago, 239
 hau and haud, 233
 hercle qui, 464
 hereditas sine sacris, 484
 hic δεικτικῶς, 172, 1110, 1115
 hic homo, 1115
 Hiluricus, 852
 hisce nom. plur., 878
 hiulca gens, 286
 hoc sc. ostium, 870
 hoc=huc, 66
 hoc aetatis, 787
 honor and honos, 482, 644, 663, 697, 1035 horiola, 942
 hostis, 102
 Hyperbaton, 457

 ibidem traho, 203
 id, 405, 850
 ilico, 608
 illi=illic, 530
 imperf. for pluperf. subj., 115, 133 imperf. like scibam, 657
 impos, 131
 in aetate, 24
 inbuere, 294
 inconciliare, 136
 indipisci, 224
 ineuscheme, 625
 infin. after adj., 76
 infin. after verbs, 162, 1015
 infin. dep. and pass. in -ier, 86 ingenium, 303
 in labris primoribus, 910
 immoenis and inmunis, 24, 350
 inriguus, 31
 insanum, 673
 insciens, 215
 inscribere, 168
 interfieri, 532
 interim, 30
 intermortuus, 29
 ipse and ipsus, 112, 800
 ipsissimus, 988
 irregular sequence, 15, 163
 istic erit, 923
 ita, 375, 544, 658
 ita esse ut, 46
 ita me di ament &c., 447, 1024
 ita ut occepi, 897
 itane? 642
 iurator, 872 ius hic orat, 1161
 iuxillum, 888
 iuxta, 197

 Lar, 39
 latebricolae, 240
 latro, latrocinari, 599
 lepidus, 390
 leuis, 1172
 licet, 372
 locative, 102, 149, 165, 454

 mactare, 993
 magis, mage, 1053
 mala res, malum, 63, 219, 554, 1045 māla, 475
 mancipio, 421
 manifestarius, 895
 mea causa, 979

- med, 230
 meditatús, 817
 meumst, 123, 445
 me uide, 808
 mihimet, 71
 mille, 425, 954, 1158
 mirimodis, 931
 mirum quin and mirum ni, 495
 moror, 297
 morus, 669
 multare, 708
 multipotens, 820
 mutuom, 728

 nam, 25, 83
 namque, 61, 731
 nē (confirmatiua), 62, 433, 634, 760, 952
 nē (interrogatiua), 62, 69, 634
 ne enclitic, 186, 1095
 -ne or satin=nonne? 129, 136, 925
 necullus, 282
 nempe, 196, 328
 nequiquam, 440
 nescioquis, 623
 neuis, 1156
 nil moror, 297
 nimium and nimio, 28, 34, 311, 931 nisi=only, 233, 938
 nisi si, 474
 nomen, 889
 nomen facere &c. with dat. 8 non-deponent forms, 422, 641, 863 non enim, 705
 nonne? 789
 non sisti potest, 720 non temere, 740
 noui aediles, 990
 noxia, 23
 nubere, Arg. 9
 nudius, 727
 nugacissime, 819
 nugae, 396
 nullus, 606
 numerare, 965
 nummus, 152, 843, 962
 numquid uis? 192
 nunc, 430
 nunciam, 3

 o in old Latin for u 535
 obiurigare, 68
 obliuisci, 1017
 obnoxiosus, 1036
 obrepere, 61, 974
 occlusti, 188
 oculicrepidæ, 1021
 odio, 632
 oe=u, 24
 οἷχεται, 418
 olim, 523
 omnis=ullus, 338
 operam dare, 5, 651
 opino, 422
 optative forms, 6, 102, 267, 339, 384, 436, 474, 606, 627, 994
 optume est and optimum est, 52, 1188 optimum est ut, 486
 opus, 584, 887
 ornamenta, 858
 os sublinere, 558
 -osus, 37

 paenitet, 320
 papauer, 410
 par, 469
 παρὰ προσδοκίαν, 723, 980, 992
 Parataxis, 60, 174, 221, 578
 Parenthesis, 115, 124, 1018
 parsi, 316
 παῖσαι, 187
 Pax, 889
 pectus, 90
 peculium, 434
 peiurius, 201
 pendentem ferire, 247
 penetrare, 276
 peregre, 149, 596
 perendie, 1189
 perf. short forms, 188, 743
 perge proloqui, 162
 permanascere, 155
 perpluere, 323
 pessum dare, 165
 Philippus, 152, 954, 1158
 placenda, 1159
 Plautine words—conducibilis, 25;
 remora, 38; turpilucricupidus, 100; permanascere, 155; con-

- fidentiloquus and mendaciloquus, 200; oclclior, 221; stultiloquentia, 221; blandiloquentulus, 239; faecus, 297; deiuuare, 344; utilis, 748; spurcificus, 826; disconducit, 930; ipsissimus, 988; recharmidare, 977; thermopotare, 1014
 Pleonasm, 130, 182, 274, 835, 1076, 1096
 plerique omnes, 29
 plures, 291
 plus, 51
 pone te latebis, 663
 porro, 162
 portorium, portitores, 794
 poscere, Arg., 5, 384
 posui, 145
 posticulum, 194
 postulare, 237
 postid, 529
 postquam...post, 416
 potis, pote &c., 352, 569, 628
 praecipitare, 265
 praemandare, 335
 pres. subj. after past tense, 15
 pres. instead of fut. infin., 5, 736 pres. subj., Plautine, 58, 441 primarius, 746
 primumdum, 98
 probare, 1049
 pro di immortales, 160
 proinde, 65
 Prologus, 1 promerere, 641
 promus, promere, 81
 pronouns, strengthened, 71
 propemodum, 615
 propterea, 80
 prostratus, 109
 prosus, 730
 prouincia, 190
 publice, 548
 pudere, 345, 661
 pudicus, 697, 946
 puer, 43
 qua...qua, 1044
 quam dudum? 608
 quam magis...minus, 861
 quamuis, 380, 554, 797
 quantum potest, 765
 quasi=quamsi, 265 quasi dicas, 891
 quassare caput, 1169
 -que, 111
 qui (abl.), 14, 77, 120, 129, 135, 163, 354, 464, 561, 637, 653, 905, 1050, 1145 qui indef., 257, 305, 439, 1005
 quia, 290, 395
 quid ago? 1062
 quid ais? 193, 641, 892
 quid id est and quid est? 630 quid istic? 573
 quid iam? 1080 quid nunc? 468
 quid tecum? 567
 quid tibi interpellatio est? 709
 quid tu? 116
 quidam, 342
 quidem, 971
 quidum? 166
 quidquid, 218, 881
 quin interrogative, 360
 quintus, 524
 quiquidem, 336, 552, 953
 quod adv. acc., 35
 quod amat, 242
 quod fuit, quod non fuit, 360
 quoi, 558, 1126
 quouis possessive, 45
 quom, 617, 733, 823
 quom extemplo, 242
 quoniam, 14, 112, 149
 quoque etiam, 1048
 recharmidare, 977
 recipere, 194
 recte, rectius, 50
 recte facis, 197
 reddere, 133
 reddere actum, 819
 refert, 319
 relicuus, 14
 remora, 38
 repperi, 389
 reprehendere, 624
 rex reginae, 207
 ruere, 837
 rumor, 640

- ruri and rure, 166
 rursus &c., 182
 saeculum, 283
 saeuiter, 1060
 salillum, 492
 salsipotens, 820
 sane, 195
 sarta tecta, 317
 satine salue? 1177
 saxo salire, 265
 scilicet, 579
 scurra, 202
 se in composition, 79
 se omitted, 956
 sector zonarius, 862
 secus, 130
 sed, 16, 66, 547
 sed quid ais? 193
 sed quis hic est? 1006
 Seleucia, 112
 serio, 989
 seruassint, 384
 sescenti, 791
 sesqui-, 903
 sibi = ei, 156
 siem, sies, siet, 6
 si hercle &c., 457
 simitu, 223
 si quid eo fuerit, 157
 si quid uis, 517
 si...seu, 183
 sodes, sis &c. 244, 513
 solide, 850
 solus solum, 153
 spondere, 427, 502
 spurcificus, 826
 strenuosus, 1036
 Subj. short forms, 41
 subitumst, 1175
 suom sibi, 156
 superfit, 510 suppetere, 57
 suscensere, 1164
 suspicariet, 86
 Syncope, 68
 Synizesis, 38, 119, 242
 Syri, 542
 tam modo, 609
 tantillum, 60
 tantumst, 22
 te uolo, 516
 temperi, 910
 thermipolium, 1013
 thensaurus, Arg., 1
 tinnire, 1004
 tis, 343
 Tmesis, 833
 totidem litteris, 345
 totus, 171
 trapezita, 425
 trecenti, 791
 tribus uerbis, 791
 Trinummus, 20, 843
 tuas res tibi habeto, 266
 tum igitur, 676
 tunica pallio propior, 1154
 turpilucricupidus, 100
 ubi qui, 257
 uel, 655, 746
 uenerari, 40
 verbal nouns taking case, 709 uestiplica, 252
 uetus, 381
 uiaticum, 728
 uinum, 526
 uirtute, 346
 uisne? uin? 1091
 uiuere, 390
 unctor, 252
 uni (plur.), 166
 nociuos, 11
 uolturius, 101
 uorsoria, 1026
 uortere trans. and intrans., 500
 notare, 457
 usurpare, 846
 uti, 1, 827
 utqui, 637
 utrum...ne...an, 306
 z, 425, 862
 Ω, 1189

THE PITT PRESS SERIES.

COMPLETE LIST.

1. GREEK.

Author	Work	Editor	Price
Aeschylus	Prometheus Vincetus	Rackham	In the Press
Aristophanes	Aves—Plutus—Ranae	Green	3/6 each
„	Vespae	Graves	3/6
„	Nubes	„	In the Press
Demosthenes	Olynthiacs	Glover	2/6
Euripides	Heracleidae	Beck & Headlam	3/6
„	Hercules Furens	Gray & Hutchinson	2/-
„	Hippolytus	Hadley	2/-
„	Iphigeneia in Aulis	Headlam	2/6
„	Hecuba	Hadley	2/6
„	Alcestis	„	2/6
„	Orestes	Wedd	4/6
Herodotus	Book v	Shuckburgh	3/-
„	„ VI, VIII, IX	„	4/- each
„	„ VIII 1—90, IX 1—89	„	2/6 each
Homer	Odyssey IX, x	Edwards	2/6 each
„	„ XXI	„	2/-
„	Iliad VI, XXII, XXIII, XXIV	„	2/- each
Lucian	Somnium, Charon, etc.	Heitland	3/6
„	Menippus and Timon	Mackie	3/6
Plato	Apologia Socratis	Adam	3/6
„	Crito	„	2/6
„	Euthyphro	„	2/6
„	Protagoras	J. & A. M. Adam	4/6
Plutarch	Demosthenes	Holden	4/6
„	Gracchi	„	6/-
„	Nicias	„	5/-
„	Sulla	„	6/-
„	Timoleon	„	6/-
Sophocles	Oedipus Tyrannus	Jebb	4/6
Thucydides	Book III	Spratt	5/-
„	Book VII	Holden	5/-
Xenophon	Agésilas	Hailstone	2/6
„	Anabasis Vol. I. Text.	Pretor	3/-
„	„ Vol. II. Notes.	„	4/6
„	„ I, II	„	4/-
„	„ I, III, IV, V	„	2/- each
„	„ II, VI, VII	„	2/6 each
„	„ II	Edwards	1/6
„	„ III	„	1/6
„	Cyropaedeia I, II (2 vols.)	Holden	6/-
„	„ III, IV, V	„	5/-
„	„ VI, VII, VIII	„	5/-

2. LATIN.

Author	Work	Editor	Price
Caesar	De Bello Gallico
	Com. I, III, VI, VIII	Peskett	1/6 each
"	" II-III, and VII	"	2/- each
"	" I-III	"	3/-
"	" IV-V	"	1/6
"	De Bello Gallico 1 ch. 1-29	Shuckburgh	1/6
"	De Bello Civili. Com. I	Peskett	3/-
"	" " Com. III	"	In the Press
Cicero	Actio Prima in C. Verrem	Cowie	1/6
"	De Amicitia	Reid	3/6
"	De Senectute	"	3/6
"	Div. in Q. Caec. et Actio
	Prima in C. Verrem	Heitland & Cowie	3/-
"	Philippica Secunda	Peskett	3/6
"	Pro Archia Poeta	Reid	2/-
"	" Balbo	"	1/6
"	" Milone	"	2/6
"	" Murena	Heitland	3/-
"	" Plancio	Holden	4/6
"	" Sulla	Reid	3/6
"	Somnium Scipionis	Pearman	2/-
Cornelius Nepos	Miltiades, Themistocles, Aristides, Pausanias, Cimon	Shuckburgh	1/6
"	Hannibal, Cato, Atticus	"	1/6
"	Lysander, Alcibiades, Thrasybulus, Conon, Dion, Iphicrates,
	Chabrias	"	1/6
Horace	Epistles. Bk I	"	2/6
"	Odes and Epodes	Gow	5/-
"	Odes. Books I, III	"	2/- each
"	" Book II, IV	"	1/6 each
"	Epodes	"	1/6
Livy	Books IV, VI, IX, XXVII	Stephenson	2/6 each
"	" V	Whibley	2/6
"	" XXI, XXII	Dimsdale	2/6 each
Lucan	Pharsalia. Bk I	Heitland & Haskins	1/6
"	De Bello Civili. Bk VII	Postgate	2/-
Lucretius	Book v	Duff	2/-
Ovid	Fasti. Book VI	Sidgwick	1/6
"	Metamorphoses, Bk I	Dowdall	1/6
Plautus	Epidicus	Gray	3/-
"	Stichus	Fennell	2/6
"	Trinummus	Gray	3/6
Quintus Curtius	Alexander in India	Heitland & Raven	3/6
Tacitus	Agricola and Germania	Stephenson	3/-
"	Hist. Bk I	Davies	2/6
Terence	Hautontimorumenos	Gray	3/-
Vergil	Aeneid I to XII	Sidgwick	1/6 each
"	Bucolics	"	1/6
"	Georgics I, II, and III, IV	"	2/- each
"	Complete Works, Vol. I, Text	"	3/6
"	" " Vol. II, Notes	"	4/6

3. FRENCH.

Author	Work	Editor	Price
About	Le Roi des Montagnes	Ropes	2/-
Biart	Quand j'étais petit, Pts I, II	Boëlle	2/- each
Cornelle	La Suite du Menteur	Masson	2/-
"	Polyeucte	Braunholtz	2/-
De Bonnechose	Lazare Hoche	Colbeck	2/-
"	Bertrand du Guesclin	Leathes	2/-
"	" Part II (With Vocabulary)	"	1/6
Delavigne	Louis XI	Eve	2/-
"	Les Enfants d'Edouard	"	2/-
D'Harleville	Le Vieux Célibataire	Masson	2/-
De Lamartine	Jeanne d'Arc	Clapin & Ropes	1/6
De Vigny	La Canne de Jonc	Eve	1/6
Dumas	La Fortune de D'Artagnan	Ropes	2/-
Erckmann-Chatrian	La Guerre	Clapin	3/-
Guizot	Discours sur l'Histoire de la Révolution d'Angleterre	Eve	2/6
Lemercier	Frédégonde et Brunehaut	Masson	2/-
Mme de Staël	Le Directoire	Masson & Prothero	2/-
"	Dix Années d'Exil	"	2/-
Merimée	Colomba	Ropes	2/-
Michellet	Louis XI & Charles the Bold	"	2/6
Molière	Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme	Clapin	1/6
"	L'École des Femmes	Saintsbury	2/6
"	Les Précieuses ridicules	Braunholtz	2/-
"	" (Abridged Edition)	"	1/-
"	Le Misanthrope	"	2/6
"	L'Avare	"	2/6
Perrault	Fairy Tales	Rippmann	1/6
Piron	La Métromanie	Masson	2/-
Ponsard	Charlotte Corday	Ropes	2/-
Racine	Les Plaideurs	Braunholtz	2/-
"	" (Abridged Edition)	"	1/-
Sainte-Beuve	M. Daru. (Causeries du Lundi, Vol. IX)	Masson	2/-
Saintine	Picciola	Clapin	2/-
Scribe & Legouvé	Bataille de Dames	Bull	2/-
Scribe	Le Verre d'Eau	Colbeck	2/-
Sédaine	Le Philosophe sans le savoir	Bull	2/-
Souvestre	Un Philosophe sous les Toits	Eve	2/-
"	Le Serf & Le Chevrier de Lorraine	Ropes	2/-
"	Le Serf (With Vocabulary)	"	1/6
Thierry	Lettres sur l'histoire de France (XIII—XXIV)	Masson & Prothero	2/6
"	Récits des Temps Mérovingiens, I—III	Masson & Ropes	3/-
Villemain	Lascaris ou les Grecs du xv ^e Siècle	Masson	2/-
Voltaire	Histoire du Siècle de Louis XIV, Pt I, Ch. I—XIII	Masson & Prothero	2/6
"	Pt II, Ch. XIV—XXIV	" "	2/6
"	Pt III, Ch. XXV—end	" "	2/6
Xavier de Maistre	{ La Jeune Sibérienne. Le } { Lépreux de la Cité d'Aoste }	Masson	1/6

4. GERMAN.

Author	Work	Editor	Price
	Ballads on German History	Wagner	2/-
Benedix	Dr Wespe	Breul	3/-
Freytag	Der Staat Friedrichs des Grossen	Wagner	2/-
	German Dactylic Poetry	"	3/-
Goethe	Knabenjahre (1749—1761)	Wagner & Cartmell	2/-
	Hermann und Dorothea	" "	3/6
"	Iphigenie	Breul	In the Press
Grimm	Selected Tales	Rippmann	3/-
Gutzkow	Zopf und Schwert	Wolstenholme	3/6
Hackländer	Der geheime Agent	E. L. Milner Barry	3/-
Hauff	Das Bild des Kaisers	Breul	3/-
"	Das Wirthshaus im Spessart	Schlottmann & Cartmell	3/-
"	Die Karavane	Schlottmann	3/-
Immermann	Der Oberhof	Wagner	3/-
Klee	Die deutschen Heldensagen	Wolstenholme	3/-
Kohlrausch	Das Jahr 1813	"	2/-
Lessing	Minna von Barnhelm	Wolstenholme	In the Press
Lessing & Gellert	Selected Fables	Breul	3/-
Mendelssohn	Selected Letters	Sime	3/-
Raumer	Der erste Kreuzzug	Wagner	2/-
Riehl	Culturgeschichtliche Novellen	Wolstenholme	3/-
"	Die Ganerben & Die Ge- rechtigkeit Gottes	"	3/-
Schiller	Wilhelm Tell	Breul	2/6
"	" (Abridged Edition)	"	1/6
"	Geschichte des dreissigjäh- rigen Kriegs Book III.	"	3/-
"	Maria Stuart	"	3/6
"	Wallenstein I. (Lager and Piccolomini)	"	3/6
"	Wallenstein II. (Tod)	"	3/6
Uhland	Ernst, Herzog von Schwaben	Wolstenholme	3/6

5. ENGLISH.

Author	Work	Editor	Price
Bacon	History of the Reign of King Henry VII	Lumby	3/-
"	Essays	West	3/6 & 5/-
Cowley	Essays	Lumby	4/-
Earle	Microcosmography	West
Gray	Poems	Tovey	Immediately 3/-
Macaulay	Lord Clive	Innes	In the Press 1/6
"	Warren Hastings	"	1/6
"	William Pitt and Earl of Chatham	"	2/6
Mayor	A Sketch of Ancient Philoso- phy from Thales to Cicero		3/6
More	History of King Richard III	Lumby	3/6
"	Utopia	"	3/6
Milton	Arcades and Comus	Verity	3/-
"	Ode on the Nativity, L'Alle- gro, Il Penseroso & Lycidas	"	2/6
"	Samson Agonistes	"	2/6
"	Paradise Lost, Bks I, II	"	2/-
"	" Bks III, IV	"	2/-
"	" Bks V, VI	"	2/-
"	" Bks VII, VIII	"	2/-
"	" Bks IX, X	"	2/-
"	" Bks XI, XII	"	2/-
Pope	Essay on Criticism	West	2/-
Scott	Marmion	Masterman	2/6
"	Lady of the Lake	"	2/6
"	Lay of the last Minstrel	Flather	2/-
"	Legend of Montrose	Simpson	2/6
Shakespeare	A Midsummer-Night's Dream	Verity	1/6
"	Twelfth Night	"	1/6
"	Julius Caesar	"	1/6
"	The Tempest	"	1/6
"	King Lear	"	1/6
"	Merchant of Venice	"	In the Press
Shakespeare & Fletcher	Two Noble Kinsmen	Skeat	3/6
Sidney	An Apologie for Poetrie	Shuckburgh	3/-
Wallace	Outlines of the Philosophy of Aristotle		4/6
West	Elements of English Grammar		2/6
"	English Grammar for Beginners		1/-
Carlos	Short History of British India		1/-
Mill	Elementary Commercial Geography		1/6
Bartholomew	Atlas of Commercial Geography		3/-
Robinson	Church Catechism Explained		2/-

6. EDUCATIONAL SCIENCE.

Author	Work	Editor	Price
Colbeck	Lectures on the Teaching of Modern Languages		2/-
Comenius	Life and Educational Works	Laurie	3/6
	Three Lectures on the Practice of Education
Eve	I. On Marking	} 1 Vol.	2/-
Sidgwick	II. On Stimulus
Abbott	III. On the teaching of Latin Verse Composition
Farrar	General Aims of the Teacher	} 1 Vol.	1/6
Poole	Form Management
Locke	Thoughts on Education	Quick	3/6
Milton	Tractate on Education	Browning	2/-
Sidgwick	On Stimulus		1/-
Thring	Theory and Practice of Teaching		4/6

7. MATHEMATICS.

Ball	Elementary Algebra		4/6
Euclid	Books I—VI, XI, XII	Taylor	5/-
"	Books I—VI	"	4/-
"	Books I—IV	"	3/-
	Also separately
"	Books I, & II; III, & IV; V, & VI; XI, & XII	1/6 each
"	Solutions to Exercises in Taylor's Euclid	W. W. Taylor	10/6
	And separately
"	Solutions to Bks I—IV	"	6/-
"	Solutions to Books VI. XI	"	6/-
Hobson & Jessop	Elementary Plane Trigonometry		4/6
Loney	Elements of Statics and Dynamics		7/6
	Part I. Elements of Statics		4/6
	" II. Elements of Dynamics		3/6
"	Solutions of Examples, Statics and Dynamics		7/6
"	Mechanics and Hydrostatics		4/6
Smith, C.	Arithmetic for Schools, with or without answers		3/6
"	Part I. Chapters I—VIII. Elementary, with or without answers		2/-
"	Part II. Chapters IX—XX, with or without answers		2/-
Hale, G.	Key to Smith's Arithmetic		7/6

LONDON: C. J. CLAY AND SONS,
CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE,
AVE MARIA LANE.
GLASGOW: 263, ARGYLE STREET.

The Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges.

GENERAL EDITORS :

J. J. S. PEROWNE, D.D., BISHOP OF WORCESTER,
A. F. KIRKPATRICK, D.D., REGIUS PROFESSOR OF HEBREW.

Extra Fcap. 8vo. cloth, with Maps when required.

- Book of Joshua. Rev. G. F. MACLEAR, D.D. 2s. 6d.
Book of Judges. Rev. J. J. LIAS, M.A. 3s. 6d.
First Book of Samuel. Prof. KIRKPATRICK, D.D. 3s. 6d.
Second Book of Samuel. Prof. KIRKPATRICK, D.D. 3s. 6d.
First & Second Books of Kings. Prof. LUMBY, D.D. 3s. 6d. each.
Books of Ezra & Nehemiah. Prof. RYLE, D.D. 4s. 6d.
Book of Job. Prof. DAVIDSON, D.D. 5s.
Psalms. Book I. Prof. KIRKPATRICK, D.D. 3s. 6d.
Psalms. Books II and III. Prof. KIRKPATRICK, D.D. 3s. 6d.
Book of Ecclesiastes. Very Rev. E. H. PLUMPTRE, D.D. 5s.
Book of Isaiah. Chaps. I.—XXXIX. Rev. J. SKINNER, D.D. 4s.
— Chaps. XL.—LXVI. Rev. J. SKINNER, D.D. In the Press
Book of Jeremiah. Rev. A. W. STREANE, D.D. 4s. 6d.
Book of Ezekiel. Prof. DAVIDSON, D.D. 5s.
Book of Hosea. Rev. T. K. CHEYNE, M.A., D.D. 3s.
Books of Joel and Amos. Rev. S. R. DRIVER, D.D. 3s. 6d.
Books of Obadiah and Jonah. Arch. PEROWNE. 2s. 6d.
Book of Micah. Rev. T. K. CHEYNE, M.A., D.D. 1s. 6d.
Nahum, Habakkuk & Zephaniah. Prof. DAVIDSON, D.D. 3s.
Books of Haggai, Zechariah & Malachi. Arch. PEROWNE. 3s. 6d.
Book of Malachi. Archdeacon PEROWNE. 1s.
First Book of Maccabees. Rev. W. FAIRWEATHER and Rev. J. S. BLACK, LL.D. 3s. 6d.
Gospel according to St Matthew. Rev. A. CARR, M.A. 2s. 6d.
Gospel according to St Mark. Rev. G. F. MACLEAR, D.D. 2s. 6d.
Gospel acc. to St Luke. Very Rev. F. W. FARRAR, D.D. 4s. 6d.
Gospel according to St John. Rev. A. PLUMMER, D.D. 4s. 6d.
Acts of the Apostles. Prof. LUMBY, D.D. 4s. 6d.
Epistle to the Romans. Rev. H. C. G. MOULE, D.D. 3s. 6d.
First and Second Corinthians. Rev. J. J. LIAS, M.A. 2s. each.
Epistle to the Galatians. Rev. E. H. PEROWNE, D.D. 1s. 6d.
Epistle to the Ephesians. Rev. H. C. G. MOULE, D.D. 2s. 6d.
Epistle to the Philippians. Rev. H. C. G. MOULE, D.D. 2s. 6d.
Colossians and Philemon. Rev. H. C. G. MOULE, D.D. 2s.
Epistles to the Thessalonians. Rev. G. G. FINDLAY, B.A. 2s.
Epistles to Timothy & Titus. Rev. A. E. HUMPHREYS, M.A. 3s.
Epistle to the Hebrews. Very Rev. F. W. FARRAR, D.D. 3s. 6d.
Epistle of St James. Very Rev. E. H. PLUMPTRE, D.D. 1s. 6d.
St Peter and St Jude. Very Rev. E. H. PLUMPTRE, D.D. 2s. 6d.
Epistles of St John. Rev. A. PLUMMER, D.D. 3s. 6d.
Book of Revelation. Rev. W. H. SIMCOX, M.A. 3s.

Other Volumes Preparing.

LONDON : C. J. CLAY AND SONS,
CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE,
AVE MARIA LANE.

The Smaller Cambridge Bible for Schools.

Now Ready. With Maps. Price 1s. each volume.

- Book of Joshua. Rev. J. S. BLACK, LL.D.
Book of Judges. Rev. J. S. BLACK, LL.D.
First Book of Samuel. Prof. KIRKPATRICK, D.D.
Second Book of Samuel. Prof. KIRKPATRICK, D.D.
First Book of Kings. Prof. LUMBY, D.D.
Second Book of Kings. Prof. LUMBY, D.D.
Ezra & Nehemiah. Prof. RYLE, D.D.
Gospel according to St Matthew. Rev. A. CARR, M.A.
Gospel according to St Mark. Rev. G. F. MACLEAR, D.D.
Gospel according to St Luke. Very Rev. F. W. FARRAR, D.D.
Gospel according to St John. Rev. A. PLUMMER, D.D.
Acts of the Apostles. Prof. LUMBY, D.D.
-

The Cambridge Greek Testament for Schools and Colleges

GENERAL EDITOR: J. J. S. PEROWNE, D.D.

- Gospel according to St Matthew. Rev. A. CARR, M.A.
With 4 Maps. 4s. 6d.
Gospel according to St Mark. Rev. G. F. MACLEAR, D.D.
With 3 Maps. 4s. 6d.
Gospel according to St Luke. Very Rev. F. W. FARRAR.
With 4 Maps. 6s.
Gospel according to St John. Rev. A. PLUMMER, D.D.
With 4 Maps. 6s.
Acts of the Apostles. Prof. LUMBY, D.D. 4 Maps. 6s.
First Epistle to the Corinthians. Rev. J. J. LIAS, M.A. 3s.
Second Epistle to the Corinthians. Rev. J. J. LIAS, M.A. 3s.
Epistle to the Hebrews. Very Rev. F. W. FARRAR, D.D. 3s. 6d.
Epistles of St John. Rev. A. PLUMMER, D.D. 4s.

GENERAL EDITOR: Prof. J. A. ROBINSON, D.D.

- Epistle to the Philippians. Rev. H. C. G. MOULE, D.D. 2s. 6d.
Epistle of St James. Rev. A. CARR, M.A. 2s. 6d.
Pastoral Epistles. Rev. J. H. BERNARD, D.D. [In Preparation]
Book of Revelation. Rev. W. H. SIMCOX, M.A. 5s.
-

London: C. J. CLAY AND SONS,
CAMBRIDGE WAREHOUSE, AVE MARIA LANE.

Glasgow: 263, ARGYLE STREET.

Leipzig: F. A. BROCKHAUS.

New York: THE MACMILLAN COMPANY.

OR

—

PA 6568
T6
1897 cop.2

Plautus, Titus Maccius
T. Macci Plavti Trinummus

PLEASE DO NOT REMOVE CARDS OR SLIPS FROM THIS POCKET

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO LIBRARY

UTL AT DOWNSVIEW

D RANGE BAY SHLF POS ITEM C
39 14 08 01 10 001 6